CONCUBITUS [Pliny] (Lat.), n. m. $Ko^2n^2-ku^2b(ku^4b)^2t-u^3s(u^4s)$. From concubere, to lie together. Fr., congrès sexuel. Ger., Zusammenliegen, Beischlaf. It., coito. Sp., coito. Sexual intercourse.

CONCURRENZ (Ger.), n. $Ko^2n-kur-re^2ntz'$. The struggle of various micro-organisms for the possession of a given nutritive field. [A, 396.]

CONCURSUS (Lat.), n. m. $Ko^2n^2-ku^2rs(ku^4rs)^2u^3s(u^4s)$. From concurrere, to run together. Fr., concours. Ger., Zusammentreffen. It., concorso. Sp., concurso. See ANASTOMOSIS and SYNDROME.

CONCUSSION, n. $Ko^2n-ku^2sh^2u^3n$. Lat., concussio (from concute, to shake). Fr., commotion. Ger., Erschütterung. It., commozione. Sp., convulsión. A shaking, a shock, the condition caused by being shaken.—C. of the brain. Lat., concussio (seu commotio) cerebri. Fr., commotion du cerveau. Ger., Gehirnerschütterung. It., commozione cerebrale. Sp., convulsión del cerebro. A jarring of the brain substance without laceration of its tissue or with only microscopic laceration. It is characterized by partial or complete loss of consciousness with feebleness of the pulse, coldness of the extremities, pallor, and dilatation of the pupils, followed by vomiting, moaning, jactitation, and somnolence with warmth of the skin, a full, relaxed pulse, sometimes irregular, and contraction of the pupils; the whole usually ending in gradual recovery. [J. Hutchinson (A, 364).]—C. of the spinal cord. Fr., commotion de la moelle épinière. Ger., Rückenmarkerschütterung. A condition of the spinal cord produced by violent shock, such as may be caused by falling from a height, by a severe blow upon the back, or by a railway collision or similar accident. As complications, small extravasations of blood into the substance of the cord, or rupture of nerve tissue may exist, also hemorrhage from the spinal meninges and subacute spinal meningitis caused by the initial injury. Paraplegia does not usually supervene. Paresis of one or more limbs, nausea, vomiting, a quick intermittent or irregular pulse, choreic twitchings, and general prostration may severally or collectively occur. The temperature, lowered after the accident, will subsequently be found above the normal. Evidences of impaired digestion and assimilation are palpable. The effect upon the sphincters is variable. The degree and duration of general restlessness and nervous insomnia, as well as of the paralysis, depend upon the severity of the shock. [a, 25.]

CONCUSSOR (Lat.), n. m. $Ko^2n^2-ku^2s(ku^4s)^2so^2r$. Gen., concuissoris. An instrument or apparatus for administering regulated gentle blows upon a part (e. g., over paralyzed muscles). Such an apparatus, invented by L. Ewer, bears a general resemblance to the dental engine. ["Illustr. Mittheil. d. ärztl. Polytechn.", Apr., 1888, p. 80.]

CONCUITIENS (Lat.), adj. $Ko^2n^2-ku^2(ku^4)/shi^2(t)^2-e^2nz(ans)$. Shaking; as a n., a muscle that shakes a part.—Caput c. Of Douglas, the intertransversales colli muscles, regarded as one muscle. [L, 33.]

CONDAMINEA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Ko^2n-da^2m(da^3m)-i^2n'e^2-a^3$. Fr., condaminée. Of De Candolle, a genus of rubiaceous trees, distinguished from the Cinchonæ by its fleshy corolla, the conical shape of the capsule, and the absence of wings upon the seeds. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]—C. eorymbosa [De Candolle]. A species growing in Peru and Colombia, the bitter and glutinous bark of which is used as a substitute for Peruvian bark and sometimes is mixed with the latter. It differs, however, in taste, and in having a white color on the inner side. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. tinctoria [De Candolle]. A South American tree furnishing a light-red bark which in internal structure much resembles cinchona-bark, and the rind of which is used on the Orinoco and elsewhere for dyeing red. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).] See CINCHONÆ laccifera.—C. utilis [Goudout]. The Eleagia utilis of Weddell. [B, 288.]—C. vera. A variety of Cinchona c. [B, 5 (a, 24).]

CONDAMINEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^2n da^2m(da^3m)-i^2n'e^2-e-(a^3e^2)$. Fr., condaminées. A tribe of the Rubiaceæ, comprising Euglandamineæ, Portulandiceæ, and Pinckneyæ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONDANG (Malay), n. The Ficus bengalensis. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONDANG-WARIE, n. In Java, the Hibiscus tiliaceus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONDE, n. A native name for the fruit of a Congo palm. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONDENSABILITY, n. $Ko^2n-de^2ns-a^2-bi^2i^2t-i^2$. Fr., condensabilité. Ger., Verdichtbarkeit. It., condensabilità. Sp., condensabilidad. Capacity for undergoing condensation. [B.]

CONDENSABLE, adj. $Ko^2n-de^2ns-a^2-b'l$. Fr., c. Ger., verdichtbar. It., condensabile. Sp., c. Capable of undergoing condensation. [B.]

CONDENSANT (Fr.), adj. $Ko^2n^2-da^2n^2-sa^2n^2$. Lat., condensans. Condensing (formerly said of remedies thought capable of condensing the humors). [L, 41.]

CONDENSATEUR (Fr.), n. $Ko^3n^2-da^2n^2-s-a^2t-u^6r$. See CONDENSER.

CONDENSATION, n. $Ko^2n-de^2ns-a^2shu^2n$. Lat., condensatio (from condensere, to thicken). Fr., c. Ger., Verdichtung, C. It., condensazione. Sp., condensación. 1. The act or process of reducing to another and more compact form the bulk of a body without altering its mass. The term is often restricted in chemistry to the passage of gas or vapor into a liquid or a solid state. [B, 2 (a, 24).] 2. The successive direct union of the molecules of a chemical compound with themselves, once or several times, resulting in the formation of polymers. [A, 385.] 3. The formation of a pencil of parallel or convergent rays of light from divergent rays by means of a lens or mirror. 4. In pathology, the solidification of a spongy structure, like that of the lung (see CARNIFICATION and HEPATIZATION).

CONDENSATOR (Lat.), n. m. $Ko^2n-de^2ns-at(a^2t)^2o^2r$; in Eng., $Ko^2n-de^2ns-at-o^2r$. Gen., condensatoris. See CONDENSER.

CONDENSED, adj. Ko^2n-de^2nsd' . Fr., condensé. Ger., zusammengedrängt, verdichtet. It., condensato. Sp., condensado. In a state of condensation.

CONDENSER, n. $Ko^2n-de^2ns-u^6r$. Lat., condensator. Fr., condensateur. Ger., Verdichter. It., condensatore. Sp., condensador. An apparatus for effecting condensation of vapor, light, etc.; of Volta, an electrical accumulator. [L, 30, 41, 44.]—Abbé's c. A light-c. which consists of a substage mirror, a diaphragm, and a system of lenses so arranged that the whole apparatus may be raised and lowered in order to alter the focus. In the diagram, 1 represents the mirror. This has a plane and a convex surface. The latter is only to be used with low-power objectives; 2 represents the diaphragm, which is either of the "iris" form or so made that apertures of various sizes may be used; 3 and 4 are the lenses. These are so ground that when a small diaphragm is used, parallel rays will be brought to a focus at a short distance about the upper lens. When, however, no diaphragm is used, the rays are refracted so that the object is illuminated from all sides. All of the image which is produced by shadow is thus obliterated. Those parts, however, which are colored still show, for the color-image and the form-image are different. The most important use of the c. is this obliteration of the form-image, since it makes possible the discovery of stained objects which would otherwise be hidden by the structures about them. [a, 28.]—Achromatic c. An achromatic lens attached to a microscope to concentrate the rays from the mirror on the object under examination. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Bartlett's c. A combination of a glass retort with a water-jacket, tube, or canister as a c. It is a Liebig's c. applied directly to the neck of a retort. [a, 24.]—Borda y Barcel's c. A c. consisting of a light metallic box or cylinder 18 inches high by 7 in diameter, condensation being effected in the usual manner by supplying the outer vessel with a constant stream of cold water, which enters and escapes by suitable pipes. [a, 24].—Bull's-eye c. A plano-convex or a bi-convex lens attached to a microscope to aid, by concentrating the light, in illuminating an opaque object under examination. [a, 24].—Electrical c. An instrument for the accumulation or storing of electricity by its conduction from a non-insulated surface to an insulated one, as in the Leyden jar. If a circular brass plate, covered on its lower surface with copal varnish and insulated by a glass handle, is laid on another brass plate connected with a feeble battery, the upper plate, by induction, becomes an electrical c. and accumulates all the electricity the lower one receives. [B, 158 (a, 24)].—Lieberkühn's c. Also called a Lieberkühn. A concave mirror attached to a microscope to concentrate the rays upon an opaque object. [B, 7].—Liebig's c. An attachment to a retort by which the distillate is cooled and condensed before passing into the receiver. The glass tube through which the distillate passes is covered throughout its length by a larger tube, generally of metal, and a current of water is made to flow constantly in the space intervening between the two tubes. [B, 14 (a, 24)].—Remington's c. A c. furnished with 7 tubes of 1 inch diameter and 32 inches long, surrounded by a cylinder 5 inches in diameter and 24 inches long. A stout tube at the bottom is connected by rubber tubing with the hydrant, and a similar tube conveys the heated water into the sink. The ends of the condensing tubes are drawn together and tapered. An iron stand is adjusted by a V-support, and secures the apparatus at any required angle. [a, 24].—Rice's c. A c. that consists of a tolerably heavy copper vessel of about 10 gallons capacity, with a round bottom and closed top, having short inch-tubes projecting from both; one of the tubes supplying the cold water and the other carrying it off. [a, 24].—Squibb's c. A c. on the principle of Liebig's, but upright and having the vapor tube doubled in the form of a V, in order to economize space in the use of the apparatus. [B, 14 (a, 24)].

CONDENSING, adj. Ko²n-de²ns'i²n²g. Fr., condensateur, condensant. Ger., verdichtend. Causing condensation.

CONDER, n. Ar., kovndour. Incense. In Bengal, the resin obtained from the Boswellia thurifera of Roxburgh (which is supposed to be the olibanum or frankincense of the ancients), called by the natives Koondooroo, Ghundurus, or Cundun, of which probably c. is a corruption. [B, 172 (a, 24)].

CONDILLAC (Fr.), n. Ko²n²-del-ya²k. A place in the department of Drôme, France, where there are alkaline springs. [L, 88.]

CONDIMENT, n. Ko²nd'i²e-me²nt. Gr., ῥησυμα, ἀρτυμα. Lat., condimentum (from condire, to season). Fr., c. assaisonnement. Ger., Würze, Gewürz. It., Sp., condimento. A stimulating substance used to improve the flavor of food. C's proper usually contain no nutritive material. [K.]

CONDISI (It.), n. Kon-de'se. A corruption of Ar. koundour. Gr., στροφιόν. 1. The Gypsophila struthium of Dioscorides. 2. The Veratrum album of Linnaeus. [B, 121, 180 (a, 24)].

CONDIT (Fr.), n. Ko²n²-de. See COMFIT.

CONDITIPES (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-di²t'i²-pez(pas). From conditus, a store-house, and pes, a foot. Fr., conditipède. Capable of concealing the feet (said of the Brachyura). [L, 41, 180.]

CONDITORWAAREN (Ger.), n. pl. Ko²n-det-or/va²r-e²n. See CONFECTIONERY.

CONDITUM (Lat.), n. n. Ko²n-di²(de)'tu²m(tu²m). From condire, to spice. 1. A medicinal preparation made into the form of an electuary. By the old writers the term was applied especially to preserved fruits and is still used in that sense (e. g., cortex limonis conditus, or candied lemon-peel). [B, 121 (a, 24)]. 2. (Vinum understood) of Pliny, wine flavored with honey and pepper. [A, 318.]—C. ad vermes. See ELECTUARIUM ad vermes.—C. catechuicum. Fr., confection japonaise, électuaire de cachou composé. A preparation containing 48 parts of catechu, 82 parts each of tormentilla-root, nutmeg, and incense, 1 part of opium, 24 parts of syrup of orange (Genev. Ph., 1780), 64 parts of catechu, 48 parts of kino, 16 parts each of nutmeg and cinnamon, 1 part of opium dissolved in wine, and 432 parts of syrup of roses thoroughly boiled. [B, 119 (a, 21).]

CONDITURA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-di²(det)-u²r(tu²)a². Ger., Einmachen, Einbalsamieren. A preserving, seasoning, flavoring. [a, 21].—C. cadaverum. The embalming of the dead. [a, 21.]

CONDITUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-di²(de)'tu²s(tu²s). Ger., eingemacht. Preserved, pickled, embalmed; made savory or fragrant; seasoned, spiced. [a, 21.] As a n. n., see CONDITUM.

CONDOM, n. Ku²n'du²m. A corruption of Condon, the name of the inventor. Lat., posthocalyptron. Fr., c. baudruche, capote anglaise. Ger., C. It., c. Sp., condon. A thin bag (formerly consisting of the prepared cæcum of the sheep, or made of gold-beaters' skin, now made of rubber) to be worn as a covering for the penis during coitus, to prevent impregnation or infection. [A, 301; E.]

CONDONDOUG (Malay), n. The Spondias amara of Lamarck. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONDOR, n. The Benincasa cerifera.

CONDORI (Fr.), n. Ko²n-dor-e. The Adenantha pavonina. [B, 121 (a, 24)].—C. glabre. Syn.: Crête de paon. The Adenantha pavonina of Linnaeus. [B, 173 (a, 24)].—C. noire. The Adenantha falcata of Linnaeus. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

CONDOUBLÉ (Fr.), adj. Ko²n²-dub-la. See CONDUPLICATE.

CONDRILLA (Lat.), CONDRILLON (Lat.), n's f. and n. Ko²n-dri²la², lo²n. Fr., condrille, chondrille. 1. The gum-resin of Aractylis gummifera. 2. Of Pliny, Spanish succory. 3. See CHONDRILLA. [B, 114, 121 (a, 24).]

CONDRIS [Pliny] (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n'dri²s. See CHONDRIS.

CONDUCTEUR (Fr.), adj. Ko²n²-du²k-tu²r. Conducting; as a n., see CONDUCTOR and DIRECTOR.—C. sonore. See CONDUCTOR sonorus.—C's pistillaires. Lat., chordæ pistillares, styliscæ [Linn]. Fr., raisseaux c. de l'aura seminalis [Mirbel]. Hollow filaments connecting the stigma to the ovule, through which it was at one time erroneously supposed that an aura seminalis was conducted for the fertilization of the ovum. [B, 1, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CONDUCTIBILITY, n. Ko²n-du²k-ti²-bi²'ti²-i². Fr., conductibilité. Ger., Leitungsfähigkeit. It., conductibilità. Sp., conductibilidad. Properly, capability of being conducted; as commonly used, conducting power (for which a better word is conductivity).—Centrifugal c. The property of conveying centrifugal impressions from the nervous centres to the periphery. [L, 13].—Centripetal c. The property of conveying centripetal impressions from the periphery to the nervous centres. [L, 13.]

CONDUCTIO (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-du²k(duk)'shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., conductio's (from conducere, to conduct). 1. See CONDUCTION. 2. A convulsion. [C. Aurelianus (L, 132).]

CONDUCTION, n. Ko²n-du²k'shu²n. Gr., συναγωγή. Lat., conductio. Fr., c. Ger., Leitung. It., conduzione. Sp., conducción. The property or process of giving passage to anything (especially heat, sound, and electricity).—Aerial c., Air c. Fr., c. aérienne. Ger., Luftleitung. C., as of sound to the ear through air.—Bone c. Fr., c. des os du crâne. Ger., Knochenteitung. It., conduzione delle ossa craniche. Sp., conducción de los huesos del cráneo. The c. of sound to the ear through the bones of the skull. [F, 1].—Double c. Ger., doppelte Leitung. The transmission of an impulse in two directions (both to and from the nerve-centre) when a stimulus is applied to the middle portion of a pure sensory or motor nerve. [Landois (K).]

CONDUCTIVITY, n. Ko²n-du²k-ti²v'i²t-i². Ger., Leitungsfähigkeit. Conducting power. Cf. CONDUCTIBILITY.—Coefficient of c. of electricity. A number expressing the electrical c. of a body, estimated in a manner similar to that of the coefficient of c. of heat. [B.]—Coefficient of c. of heat. A number expressing the absolute or relative quantity of heat which passes in a unit of time through a plate of that substance of unit thickness and unit area whose surfaces are maintained in constant temperatures differing from one another by one degree. This applies equally to the c. of electricity. [B, 2, 77 (a, 24)].—Specific c. Ger., spezifische Leitungsfähigkeit. The relative capacity which some special substance exhibits for the transmission of heat, electricity, or nerve force. [a, 24.]

CONDUCTOR (Lat.), n. m. Ko²n-du²k(duk)'tu²r. Gen., conductor's. Gr., ἀγωγός. Fr., conducteur. Ger., Führer, Leiter, Konduktor. It., conduttore. Sp., c. 1. Any medium of conduction. 2. A lithotomy staff. [A, 322].—C. sonorus [Bergmann]. Fr., conducteur sonore. Ger., unbeständige Trigeminus-Wurzel. A term for certain nerve-fibers in the floor of the fourth ventricle which interlace with the stricæ acusticæ (medullary stricæ). [I, 39].—Paladino's sound-c. Fr., phonifère. Ger., Schallleiter. It., Sp., fonifero. An instrument consisting of a straight, flexible, or firm rod, one half to two thirds of a metre long, to one end of which is fixed a thin, small, circular band of metal, while the other end bears a small, slightly concave metal plate. The metal arc is placed on the larynx of the party speaking, and the small metal plate on the teeth or ear of the deaf person, so that speech is immediately transmitted by the rod to the bones of the head, and thence to the labyrinth. [F, 32].—Pin-c. An instrument for guiding a long, slender pin through thick, tough tissues. Buck's pin-c. resembles a shoemaker's awl in general shape, but is channeled for a short distance from the point. It is carried through the course that the pin is designed to take, the point of the pin is engaged in its channeled portion, the pin-c. is then withdrawn, and the pin goes along with it.—Prime c. That part of a frictional electrical machine which receives, and by its insulation retains, the electricity developed. It is generally a metallic cylinder, but often of other and various forms. [B, 77 (a, 24).]

See Internal CONDYLE of the humerus.

CONE, n. Kon. Gr., κῶνος. Lat., conus. Fr., cône. Ger., Zapfen. It., Sp., cono. 1. A pyramid with a circular base. [A, 301.] 2. An aggregated fruit composed of a conical or oval mass of imbricated scales, as in the pine and in gymnosperms generally. 3. The syncarpium of the Magnolia tribe; it is a mass of confluent, closed pericarps on a lengthened torus. [B, 34 (a, 24).] — C. body. Ger., Zapfenkörper, Zapfennengglied. The inner segment of a retinal c. [L, 332.] — C. fibres. Ger., Zapfenfasern. The prolongations outward (toward the sclerotic) of the retinal c's. They enlarge to form the c. granules, and terminate, in pyramidal bases, upon the surface of the outer molecular layer of the retina, from the edges of which are given off fine processes. [L, 31, 318, 332.] — C. flower. See the major list. — C. granules. Ger., Zapfenkörner. Nucleated enlargements of the c. fibres situated between the membrana externa limitans and the intergranular layer of the retina. Sometimes they are closely connected with the base of the cones, and are never at any great distance from them. By many they are regarded as being bipolar nerve cells. [L, 31, 318, 332.] — C. head. The genus Strobilanthes. [B, 19, 121, 275 (a, 24).] — C. of attraction. Fr., cône d'attraction. Ger., Zapfenstäbchen, Zapfenaussenglied. The outer segment of a retinal c. [L, 332.] — Crystalline c's. Fr., cônes cristallines. In compound eyes, transparent c's which lie between the corneal lenses and the retinulae, one for each lens. [L, 201.] — Doyere's c., Nerve c. See Nerve-EMINENCE. — Endostylic c. An endostylic process of the endostyle found in the stolon of certain ascidians. [L, 353.] — Fibrous c. [Mayo]. See CORONA radiata. — Olfactory c's. Conical projections on the antennæ of crustaceans, regarded as having olfactory functions. [L, 353.] — Oral c. In the Hydrozoa, the conical enlargement at the oral pole, in the centre of which is the mouth. [L, 121.] — Primitive c's. Ger., Primitivkegel. The c.-like appearances formed by the collecting tubules arising from single principal tubes in the medulla of the kidney, extending to the surface of the cortex in the same medullary radius, and there dividing into numerous uriniferous tubules. [J, 35.] — Retinal c's. Lat., coni retinae. Fr., cônes retiniens. Ger., Netzhautzapfen. Bulbous bodies in the layer of rods and cones of the retina. They are divided into two segments, an inner (the c. body), and an outer (the c. rod), which is usually shorter. The inner is bottle-shaped, consists internally of homogeneous or finely granular matter, externally of fine fibrils, is simply refracting, is stained by carmin, and is continuous with a c. fibre. The outer segment is finely tapering, doubly refracting, is uncolored by carmin, but deeply stained by osmic acid, and is believed to be made up of superimposed discs.

CRYSTALLINE CONES. [FROM MILLS, AFTER GRENHACHER.]

Three facets with retinulae from the compound eye of the cockchafer. The pigment has been dissolved away from two of the facets. F, corneal facet; K, crystalline cone; P, pigment-sheath; P', chief pigment-cell; P'', pigment-cells of the second order; R, retinulae.

bodies in the layer of rods and cones of the retina. They are divided into two segments, an inner (the c. body), and an outer (the c. rod), which is usually shorter. The inner is bottle-shaped, consists internally of homogeneous or finely granular matter, externally of fine fibrils, is simply refracting, is stained by carmin, and is continuous with a c. fibre. The outer segment is finely tapering, doubly refracting, is uncolored by carmin, but deeply stained by osmic acid, and is believed to be made up of superimposed discs.

By some they are regarded as being the peripheric process of the c. granules (bipolar ganglion cells), and as being more largely concerned in the perception of color than the rods. In animals of nocturnal habits they are much diminished in number, or are absent. They are usually fewer in number than the rods, except at the macula lutea, where they exceed the rods in number. They are perpendicular to the retina except at the macula, where they are somewhat oblique. [L, 31, 318, 332.] — Olfactory c's. See Olfactory c's. — Steinheil's c. Fr., cône de Steinheil. Ger., Steinheil'sche Kegel. It., cono di Steinheil. Sp., cono de Steinheil. A small cone of solid glass, the base of which is convex and the opposite surface concave. It is about an inch in length and acts like a Galilean telescope; occasionally used in very high degrees of myopia. [F.] — Twin c's. Ger., Doppelzapfen. In comparative anatomy, retinal c's which are united by their lateral surfaces, the rods and fibres being separate. [L, 318, 332.]

THE RODS AND CONES OF THE RETINA. [FROM MILLS, AFTER H. MÜLLER.]

1, layer of rods and cones; 2, rods; 3, cones; 4, 5, 6, external granule layer; 7, internal granule layer; 8, 10, finely granular gray layer; 11, layer of nerve-cells; 12, 14, fibres of the optic nerve; 13, membrana limitans.

CONE (Fr.), n. Kon. See CONE. — C. d'attraction. See CONE of attraction. — C's de la rétine. See Retinal CONES. — C. d'exsudation [Fol]. CONFRONTATION, n. Ko²n-front'a²-shu²n. The expedient of confronting a patient with the person from whom his disease was contracted, so as to determine the nature of the latter's disease and thus aid in the diagnosis. [L, 313.]

CONFUSI, n. In Japan, the Magnolia glauca. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONFUSIO (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-fu²z(fus)/i²-o. Gen., confusion'is. From con, together, and fundere, to pour. See CONFUSION, CRISIS, and SYNCHYSIS.

CONFUSION, n. Ko²n-fu²zh'u²n. Lat., confusio. Fr., c. A blending, disordering, confounding.—C. colors. Fr., images de c. Ger., Blendungsbilder. It., immagini di confusione. Sp., imágenes de confusión. 1. Changes in the color of retinal impressions or after-images, such as are produced by looking at the sun or at a bright flame of light. [F.] 2. Certain compound colors used in examinations for color-blindness; they are usually gray, buff, etc., which more or less resemble the primary color to be matched, and, if selected by the patient in matching the sample, they indicate color-blindness. [B.]

CONFUSUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-fu²z(fus)/u³s(u⁴s). Fr., confus. Irregular (said of fevers). [A, 325.]

CONGANA, n. In Peru, the Vaccinium corymbodendron. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGE (Chin.), n. A variety of tea with narrow leaves. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGEA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n(ko²n²)/je²(ge²)-a³. Fr., congéa. Of Roxburgh, a genus of the Symphoremæ, order Verbenaceæ, indigenous to Burmah and the Malay Peninsula. [B, 42, 121 (a, 24).]—C. villosa [Roxb.]. A variety of c. found in the Tenasserim provinces. The leaves are used medicinally. [a, 22.]

CONGÉLABLE (Fr.), adj. Ko²n²-zhal-a³-b¹l. Capable of congelation. [A, 385.]

CONGELANS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n(ko²n²)/je²(ge²l)-a²nz(a³ns). Causing congelation.

CONGELATICUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-je²(ge²l)-a²t(a³)/i²k-u³s(u⁴s). A person affected with ecstasy. [A, 322, 325.]

CONGELATIO (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-je²(ge²l)-a(a³)-shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., congelation'is. From congelare, to freeze. Fr., congelation. Ger., Erstarrung, Erfrierung, Gefrieren. It., congelazione, congelamento. Sp., congelación, congelamiento. 1. Catalepsy. [B, 117.] 2. A freezing, congelation. 3. Frost-bite; the effects produced upon the tissues of the body by freezing, or by exposure to extreme cold. Cf. DERMATITIS congelationis and PERnio.—C. bullosa. Frost-bite with the formation of blebs. [A, 326].—C. erythematosa. Frost-bite to the extent of producing bluish redness with swelling and fœtid serous exudation. [A, 326.]—C. escharotica. Frost-bite with gangrene. [A, 326.]

CONGELATION, n. Ko²n-je¹a'shu³n. Gr., σύνησις. Lat., congelatio (from congelare, to congeal). Fr., congélation. Ger., Gefrieren. It., congelazione. Sp., congelamiento, congelación. 1. Freezing, the solidification of a liquid in consequence of a reduction of temperature; as sometimes used, coagulation. 2. Frost-bite, the effects of intense cold on living animal tissues (induration, pallor, and loss of sensibility, followed by hyperæmia and, if the exposure is prolonged or the part improperly treated, by vesication, ulceration, or gangrene). C. of the first degree is followed by simple hyperæmia of the skin; that of the second degree by more decided cutaneous lesions, such as vesication and superficial ulceration; that of the third degree by deep-seated gangrene. 3. The effects of intense cold on the organism at large, characterized mainly by irresistible drowsiness and repugnance to exertion, followed by sleep and death. [A, 301; L, 87.] 4. Of the ancients, the stupor of certain diseases, such as catalepsy. [A, 325.]

CONGELATUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-je¹(ge¹)-a'a³'tu³s(tu⁴s). Fr., congelé. Ger., gefroren. It., congelato. Sp., congelado. 1. Frozen. [L, 43.] 2. See CONGELATICUS.

CONGENER (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-je²n(ge²n)-u³r(e²r). Gen., con-generie. From con, together with, and genus, kind. Fr., con-génère. Ger., congenerisch, verwandt, gleichartig. It., congenere. Sp., congénero. Congeneric (q. v.); as a n., anything of like origin or nature with another or belonging to the same or an allied genus. [L.]

CONGENERIC, adj. Ko²n-je²n-e²r'i²k. Gr., συγγενής, ὁμογενής. Lat., congener. Fr., congénère. 1. Belonging to the same genus. 2. Of the same nature or having the same functions. [L, 41, 121.]

CONGÉNIAL (Fr.), adj. Ko²n²-zhan-e-a³l. See CONGENITAL.

CONGENITAL, adj. Ko²n-je²n'i²t-a³l. Lat., congenitus (from con, together with, and genitus, engendered). Fr., congénital. Ger., angeboren, mitgeboren. It., congenito. Sp., congénito. Syn.: conmate. Existing at the time of birth.

CONGERIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²n-je²(ge²r)'i²d-e(a³-e²). A family of the Phaneromycteres. [L, 281.]

CONGERIES (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-je²(ge²r)'i²-ez(as). Gen., con-gerie'i. From congerere, to accumulate. Gr., συνφόρημα. Fr., amas. Ger., Gemengsel. It., ammasso. Sp., congerie. A collection, a mass. [L, 56, 102.]

CONGESTED, adj. Ko²n-je²st'e²d. Lat., congestus. Fr., con-gestionné. 1. In a state of congestion. 2. In botany, of the pre-foliation, having the discs of leaves irregularly crowded on each other. [B, 1, 19 (a, 24)]

CONGESTIBLE, adj. Ko²n-je²st'i²-b'l. Fr., c. Susceptible of congestion. [A, 301.]

CONGESTION, n. Ko²n-je²st'yu³n. Gr., συνφόρησις. Lat., congestio (from congerere, to accumulate). Fr., c. Ger., C., An-draung, Ansammlung. It., congestione. Sp., congestión. 1. An abnormal accumulation of blood in a part; hyperæmia (to be distinguished from inflammation, fluxion, and engorgement [q. v.]). 2. A like accumulation of any of the juices. 3. The wandering of pus to a part remote from the seat of its formation (Fr., abcès par c.). [A, 301.]—Active c. Fr., c. active (ou de force). A state of hyperæmia in which too much blood is propelled into the affected part. It often constitutes the first manifestation of inflammation. [L.]—Asthenic c. Fr., c. asthénique. See Passive c.—Atonic c. Ger., atonische C. C. due to weakness of the muscular fibres of the blood-vessels independently of nervous influence. [Samuel (A, 319).]—Cerebral c. C. of the brain; described as occurring under three forms—the light, the severe, and the apoplectic. The light form is gradual in onset. There is dull headache, with alternate lancinating pains, tinnitus aurium, flashes of light before the eyes, uneasy sleep, bad dreams, vertigo, muscular fatigue, disordered sensations, deranged stomach, nausea, and irritable heart. The severe may develop out of the light form, or it may come on without prodromes. The symptoms of this form are those of the light form exaggerated in intensity. If not relieved, the patient may pass from a state of exalted activity to one of depression or coma. In children, convulsions are not infrequent. The third, or apoplectic form, is of sudden onset, simulating apoplexy closely. The reflexes are not in abeyance. In venous or passive cerebral c. there are headache, swelling of the eyelids, fullness of the superficial veins, singing in the ears, and impairment of the hearing. The vision is obscured and the mind confused. [a, 25.]—Collateral c. Ger., collaterale C. An increase of the amount of blood flowing through the vessels directly connected with a vessel that is obstructed. [Samuel (A, 319).] Cf. Collateral circulation.—C. asthénique, C. de faiblesse (Fr.). See Passive c.—C. de force. See Active c.—C. par accommodation (Fr.). See Active c.—C. par paralysie (Fr.). See Neuro-paralytic c.—C. par rétention (Fr.). C. passive (Fr.). See Passive c.—C. sabscess (Ger.). See Congestive abscess.—C. sthénique. See Active c.—C's utérines. Mme. Lachapelle's term for a form of secondary puerperal hæmorrhage supposed by her to depend upon a special "molinen hæmorrhagium." [A, 96.]—Entzündliche C. (Ger.). See Inflammatory c.—Fluxionary c. Fr., c. fluxionnaire. Ger., fluxionäre C. C. due to increased force of the general circulation. [Samuel (A, 319).]—Functional c. Ger., functionelle C. C. of an organ in consequence of its functional activity (e. g., of the retina when the eye is in use). [Samuel (A, 319).]—General venous c. Fr., c. veineuse générale. Overloading of the veins of the systemic circulation, as in certain forms of valvular disease of the heart. [D, 1.]—Hepatic c. C. of the liver; an increase in the amount of blood in the liver. The condition may be active, such as is induced by excesses in eating or malarial disease and in typhus or typhoid fever. Passive hepatic c. may arise in the course of any disorder disturbing the systemic circulation. [If the venous stasis persists, atrophy of the organ will ensue. (Strümpell (a, 25).)]—Hypostatic c. Fr., c. hypostatique. Ger., hypostatische C. Gravitation of blood to the lower parts of the body or of certain organs, as in the dead body and in persons with an enfeebled heart. [D, 25.]—Idiopathic c. Fr., c. idiopathique. Ger., idiopathische C. C. occurring by itself, not as an expression of some other morbid condition. [L, 135.]—Inflammatory c. Fr., c. inflammatoire. Ger., entzündliche C. The c. of inflammation. [Samuel (A, 319).]—Mechanical c. Fr., c. mécanique. Ger., mechanische C. Passive c. due to any mechanical cause, such as an impediment to the venous circulation.—Nervous c. Fr., c. nerveuse. Ger., nervöse C. C. due to nervous influence. [Samuel (A, 319).]—Neural c. C. of a nerve; a morbid condition prone to follow exposure of nerves to intense cold; due, according to S. W. Mitchell, to paralysis. According to W. A. Hammond, it is probably present in many cases of neuralgia. [D, 34.]—Neuro-paralytic c. Fr., c. neuro-paralytique. C. due to paralysis of the motor nerves of the capillaries. [Rev. des sci. méd., Apr., 1889, p. 583 (a, 18).]—Passive c. Fr., c. passive stagnation sanguine. A general term for all forms of c. that do not depend on an increase in the amount of blood sent to the part by the heart.—Plethoric c. Ger., plethorische C. See PLETHORA.—Pulmonary c. C. of the lungs; active pulmonary c. is associated with dilated capillaries, an increased supply of blood to the part, and an accelerated current. In passive pulmonary c. the blood current is slow. [a, 25.]—Renal c. C. of the kidneys. In active renal c. the symptoms are pain, frequent and urgent desire to micturate, hæmaturia, and renal casts. The urine is voided in small quantities only. The symptoms of passive renal c. are usually masked for a considerable time by those of the exciting cause. The urine decreases in quantity, and is acid in reaction and dark in color. It contains albumin and casts, and the specific gravity is increased. [Bartholow, Strümpell (a, 25).]—Spinal c. An acute or chronic condition appertaining to the spinal cord, in which the characteristic symptoms are pain of an aching variety, and palsy. The pain is usually in the lumbar and sacral regions; the palsy is incomplete, being preceded by numbness, extending from below upward, and being rarely combined with paralysis of the sphincters. According to Da Costa, the trouble is often traceable to disturbance in the circulation or to alteration in the composition of the blood. [D, 25, 34.]—Splenic c. C. of the spleen. It is to be distinguished from the structural enlargement to which its continuance gives rise. [a, 25.]—Systemic c. C., or overloading of the systemic circulation.—Venous c. Fr., c. veineuse. Engorgement of the veins from any cause which interferes with the freedom of the circulation. [D, 1.] See also Passive hyperæmia.—Wachsthumsc. (Ger.). C. due to increased growth of a part, as of an organ when its fellow has been incapacitated. [Samuel (A, 319).]

CONGESTIONNÉ (Fr.), adj. Ko²n²-zhe²st-e-o³n-na. Congested. [L, 41.]

CONGESTIVE, adj. Ko²n-je²st'i²v. Lat., congestivus. Fr., congestif, congestionnel. Ger., congestiv. It., congestivo, congestionale. Sp., congestivo. Pertaining to, of the nature of, or due to, congestion. [D.] See CONGESTED.

CONGESTUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-je²st(ge²st)'u³s(u⁴s). See CONGESTED.

CONGIARIUM (Lat.), n. n. Ko²n-ji²(gi²)-a(a³)ri²-u³m(u⁴m). A vessel holding a gallon. [L, 30 (a, 21).]

CONGIUS (Lat.), n. m. Ko²n'ji²(gi²)-u³s(u⁴s). A gallon. [L, 30.]

CONGLACIATION, n. Ko²n-gla-si²-a'shu³n. Lat., conglaciatio. See CONGELATION.

CONGLOBATE, adj. Ko²n-glob'at. Lat., conglobatus (from conglobare, to collect into a ball). Fr., conglobé. Ger., conglobirt, geballt, zusammengeballt. It., conglobato. Sp., conglobado. 1. Collected into a ball (said of flowers and leaves, also of the lymphatic glands). [B, 1 (a, 24); J; L, 14.]

CONGLOBATION, n. Ko²n-glob-a'shu³n. Lat., conglobatio. Fr., c. Ger., Zusammenballung. It., conglobazione. Sp., congl-obación. The state of being or process of becoming conglobate.

CONGLOMERATE, adj. Ko²n-glo²m'e²r-at. Lat., conglom-eratus (from conglomerare, to heap up). Fr., congloméré. Ger., zusammengehäuft. It., conglomerato. Sp., conglomerado. In anatomy, composed of lobes or lobules contained in a single investment; in botany, united into a mass or cluster. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24); L, 41.]

CONGLOMERATION, n. Kon-glo²m'e²r-a'shu³n. Lat., conglomeratio. Fr., conglomération. Ger., Zusammenhäufung. It., conglomerazione. Sp., conglomeración. The state of being or process of becoming conglomerate.

CONGLUTIN, n. Ko²n-glu²t'i²n. The alkali albuminate obtained from almonds, the kernels of stone-fruit, and lupins. It is prepared like legumin, from which it differs only in elementary composition. It is, like the other substances, obtained from the casein of plants, precipitated by dilute acids and rennet, which precipitate dissolves readily in basic potassic phosphate. [B, 4, 229 (a, 24).]

CONGLUTINANT, adj. Ko²n-glu²t'i²n-a²nt. Lat., conglutinans. Fr., c. Ger., zusammenklebend. It., Sp., conglutinante. Joining, causing adhesion. [L, 41, 49.]

CONGLUTINATE, adj. Ko²n-glu²t'i²n-at. Lat., conglutinatus. Fr., conglutiné. Glued together, not organically united. [B, 19 (a, 24).]

CONGLUTINATION, n. $Ko^2n-glu^2t^2n-a'shu^2n$. Gr., συγκόλλησις. Lat., conglutinatio. Fr., c. The union of two contiguous bodies by the interposition of a third, as of two fingers each deprived of its integuments, or of the pleurae to the lungs by effused matter. [L, 97.] See AGGLUTINATION.

CONGO, n. In China, a commercial term for a certain quality (not species in the botanical sense) of black tea. [B, 77 (a, 24); L, 56.]

CONGO-MAHOE, n. In Jamaica, the negro name of the Hibiscus clypeatus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGON, n. See CONGO.

CONGONA, n. In Peru, the Peperomia inaequalifolia [Ruiz and Pavón] and the Piper trifolium. [B, 88, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGONHA (Port.), n. $Ko^2n-go^2n'ya^2$. In Brazil, the Ilex paraguayensis. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGONITA, CONGONO, n's. See CONGONA.

CONGOPAPIER (Ger.), n. Kon^2go-pa^2per . See CONGO PAPER.

CONGO-ROOT, n. $Ko^2n^2go-ru^2t$. See PSORALEA eglandulosa.

CONGOROTH (Ger.), n. $Kon^2go-rot$. See CONGO REP.

CONGO-THEE (Ger.), n. Kon^2go-ta . Congo tea, a variety of black tea. [B, 180 (a, 24).] See CONGO.

CONGOU-ELEVIN (Tamil), n. The Cochlospermum gossypium. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGOURDELLE (Fr.), n. $Ko^2n^2gurd-e^2l$. The Cucurbita pyriformis. [B, 121, 173 (a, 24).]

CONGOXA (Port.), n. $Ko^2n-go'sha^2$. The Vinca major. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGREGATÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^2n^2gre^2g-a(a^2)'te(ta^2-e^2)$. Fr., congrégatés. Of Batsch, a group of rubiaceous plants, comprising Mitchellia, Canephora, Cephaelis, Callicocca, Morinda, Opecularia, and Nauclea. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONGRÈS (Fr.), n. $Ko^2n^2gre^2s$. Sexual intercourse; formerly the ocular test (Fr., épreuve de c.; Ger., Eheprobe) ordered by the French courts in divorce cases, etc., of the capability or incapability of coition, in the presence of physicians and matrons. The practice was abolished in 1667. [L, 41, 43.]

CONGRESS SPRING, n. $Ko^2n^2gre^2s\ spri^2ng$. See SARATOGA SPRINGS.

CONGRESS SPRINGS, n. A place in Santa Clara County, California, where there are springs containing sodium, iron and calcium carbonates, sodium chloride and sulphate, silica, alumina, and traces of magnesia. [A, 363.]

CONGRESSUS (Lat.), n. m. $Ko^2n^2gre^2s'su^2s(su^2s)$. See CONGRESS.—C. interruptus. Onanism.

CONGROADINA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Ko^2n^2gro(gro^2)ga^2d(ga^2d)$. (e)'na². A group of the Ophidiidae. [L, 207, 280.]

CONGUIS (Lat.), n. f. $Ko^2n^2gu^2(gu^2)is$. See CALCAR AVIS.

CONHAMETRA (Port.), n. $Kon-ya^2ma^2tra^2$. The mallow. —C. brava. The Malva alcea of Linnæus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONHYDRINE, n. Ko^2n-hld^2ren . Fr., c. Ger., Conydrin. It., Sp., conidrina. A natural alkaloid, found in the Conium maculatum. It is crystallizable, fusible below 100° C., and volatilizes at a higher heat; partially soluble in water, and freely soluble in ether and alcohol. The formula given by Wertheim is $C_8H_{17}NO$. [B, 5 (a, 24); "Ann. di chim. medico-farm. e di farmacol.," June, 1885, p. 356.]

CONIA (Lat.), n. f. $Kon(ko^2n)^2i^2a^2$. Gen., con'ias. Gr., κονία. 1. Lime. 2. Lime impregnated with fir. 3. Of Ventenat, a genus of Algæ separated by him from the Byssus. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 94 (a, 21).]

CONIA (Lat.), n. f. $Kon-i(e)^2a^2$. See CONTINE.

CONIANDRÉE (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Kon-i^2a^2n(a^2n)^2dre^2e(a^2e)^2e^2$. Fr., coniandrées. 1. Of Endlicher, a division of the Cucurbitaceæ comprising the genera Coniandra and Cyrtoneima. 2. Of Reichenbach, a section of the Cucurbitaceæ genuinæ, comprising the same genera. 3. Of Römer, a tribe of the Cucurbitaceæ, comprising the same genera. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CONIASE (Fr.), n. $Kon-e-a^2z$. See CONIASIS.—C. biltaire. Biliary lithiasis. [Merle, "Bull. de l'acad. de méd.," 2^{me} sér., xiv, No. 26, p. 885.]

CONIASIS (Lat.), n. f. $Kon(ko^2n)^2i^2a(a^2)'si^2s$. Gen., conias'eos (-is). Gr., κονιασις (from κονία, mortar). Fr., coniase. Incrustation.

CONIAC ACID, n. $Kon-i^2k$. See CONIAC ACID.

CONICAL, adj. $Ko^2n'i^2k-a^2l$. Lat., conicus. Fr., conique. Ger., konisch, kegelförmig. It., conico. Sp., cónico. Having the form of a cone. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

CONIAC ACID, n. $Kon-i^2s'i^2k$. See CONIAC ACID.

CONICINE, n. $Kon-i^2sen$. Lat., conicina. Fr., c. See CONINE. —Collyre de c. (Fr.), C. collyrium. Of Mauthner, a preparation containing from 1 to 3 drops of c., 25 grammes of distilled water, and 8 grammes of quince muciage, used in cases of scrofulous ophthalmia. [Gobley (L, 87 [a, 21]).]—Liniment de c. (Fr.), C. liniment. Of Mauthner, a preparation containing 1 drop of c. and 4 grammes of sweet-almond oil. It is applied with a brush to the eyelids in cases of spasmodic contraction of the eyelids of scrofulous children. [Gobley (L, 87 [a, 21]).]—Mixture de c. (Fr.), C. mixture. Of Fronmüller, a preparation containing 3 drops of c., 1 gramme of alcohol, and 20 grammes of distilled water. Used in whooping-cough. [Gobley (L, 87 [a, 21]).]—Solution de c. pour injection (Fr.). Solution of c. for injection; a preparation containing 1 part of tincture of quince-seed and 9 parts of lime-water. [Gobley (L, 87 [a, 21]).]

CONICITY, n. $Kon-i^2s'i^2t^2i^2$. Fr., conicité. The state of being conical.

CONICO-CYLINDRICAL, adj. $Ko^2n'i^2k-o-si^2l-i^2n'dri^2ka^2l$. Conical and cylindrical at the same time. [L, 41.]

CONICO-INCURVIROSTRIS (Lat.), adj. $Ko^2n(kon)^2i^2k-o(o^2)-Pn-ku^2r(ku^2r)-vi^2(wi^2)-ro^2st^2ri^2s$. Fr., conico-incurvirostre. Having the beak hooked and conical. [L, 41, 180.]

CONICO-PROTENSIROSTRIS [Shäffer] (Lat.), adj. $Ko^2n(kon)^2i^2k-o(o^2)-prot-e^2ns-i^2-ro^2st^2ri^2s$. Fr., conico-protensirostre. Having a long conical beak. [L, 41, 180.]

CONICO-SUBULATE, adj. $Ko^2n'i^2k-o-su^2b'u^2l-a^2t$. Conical (at the base) and awl-shaped (toward the point). [a, 22.]

CONICO-SUBULIROSTRIS [Shäffer] (Lat.), adj. $Ko^2n(kon)^2i^2k-o(o^2)-su^2b(su^2b)-u^2l(u^2l)-i^2-ro^2st^2ri^2s$. Having a conical and subulate beak. [L, 41, 180.]

CONICO-TENUIROSTRIS (Lat.), adj. $Ko^2n(kon)^2i^2k-o(o^2)-te^2n-u^2i^2-ro^2st^2ri^2s$. Fr., conico-tenuirostre. Having a slender conical beak. [L, 41.]

CONICOXÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Kon-i^2k-o^2x'e(a^2e-a^2e^2)$. A division of the Heteromera. [L, 121.]

CONICUS (Lat.), adj. $Kon-i^2k-u^2s(u^2s)$. See CONICAL.

CONIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Kon-i^2d-e(a^2e-e^2)$. Ger., Kegelschnecken. A family of the Tænioglossa. [L, 121, 147.]

CONIDE (Fr.), n. Kon-ed. See CONIDIUM.

CONIDIACÉS (Fr.), n. pl. $Kon-ed-e-a^2sa$. A division of Fungi made by Bertillon, corresponding in part to the Coniomycetes of Nees and Fries; characterized by being without a distinct perithecium, the spores lying directly on the mycelium. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIDIENSTRÄGER (Ger.), n. $Kon-ed'i^2e^2n-trag-e^2r$. See CONIDIOPHORE.

CONIDIOPHORE, n. $Ko^2n-i^2d'i^2o-for$. From κονίδιον, a particle of dust, and φορέω, to bear. Fr., c. Ger., Conidiophor, Conidienträger. A column bearing the spores or conidia in the Conidiomycetes and in the plasmodium formed by certain of the Protozoa and Mycetozoa. [B, 77; L, 121.]

CONIDIOPHOROUS (Lat.), adj. $Kon-i^2d-i^2-o^2f^2o^2r-u^2s$. Fr., conidiophore. Having or bearing conidia. [B, 93.]

CONIDIS, n. In Sicily, the Plantago psyllium. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. $Kon(ko^2n)^2id'i^2-u^2m(u^2m)$. Gr., κονίδιον (dim. of κόνις, dust). Fr., conide, conide. Ger., C., Konidie. A small rounded, dust-like spore constituting the reproductive organ in certain Fungi, especially the Conidiomycetes; also the gonidium of lichens. [B.]

CONIFERÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Kon-i^2f'e^2r-e(a^2e-a^2e^2)$. From conus, a cone, and ferre, to bear. Fr., conifères, bois à aiguilles. Ger., zapfentragende Bäume, Zapfenbäume, Nadelholzer. It., coniferos. Sp., coníferos. Syn.: Strobilaceæ [Reichenbach]. A large family of gymnosperms, characterized by a much-branched stem, numerous small unbranched leaves, and cone-like staminal flowers. They comprise 32 genera and 300 species, and are to be found dispersed throughout the temperate and northern regions of the globe. Richard regards it as a family divided into 3 orders: 1st division, the Taxineæ, having their female flowers distinct, and comprising the genera Podocarpus, Dacrydium, Taxus, Satisbournia, Phytocladus, and Ephedra; 2d division, Cupressineæ, having female flowers erect, comprising the genera Juniperus, Thuja, Callitris, Cupressus, and Taxodium; 3d division, Abietineæ, with fruit constituting a cone, formed of imbricated scales, at the axils of which are found the female flowers—this division comprises the genera Pinus, Larix, Cedrus, Abies, Cunninghamia, Agathis, and Araucaria. Bentham and Hooker regard it as an order comprising the tribes Cupressineæ, Taxodiaceæ, Taxaceæ, Podocarpeæ, Araucariaceæ, and Abietineæ. Vines regards it as an order with 2 divisions: 1st, Pinoideæ, with capillary flowers in cones, and comprising the families Abietineæ, Araucariaceæ, Cupressineæ, and Taxodiaceæ; and the 2d division, Taxoideæ, with flowers not cones, and comprising the families Taxineæ and Podocarpeæ. [B, 19, 42, 77, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIFÈRE (Fr.), adj. $Kon-e-fe^2r$. See CONIFEROUS.

CONIFERIN, n. $Kon-i^2f'e^2r-i^2n$. Fr., coniférine. Ger., C. A glucoside, $C_{19}H_{32}O_8$, obtained from the cambium of coniferous woods. It crystallizes in stellate prisms and melts at 185° C. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

CONIFERINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Kon-i^2f'e^2r-i(e)^2ne(na^2e-e^2)$. A class of gymnosperms, consisting of the single order Coniferæ. [B, 245.]

CONIFERITES, n. pl. $Kon-i^2f'e^2r-it^2z$. An order of fossil plants, comprising Pinites, Steinhauera, Cunninghamites, Dammarites, Araucarites, and Taxodites. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIFEROUS, adj. $Kon-i^2f'e^2r-u^2s$. Lat., coniferus. Fr., conifère. Ger., zapfentragend. It., conifero. Sp., conifero. Having or bearing cones. [L, 43.]

CONIFERYL ALCOHOL, n. $Kon-i^2f'e^2r-i^2l$. An alcohol obtained from an aqueous solution of coniferin by emulsion, and having the formula $C_{19}H_{32}O_8$. It melts at 74° C. It is an ethyl derivative of vanillin. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

CONIFLORUS (Lat.), adj. $Kon-i^2f'lor'u^2s(u^2s)$. From conus, a cone, and flos, a flower. Fr., coniflore. Ger., kegelblümig. Sp., conifloro. Having flowers disposed in cones. [L, 41.]

CONIFORM, adj. Kon-ⁱ²-fo²rm. Lat., coniformis (from conus, a cone, and forma, form). Fr., It., Sp., coniforme. Ger., kegel-förmig. Cone-shaped. [L, 41.]

CONIGENUS (Lat.), adj. Kon-ⁱ²j(i)g²e²n-u³s(u⁴s). From κωνος, a cone, and γενναίω, to engender. Fr., conigène. Growing on cones (e. g., the Agaricus). [L, 41.]

CONIIC ACID, n. Kon-ⁱ2k. Fr., acide conicique. Ger., Conicinsäure. It., acido conico. Sp., ácido conico. An acid existing in conium along with coniine; said by Peschier to be an independent acid, but considered by others to be malic acid. [B, 5 (a, 24).]

CONIIN (Ger.), n. Kon-ⁱ²-en¹. See CONIINE.—Aethylc. See ETHYLCONIINE.—Bromwasserstoffsaures C. Coniine hydrobromide. [B.]—C'artig. Resembling coniine. [B.]

CONIINE, n. Kon-ⁱen. Lat., coniina, coniina [Swed. Ph.], continum [Ger. Ph., 1st ed., Swiss Ph., Netherl. Ph., Russ. Ph.], coniina. Fr., c., conine, cicutine, conicine [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Conin. It., conicina, cicutina, coniina. Sp., cicutina [Sp. Ph.]. Syn.: conine, cicutine, conicine. An alkaloid, C₈H₁₇N = C₈H₁₆(NH), homologous with piperidine, obtained from Conium maculatum; a colorless oily liquid of a penetrating odor and acid taste, readily soluble in alcohol, ether, oils, and almost insoluble in water. It has a decidedly alkaline reaction, and its salts are crystallizable. It is a powerful poison, and is but little used except in a dilute form, as a collyrium in serofulous ophthalmia. It has been used as a local anodyne in ovarian pain. Ladenburg (1886) has made c. synthetically from allylpyridine and identified it with normal propylpiperidine. [H. Schulz (A, 319); A. Meadows, "Brit. Gynaec. Jour.," Apr., 1885; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," June 27, 1885; B, 4, 5, 95, 173 (a, 24).]—C. hydrobromate, C. hydrobromide. Lat., conicinae hydrobromas, continum hydrobromatum (seu hydrobromicum), bromhydras cicutinus [Fr. Cod.]. Fr., bromhydrate de cicutine [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., bromwasserstoffsaures Conin. It., bromidrato di coniina. Sp., bromohidrato de conicina. Syn.: bromhydrate of c., hydrobromide of c. A salt of the constitution C₈H₁₇NHBr, forming rhomboidal crystals soluble in 2 parts of water and the same quantity of alcohol. Its solutions are dextrorotatory. It has been used as a substitute for curare in convulsive cases. [H. Schulz and E. Peiper, "Arch. i. exp. Path. u. Pharm.," x, p. 147; "Centb. f. klin. Med.," Apr. 10, 1886, p. 263 (B).]—C. hydrochlorate, C. hydrochloride. A crystallizable salt [Wertheim] having the composition C₈H₁₇NH₂Cl. It is preferable to the uncombined alkaloid for medical use. [B, 4, 5 (a, 24); "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Sept. 11, 1886, p. 284.]—Ethylc. Ger., Aethylconiin. An ethyl substitution compound of c.; a volatile, almost colorless oil. [H. Schulz (A, 319); B, 2 (a, 24).]—Methylc. A methyl substitution compound of c., C₈H₁₄CH₃N. [H. Schulz (A, 319).]—Parac. Ger., Paraconiin. An isomer of c., obtained by Schiff from butyric aldehyde. [H. Schulz (A, 319).]

CONILA (Lat.), n. f. Kon-ⁱ2n-(e)l¹a³. Gr., κονίλη. Syn.: conula, conyla. An ancient name used by Apuleius for different species of the Labiatae (Origanum, Satureira, etc.). [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIMA, n. Gum hyawa, obtained from the Icica heptaphylla of Guiana. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONINE, n. Kon'en. See CONIINE.

CONIOPARPEÆ [Arndt] (Lat.), CONIOPARPI [Fries] (Lat.), n. f. pl. and m. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-ka²rp²e²-ea²-e², -i(e). From κωνος, dust, and καρπός, a fruit. Fr., coniocarpées. Ger., Staubfruchtstflechten [Meyer]. An order of lichens corresponding to the first series Epiconioidæ [Nylander] of the family Lichenacei, and characterized by having apothecia with the spores usually naked and pulverent on the surface of the fructification. [B, 77, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOPARPICÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-ka²rp²i²-se(ka²-e²). 1. Of Reichenbach (1828), a family of the Blastosporææ, comprising Coniocarpon, Trachylium, Arthronaria, Incillaria, and Nevia. 2. Of Reichenbach (1841), a family of the Craterosporææ, including the genera Spiloma, Lecanactis, and Coniocarpon. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOPARPON [De Candolle] (Lat.), n. n. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-ka²rp²o²n. The Arthonia cinnabarina. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. myriadæ [Fée]. Ger., vielfruchtige Tellerflechte. The Lecidea myriadea. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CONIOPYBÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-si²b(ku²h)¹-e²-e(a³-e²). A tribe of the family Caliaceæ, comprising the single genus Coniocybe. [B, 170.]

CONIOCYMATI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-sim(ku²m)-a(a³)¹shi²(ti²)-i(e). Fr., coniocymatiées. Of Walther, an order of lichens corresponding to the Epiconioidæ of Nylander. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOCYST, n. Kon-ⁱ²-o-si²st. Lat., coniocystis (from κωνος, dust, and κύστις, a bladder). Fr., coniocyste. Of Agardh, the closed sporangium containing the spores in ferns. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIODÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-od'e(a³-e²). Fr., coniodés. The Coniomyces. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIODES (Lat.), adj. Kon(ko²n)-i²-od'ez(as). From κωνος, dust, and εἶδος, resemblance. Containing lime, resembling lye (said of the urine). [L, 116.]

CONIOGASTERES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-ga²st-(ga²st)-e(a)¹rez(re²s). Of Corda, a family of hyphomycetous Fungi. [B, 170.]

CONIOMYCETES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-mi(mu²)¹-set(kat)¹ez(e²s). From κωνος, dust, and μύκης, a mushroom. Fr., coniomyces, coniomyces. Ger., Staubpilze. Sp., coniomyces. Of Fries, an order or class of Fungi, distinguished by the predominance of the spores over the receptacle. It forms the chief subdivision of the Pucciniæ, which includes the Ustilagineæ and Uredineæ. [B, 19, 75, 121, 180 (a, 24).]

CONION (Lat.), n. n. Kon-ⁱ(e)l¹o²n. Of Dioscorides, probably the Conium maculatum. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOPAGÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon-ⁱ²(e)-o²p/a²(a³)-je(ga³-e²). Ger., Koniopagen. Of Sprengel, an order of the Orchidææ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOPHOREÆ (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-for(fo²r)'-e². From κωνος, dust, and φορεῖν, to bear. Of Nylander, a series of lichens, called by him subsequently Epiconioidæ, which are distinguished by having apothecia with naked spores. It embraces the tribes Calioidææ and Særophoreææ. [B, 170.]

CONIOPSERÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o²ps-e²(a³-e²)-re(ra³-e²). Of Reichenbach, an order of lichens, comprising the Leprariaceæ, Variolariaceæ, and Arthoniaceæ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOPSIDAL, adj. Kon-ⁱ²-o²p'si²d-a²l. Ground for the purpose of correcting all spherical aberration (said of lenses). [F.]

CONIOPSIDEI (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o²ps-i²d'e²-i(e). Fr., coniopsides. Of Léveillé, a tribe of the Clinosporææ, comprising the Uredineæ, Ustilaginei, and Phragmidei. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOPTERYGIÐÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o²p-te²r-i²j(u²g²/i²d-e(a³-e²)). A group of the Megaloptera. [L, 121.]

CONIOPYCNIS (Lat.), n. f. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-pi²k(pu²k)¹ni²s. Fr., coniopycnide [Nylander]. Ger., Coniopycnidis. A conceptacle in which the spores are detached from the base by transverse segmentation. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIORCHIDÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o²r-ki²d-(ch²i²d)/e²-e(a³-e²). Of Reichenbach, a subtribe of orchids, including the Neottieæ, Arethuseæ, and Vanillinææ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOSELINUM (Lat.), n. n. Kon-ⁱ(e)-o(o²)-se²l-i(e)/nu²m-(nu²m). From κωνειον, hemlock, and εἰλαιον, parsley. Fr., coniocélin. Of Fischer, a genus of Umbelliferae nearly allied to the Ligusticum of Linnæus. [B, 19, 34, 42, 121 (a, 24).]—C. canadense [Torrey and Gray]. Hemlock parsley, found in woods from Maine to Wisconsin; used sometimes in dysentery. [B, 5, 19, 34, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOSPORIUM (Lat.), n. n. Kon-ⁱ²-o(o²)-spor(spo²r)¹i²-u²m-(u²m). From κωνος, a cone, and σπορά, a seed. Fr., coniospore. It., coniosporo. Sp., conioporo. 1. Of Link, a genus of Fungi epiphytic on maritime pines. 2. Of Nylander, the conoidal fructification of Fungi as it appears in the sphaecium of ergot. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOTHALAMEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-tha²l-(tha²l)¹a²m(a³m)/e²-e(a³-e²). From κωνος, dust, and θάλαμος, a bed. Fr., coniothalamées. Of Lindley, a division of lichens, comprising the Pulveraridææ and Calycidææ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOTHALAMI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-tha²l-(tha²l)¹a²m(a³m)-i(e). Fr., coniothalames. Of Fries, an order of lichens having naked reproductive corpuscles, without a distinct receptacle, and comprising the series Leprariææ and Variolariææ. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CONIOTHECA (Lat.), n. f. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-the(tha)¹ka². From κωνος, dust, and θήκη, a case. Fr., coniothèque. One of the cells of an anther. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CONIOTHECIUM (Lat.), n. n. Kon(ko²n)-i²-o(o²)-the(tha)¹si²-(ki²)-u²m(u²m). Of Corda, a genus of brown-spored Fungi, enveloped in a mucilaginous substance and forming dark spots on the branches of many trees. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. stilesianum. A fungus obtained by cultivating a microbe found by Stiles in the blood of cattle dead of Texas fever and named after the discoverer. [a, 24.]

CONIROSTRAL, CONIROSTRATE, adj's. Kon-ⁱ²-ro²st'-ra²l, -rat. From conus, a cone, and rostrum, a beak. Fr., conirostral. Ger., Kegelschnabelig. Sp., conirostro. Having a conical bill, like a sparrow's. [L, 343.]

CONIROSTRES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kon-ⁱ²-ro²st'/rez(ras). Of Sclater and Sundevall, a family or cohort of the Laminipiantares. Of Cuvier, De Blainville, et al., a section or suborder of the Insectores, or a family of the Cantores, comprising those which have a thick, stout, or conical beak. [L, 14, 87, 121, 147.]

CONIS (Lat.), n. f. Kon(ko²n)¹i²s. Gen., con'ios (-eos, -is). Gr., κωνίς. An old term for dust, especially that of lime or plaster, also for ashes. [A, 387; L, 94, 104.]

CONIS (Lat.), n. f. Kon(ko²n)¹i²s. Gen., con'idis (-is). Gr., κωνίς, a nit. [A, 387.] See CONIOSPORIUM. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONITES, n. pl. Kon-ⁱts. Fossil pine-cones found in anthracite and peat. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 30, 41.]

CONIUM (Lat.), n. n. Kon-ⁱ(e)u²m(u²m). Gr., κωνειον, κωνιον. Fr., c., ciguë. Ger., Schierling, It., cicuta. Sp., cicuta. 1. Poison hemlock; a genus of the Umbelliferae. 2. Of U. S. Ph. and Br. Ph., the full-grown fruit of C. maculatum gathered while yet green, and carefully dried. [B, 19, 34, 42 (a, 24).]—Abstract of c., Abstractum conii. Fr., abstrait de ciguë. Ger., Schierlingabstrakt. A preparation made by exhausting 200 parts of c.-fruit, in No. 40 powder, with 6 parts of diluted hydrochloric acid, and a sufficient quantity each of finely powdered sugar of milk, recently dried, and alcohol, the finished abstract weighing 100 parts. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Alcoholic extract of c. See Extractum conii alcoholicum.—Cataplasma conii. Fr., cataplasme de ciguë. Ger., Schierlingumschlag. It., cataplasma di cicuta. Sp., cataplasma de cicuta. Hemlock poultice, made by adding 10 fl. oz. of boiling water to 1 oz. (av.) of the leaves of C. maculatum in powder, mixed with 3 oz. (av.) of linseed meal. Extract of c. may be substituted for the leaves. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Ceratum conii. Syn.: ceratum cicutæ. A cerate made of 2 parts of spermaceti, 8 of white wax, and 12 of hemlock ointment. [L. 120 (a, 21).]—Conii extractum alcoholicum. Alcoholic extract of c.; made by exhausting 12 parts of powdered c.-leaves with 18 fl. oz. of alcohol, and sufficient diluted alcohol to obtain 18 fl. oz. of percolate, allowing to evaporate to 3 fl. oz., continuing the percolation with diluted alcohol to exhaustion, evaporating on a water-bath at a temperature of not more than 160° F., until reduced to a syrupy consistence, reducing the temperature to 120° F., adding the alcoholic solution, and evaporating to the proper consistence. [Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., viii (a, 21).]—Conii folia [Br. Ph.]. The leaves of C. maculatum. [B. 5.]—Conii fructus [Br. Ph.], Conii semen. See C. Ph., Hung. Ph.]; emplastrum cum conio maculato [Fr. Cod.]. 1. Of the Fr. Cod., see Emplâtre de ciguë. 2. Hemlock plaster; made by mixing 10 parts of finely powdered c.-leaves with 25 of melted hog's lard, 50 of yellow wax, and 5 of turpentine [Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph.]; 32 each of finely powdered c.-leaves and yellow wax, and 16 parts each of colophony and olive-oil [Dan. Ph., Gr. Ph.]; 24 of finely powdered c.-leaves, 48 of yellow wax, and 12 each of olive-oil and turpentine [Ger. Ph., 1st ed.]; 30 each of finely powdered c.-leaves and yellow wax, 9 of colophony, 15 of olive-oil, and 6 of Venetian turpentine [Swiss Ph.]; 28 each of finely powdered c.-leaves, yellow wax, and litharge plaster, and 14 of olive-oil [Netherl. Ph.]; 25 of finely powdered c.-leaves, 7½ of yellow wax, 2½ of colophony, 50 of litharge plaster, and 5 of olive-oil [Russ. Ph.]; 5 of thickened extract of c. (from the fresh leaves), 32 of Burgundy-pitch plaster, and 2 of olive-oil [Belg. Ph.]; 4 of thickened extract of c. (from the dried leaves), 6 of yellow wax, 24 of litharge plaster, and 1 part of yellow rosin [Finn. Ph.]; 4 of thickened extract of c. (from the dried leaves), 5 of yellow wax, 25 of litharge plaster, and 1 part of yellow rosin [Swed. Ph.]; straining, allowing to cool to 60°-70° F. [Dan. Ph.], and drying carefully [Austr. Ph., Dan. Ph., Hung. Ph., Netherl. Ph.]; by heating 66 parts of recently expressed juice of C. maculatum to a state of coagulation, straining through linen, preserving the residue, evaporating the colature to the consistence of a soft extract, then melting 12 parts of yellow wax, 26 of rosin, and 3 of olive-oil, straining, adding them to the extract and the residue, evaporating the whole to dryness, adding 8 parts of pulverized ammoniac, cooling, and making into rolls [Sp. Ph.]. [B. 95 (a, 21).]—Emplastrum conii ammoniacatum [Ger. Ph. (1st ed.)]. Ammoniated hemlock plaster, made by melting together on a gentle fire 2 parts of pulverized ammoniac and 2 of vinegar of squill, mixing with 9 parts of emplastrum conii, and making into rolls. [B. 95 (a, 21).]—Emplastrum conii cum plumbo iodato. Sp., emplastro de cicuta con yoduro plumbico [Sp. Ph.]. Hemlock plaster with lead iodide; made by warming 8 parts of hemlock plaster on a gentle fire, mixing them with 1 part of lead iodide, and making into rolls. [B. 95 (a, 21).]—Emplastrum conii saponatum. Sp., emplastro de cicuta jabonoso [Sp. Ph.]. Saponaceous hemlock plaster; made by melting together on a gentle fire equal parts of emplastrum conii, emplastrum hydrargyri, emplastrum plumbi gummatum, and emplastrum saponatum, and making into rolls. [B. 95 (a, 21).]—Emplastrum conii theriacale. Sp., emplastro de cicuta teriacal [Sp. Ph.]. Theriacal hemlock plaster; made by melting 24 parts each of emplastrum conii and emplastrum plumbi gummatum, and carefully mixing with 1 part of flowers of sulphur, 3 of powdered camphor, and 16 of pulvis theriacalis. At the time of using, the plaster should be spread upon fine sheep-skin, and its surface covered with a mixture of 3 parts of antimony and potassium tartrate, 2 parts of powdered camphor, and 1 part of powdered sulphur. [B. 95 (a, 21).]—Emplastrum cum conio maculato [Fr. Cod.]. See Emplâtre de ciguë.—Emplastrum cum extracto conii maculati [Fr. Cod.]. CONJONCTORION [Erhart] (Lat.), n. n. Co²n-jōn²o²n²k(yō²n²k)-to²ri²o²n. The operculum of mosses. [a, 24.]

CONJUGAISON (Fr.), n. Ko²n-zhu²-ge²-zō²n². See CONJUGATION.

CONJUGAL, adj. Ko²n²-ju²-ga². Lat., conjugalis (from conjug, a spouse). Fr., c. Pertaining to married life; in pathology, affecting both husband and wife or conveyed from the one to the other (see C. diabetes).

CONJUGALA (Lat.), n. f. Kon-ju²(yu²)-ga(ga²)/la². The Myrtus communis. [B. 88.]

CONJUGATA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n²-ju²(yu²)-ga(ga²)/ta². See CONJUGATE.—C. des Beckenausgangs. The distance between the apex of the coccyx and the lower edge of the symphysis pubis. [L. 31, 332.]—C. des Beckeneingangs (Ger.). The distance between the promontory of the sacrum and the upper edge of the pubic symphysis. [L. 31.]—C. Intescens [Vaucher]. The Conferva cegagropila. [B. 173 (a, 24).]—C'-neigung (Ger.). The angle which a diameter of the pelvis forms with the horizon or the sagittal axis of the pelvis. [L. 332.]—C. superior. See Anatomical CONJUGATE.—C. vera inferior. The distance between the posterior or upper border of the symphysis pubis and the second or third sacral vertebra. [L. 332.]

CONJUGATÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²n-ju²(yu⁴)-ga(ga³)te(ta²-e²). Fr., conjuguées. A tribe of Algae, by some referred to the Conferveae, by others separated from the latter, from which they are distinguished by the peculiar formation of their endochrome and the mode of development of their zygospores. According to Vines, they are a subdivision of the isogamous Conferveoidae, and comprise the Desmidiaceae, Mesocarpiceae, and Zygnemaceae. [B, 19, 77.]

CONJUGATE, adj. Ko²n-ju²-gat. Lat., conjugatus (from conjugare, to yoke together). Fr., conjugué. 1. In chemistry, consisting of two or more acids united to form an acid (see C. ACID). 2. In botany, paired; having the leaflets disposed in a single pair on the opposite sides. [A, 301.] 3. As a n., of Röderer, the antero-posterior diameter of the brim of the pelvis, the plane of the brim being considered as an ellipse. [A, 24.]—Anatomical c. Lat., conjugata, conjugata anatomica. Fr., diamètre droit (ou anatomique). Ger., gerader Durchmesser. It., conjugata vera. The antero-posterior diameter of the pelvis. [L, 332.]—Diagonal c. Fr., Diagonal-conjugata. The distance between the ilio-pectineal eminence of one side and the sacro-iliac synchondrosis of the other; in obstetrics, the distance between the promontory of the sacrum and the ligamentum arcuatum of the pubic arch. [L, 332.]—External c. Lat., conjugata externa. Fr., conjugué externe, diamètre de Baudelocque. Baudelocque's diameter; the distance between the posterior surface of the upper part of the sacrum and the anterior surface of the symphysis pubis, with the overlying soft parts, as measured with Baudelocque's calipers.—Normal c. Fr., conjugué normal. Ger., Normalconjugata. According to H. Meyer, the distance between the upper border of the symphysis pubis and the middle of the third sacral vertebra, on the theory that the latter is the least variable point of the sacrum. [A, 24.]—Obstetrical c. Fr., conjugué obstétrical (ou vrai), diamètre antéro-postérieur minimum (ou utile) du détroit supérieur, diamètre sacro-sus-pubien (ou sacro-pubien, ou droit), petit diamètre. Ger., gerader Durchmesser des Beckens. Syn.: true c. 1. That diameter of the pelvis which extends from the middle of the promontory of the sacrum to that point in the symphysis pubis at which, passing from above downward, it attains its greatest thickness; in other words, the shortest distance between the promontory and the symphysis. [A, 22.]

CONJUGATIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²n-ju²(yu⁴)-ga²t(ga³)-t(i²-e²-a²-e²). An old division of fresh-water Algae, now assigned to the Zygnemaceae. The species it comprises belong to the group Synsporeae established by Decaisne. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONJUGATIO (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-ju²(yu⁴)-ga(ga³)shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., conjugationis. Of Galen, a cranial nerve. [L, 349.]—C. prima. See Optic NERVE.—C. quinta. Of Galen, the auditory nerve and the communicans faciei regarded as one. [L, 349.]—C. secunda. Of Galen, the third cranial nerve. [L, 349.]—C. septima [Galen]. See Hypoglossal NERVE.—C. sexta [Galen]. See Pneumogastric NERVE.—C. tertia. Of Galen, the sixth cranial nerve and filaments of the second and third branches of the fifth cranial nerve. [L, 349.]

CONJUGATION, n. Ko²n-ju²-ga²sho²n. Gr., συνζωγία. Lat., conjugatio. Fr., conjugaison. Ger., C. It., conjugazione. Sp., conjugación. In biology, the union of two or more individuals into one; in botany, the union of certain cryptogamic zygospores for purposes of reproduction. [B, 27, 77 (a, 24).]—Multiple c. The coalescence of a number (more than two) of similar cells. [L, 121.]

CONJUGATO-PALMATE, adj. Ko²n-ju²-ga²'to-pa²'mat. Divided into two palmate arms (said of leaves). [B, 19 (a, 24).]

CONJUGATO-PINNATE, adj. Ko²n-ju²-ga²'to-pi²'nat. Lat., conjugatopinnatus. Fr., conjugué-penné. Ger., verbundengefiedert. Divided into two pinnate branches (said of leaves). [B, 19 (a, 24).]

CONJUGIUM (Lat.), n. n. Ko²n-ju²(yu⁴)'ji²(gi²)-u²m(u⁴m). See CONJUGATION and CORTION.

CONJUGO-PINNATE, adj. Ko²n-ju²-go-pi²'nat. See CONJUGATO-PINNATE.

CONJUNCTIO (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-ju²n²k(yu⁴n²k)'shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., conjunctionis. From conjungere, to join together. Fr., conjonction. Ger., Verbindung. It., congiungimento. Sp., conjunction. See ARTICULATION.—C. vasorum [Bartholini]. See ANASTOMOSES.

CONJUNCTIVA (Lat.), n. f. of adj. conjunctivus (tunica understood). Ko²n-ju²n²k(yu⁴n²k)-ti²(te)'va²(wa²). Fr., conjunctive. Ger., Bindehaut. It., conjuntiva. Sp., conjuntiva. The thin mucous membrane covering the inner surface of the eyelids and a portion of the sclera. [L.] Cf. C. bulbi and C. palpebrarum.—C. adnata (oculi). See Bulbar c.—C. arida [Mackenzie]. Xerosis of the conjunctiva. [F.]—Bulbar c., C. bulbi. Fr., conjunctive du globe oculaire. Ger., Bindehaut des Augapfels. It., conjuntiva del bulbo dell'occhio. Sp., conjuntiva de la nina del ojo. The mucous membrane covering the anterior third of the eyeball, from the fold of transission or retrotarsal fold to the corneal margin. It is loosely connected with the sclerotic, is much thinner than the conjunctiva covering the retrotarsal fold, and loses its papillary structure. The epithelium of the ocular conjunctiva is continuous with the anterior corneal epithelium. [F.; L, 115.]—C. corneae. Fr., conjunctive corneene. The layer of epithelial cells covering the anterior surface of the cornea. [L, 7.]—C. palpebræ, C. palpebrarum. See Palpebral c.—C. sclerae, C. scleroticae. Palpebral c., Tarsal c. Lat., c. palpebrarum. Fr., conjunctive palpébrale (ou des paupières). Ger., Augenlidbindehaut. It., conjuntiva palpebrale (ou delle palpebre). Sp., conjuntiva palpebral (ou de los párpados). The mucous membrane lining the inner surface of the eyelids, which at the ciliary margin passes insensibly into the cutis of the eyelids. It extends as a lining membrane into the ducts of the Meibomian glands, the lacrymal canaliculi and sac. It is of varying thickness, highly vascular and closely attached to the tarsus of the lid, and contains various glandular structures known as Krause's and also papillæ, most marked in the upper lid. [L, 115.]

CONJUNCTIVAL, adj. Ko²n-ju²n²k-ti²'va². Lat., conjunctivalis. Fr., conjunctival. Pertaining to the conjunctiva.

CONJUNCTIVE, adj. Ko²n-ju²n²k-ti²'v. Lat., conjunctivus. Fr., conjunctif. Ger., conjunctiv. See CONNECTIVE.

CONJUNCTIVITIS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-ju²n²k(yu⁴n²k)-ti²-vi-(we)'tis. Gen., conjunctivitis. For deriv., see CONJUNCTIVA and -ITIS. Fr., conjunctivite. Ger., Bindehautentzündung. It., conjuntivite. Sp., conjuntivitis. Inflammation of the conjunctival mucous membrane. [F.] The obsolete word syndesmitis was better formed.—Aphthous c. Lat., c. aphthosa. Fr., conjunctivite aphthuse. Ger., aphthöse Bindehautentzündung. See Pustular OPHTHALMIA.—Atropine c. A reddened, thickened, and granular condition of the conjunctiva, produced by the local instillation of atropine. It occurs sometimes after long-continued use, especially in old people; but some persons have an idiosyncrasy against atropine, and in these it can not be used without occasioning the above symptoms. [F.]—Autumnal c. Fr., conjunctivite automnale. Ger., herbstliche Bindehautentzündung. It., conjunctivite autunnale. Sp., conjuntivitis otoñal (ou autumnal). An aggravated type of catarrhal c. coming during the middle or latter part of August. All the symptoms of a catarrhal c. are exceedingly pronounced. As a rule, there is more or less nasal catarrh associated with it. [F.]—Blepharo-c. See Palpebral c.—Bleorrhagic c., Bleorrhoeal c. Lat., c. bleorrhagica (seu bleorrhoeica). It., conjuntivite fittenuare (ou fittenoide). Sp., conjuntivitis flictenular (ou flictenoide). A c. characterized by the appearance of one or more bladder-like, vesicular elevations in the conjunctiva, usually near the corneal margin, though they may occur at any point on the ocular conjunctiva, the conjunctiva in this neighborhood being injected and infiltrated from the corneal margin as far as the cul-de-sac. There is usually some catarrhal c. present in these cases, with the usual symptoms of injection and a mucous discharge. [F.]—C. phlyctenulosa maligna. Fr., conjunctivite phlycténulaire maligne. Ger., bösartige phlyctenuläre Bindehautentzündung. It., conjuntivite fittenuare maligna. Sp., conjuntivitis flictenular maligna. A form of c. in which the vesicles are distinctly larger than in the simple form of the disease, and involve the cornea from the start. All the subjective and objective symptoms are more marked, and there is an abundant secretion of muco-pus, and even of flocculent membrane. The vesicles are really pustules. [F.]—C. phlyctenulosa miliaris. Fr., conjunctivite phlycténulaire miliare. Ger., miliare phlyctenuläre Bindehautentzündung. It., conjuntivite fittenuare miliare. Sp., conjuntivitis flictenular miliar. A form of c. in which the vesicles are multiple and very small, like little sandy prominences, extending all round the corneal margin, and even upon the cornea itself. The subjective sensations are the same as in the simple form, though they may be marked, and there may be more or less blepharospasm. [F.]—C. phlyctenulosa pustulosa. See C. phlyctenulosa maligna.—C. phlyctenulosa simplex. Fr., conjunctivite phlycténulaire simple. Ger., einfache phlyctenuläre Bindehautentzündung. It., conjuntivite fittenuare semplice. Sp., conjuntivitis flictenular simple. A form of c. characterized by the presence of several small vesicles on or near the corneal margin, generally below the horizontal diameter. The swelling and infiltration of the conjunctiva is moderate; but there are usually considerable lacrymation and photophobia, and some little mucous secretion. membranosa. That variety of c. which is characterized by the formation of a more or less extensive membrane upon the surface of the conjunctiva of the lids. The intensity of the inflammatory process varies. In some cases the membrane is very thin and gelatinous, and comes away in threads, while in others it is dense, thick, and yellowish-white, and comes away in large pieces, or entire. When removed, it leaves a bleeding surface beneath. Here the conjunctival inflammation is probably of the same nature as the purulent form of c., but the exudation is of a higher organization. [F.]—Diphtheritic c. Lat., c. diphtheritica. Fr., conjunctivite diphthérique. Ger., diphtheritische Bindehautentzündung. It., conjunctivite difteritica. Sp., conjuntivitis difteritica. A disease characterized by a rapid and very marked swelling of the lids, due to a more or less extensive infiltration, not only of the conjunctiva, but also of the other tissues of the lids (sometimes even including the integument) by an inflammatory product of marked coagulability. This infiltration is into the tissue of the conjunctiva; there is no exudation upon its surface. It is very dense and often drives all the blood out of the lids, thus interfering with the nutrition of the parts. The conjunctiva is frequently changed into a necrotic mass, and cast off as a slough. There is a slight exudation from the surface of the conjunctiva of a thin ichorous fluid, but in the second stage of the disease it assumes a puriform character. The great danger is sloughing of the cornea from extension of the disease to the ocular conjunctiva and interference with its blood-supply. The local heat of the parts is very pronounced. The disease is rapid in its progress. The ocular conjunctiva becomes densely infiltrated, and surrounds the cornea like a hard, unyielding wall. After the disease has lasted from 5 to 8 days, the hard, board-like condition of the lids diminishes, the conjunctiva becomes loose, red, and bleeding, and appears like a granulating surface; and the ocular conjunctiva takes on the same change. The lids can now be everted and the secretion becomes purulent. In the third or cicatricial stage the depth and extent of the disease depend upon the amount of destruction by necrosis following the infiltration. [F.]—Ecematous c. C. with lesions resembling those of eczema or due to an extension of eczema to the eye. [Reuss (A, 319).]—Erysipelatous c. Ger., Augeurose. The inflammation of the palpebral and sometimes of the ocular conjunctiva which accompanies erysipelas of the face. [F.]—Exanthematous c. Lat., c. exanthematica. C. occurring in the course of an exanthematous fever or accompanied by an eruption about the eye (e. g., zoster or eczema). [Reuss (A, 319).]—Follicular c. Lat., c. follicularis. Fr., conjunctivite folliculaire. Ger., folliculäre Bindehautentzündung. It., conjunctivite follicolare. Sp., conjuntivitis follicular. A form of c. in which the ordinary inflammatory catarrhal changes are accompanied by the development of round, pale-red, hemispherical structures; which project above the level of this membrane, and subsequently disappear without leaving a trace behind. [F.; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 11, 1888, p. 163.]—Glandular c. Syn.: Adenologaditis. A term originally employed to designate inflammation of the lining membrane of the Meibomian ducts in the eyelids; and since erroneously applied to any glandular inflammation of the lids. [F.]—Gonorrhœal c. Lat., c. gonorrhœica. Fr., conjunctivite gonorrhéique. Ger., gonorrhœische Bindehautentzündung. It., conjunctivite gonorrhœica. Sp., conjuntivite gonorréica. A purulent c. presumably of a specific character and due to contact of the purulent discharge from a specific urethritis. [F.]—Granular c. Lat., c. granulosa. Fr., conjunctivite granuleuse. Ger., granulöse Bindehautentzündung. It., conjunctivite granulata. Sp., conjuntivitis granulada. 1. An acute c. characterized by hyperæmia, serous infiltration, swelling of the papillary portion, increased secretion, and the development of round, grayish-red, prominent structures, especially in the region of the retrorsal fold and neighboring part of the palpebral conjunctiva. These undergo definite changes, and frequently lead to secondary changes in the cornea and deeper parts of the lids. 2. A chronic c. of the eyelids in which the inflammatory symptoms are relatively much less pronounced in proportion to the development of the granulations than in the acute form. The secretion and swelling are less, and the vicinity of the granulations presents a velvet-like appearance. The symptoms and appearances are always more marked in the upper lid than in the lower. [F.] See also Trachoma.—Gummatous c. Lat., c. gummatosa. Fr., conjunctivite gommeuse, gomme de la conjunctive. Ger., gummöse Bindehautentzündung, Gummigeschwulst der Bindehaut. It., conjunctiva gummosa. Sp., goma de la conjuntiva. A localized c. of plastic type, occasioned by the development of a gummy tumor in the conjunctiva or subconjunctival tissue. These gummy deposits usually occur in the course of the external rectus muscle or between the latter and the superior rectus. [F.]—Hypertrophic c. Lat., c. hypertrophica. Chronic catarrhal c. with hypertrophy of the conjunctival papillæ. [Reuss (A, 319).]—Lacrymal c. A term employed by Galezowski to designate those cases of catarrhal c. which are either caused or prolonged by the retention of the tears in the cul-de-sac and on the conjunctiva. [F.]—Lymphatic c. Syn.: c. lymphatica. A form of c. considered by some authors identical with phlyctenular c.; by Herz, as a herpes ciliaris very often caused by reflex irritation of pediculi capitis through the branches of the fifth nerve supplying the conjunctiva. [F.]—Membranous c. See Croupous c.—Ocular c. Lat., c. bulbi. C. confined to the ocular conjunctiva. [Reuss (A, 319).]—Palpebral c. Lat., c. palpebrarum. Fr., conjunctivite palpébrale. C. confined to the palpebral conjunctiva. [Reuss (A, 319).]—Phlyctenular c. See C. phlyctenulosa.—Purulent c. Lat., c. purulenta. Fr., conjunctivite purulente (ou suppurative). Ger., eitriche Bindehautentzündung. It., conjunctivite purulenta. Sp., conjuntivitis purulenta. An acute inflammation of the conjunctiva, which begins either in the retrorsal fold or palpebral portion, and is characterized by great swelling, redness, and infiltration of the tissues of the lid, great œdema of the conjunctiva, both ocular and palpebral, great heat and pain, some rise of the general temperature, and a profuse purulent discharge. The complications are ulcer, slough, or abscess of the cornea, prolapse of the iris, and sometimes purulent panophthalmitis. It is markedly contagious by contact with the secretion. [F.]—Pustular c. Lat., c. pustulosa. Fr., conjunctivite pustuleuse. Ger., pustulöse Bindehautentzündung. See C. phlyctenulosa maligna.—Scrofulous c. Lat., c. scrofulosa. Fr., conjunctivite scrofuléuse. Ger., scrophulöse Bindehautentzündung. A form of chronic c. attributed to scrofula; characterized by phlyctenulæ, by miliary nodules in the region of the cornea, or by serpiginous ulceration of the cornea. [Reuss (A, 319).]—Simple c. Lat., c. simplex. Fr., conjunctivite simple. Ger., einfache Bindehautentzündung. See Catarrhal c.—Spontaneous blennorrhagic c., Strumous c. See Scrofulous c.—Suppurative c. See Purulent c.—Tarsal c. Lat., c. tarsalis. Lat., c. pharyngis inferior. Fr., constricteur inférieure du pharynx. Ger., unterer Schlundkopfschnürer. The most superficial of the c's of the pharynx, which has its origin in three slips. The lowest (the crico-pharyngeus) arises from the outer surface of the cricoid cartilage and the inferior cornu of the thyroid cartilage, the middle (the thyreo-pharyngeus) from the posterior part and occasionally from the outer surface of the ala of the thyreoid cartilage, and the uppermost (the syndesmo-pharyngeus) from the superior cornu of the thyroid cartilage. These unite and curve backward and inward to unite in the posterior median line of the pharynx with their fellows of the opposite side. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Middle c. of the pharynx. Lat., c. pharyngis medius. Fr., constricteur median du pharynx. Ger., mittlerer Schlundkopfschnürer. A muscle of deglutition the lower portion of which is covered by the inferior c. and covering above a portion of the superior c. It arises by two slips, the lowermost of which (the cerato-pharyngeus) springs from the greater cornu of the hyoid bone, and the uppermost (the chondro-pharyngeus) from the lesser cornu. It radiates downward, horizontally, and upward, and unites with its fellow of the opposite side in the posterior median line of the pharynx. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Posterior c. of the vulva. Fr., constricteur postérieur de la vulve. Ger., hinterer Schamschnürer. The analogue of the c. vaginæ of women, found in the lower animals.—Second middle c. See THYREO-PHARYNGEUS.—Speir's artery c. An instrument for the closure of arteries without the use of ligatures or other foreign bodies to be left in the wound. It consists of a flattened metal tube, six inches long, with a sliding steel tongue running its entire length and having a screw arrangement at the upper end by which the tongue may be protruded from or retracted within the sheath. The lower end of the tongue is hook-shaped to fit around the artery to be constricted. [E.]—Superior c. of the pharynx. Lat., c. pharyngis superior. Fr., constricteur pharyngis supérieure. Ger., oberer Schlundkopfschnürer. The uppermost and most deeply seated of the c. muscles of the pharynx, which is covered in a large part by the middle c. It arises from the side of the tongue in connection with the fibres of the genio-hyoglossus (the glosso-pharyngeus), from the posterior extremity of the mylo-hyoid ridge of the inferior maxilla (the mylo-pharyngeus), from the bucco-pharyngeal fascia (the bucco-pharyngeus), and from the hamular process and the lower third of the posterior edge of the internal pterygoid plate (the pterygo-pharyngeus). Its fibres curve backward to unite with its fellow of the opposite side and with the cephalo-pharyngeal fascia. [L, 31, 142, 332.]

See ANTHRACOSIS (4th def.).—Nervous c. A disease described by Morton, in which there are failure of digestion, exhaustion, pallor, and extreme marasmus, without any evidences of pulmonary disorder. It occurred especially in drinkers and those who had been living in the South Pacific (Leeward) Islands. [B, 117.]—Potter's c. Pulmonary phthisis among potters, produced by the constant inhalation of clay-dust. [D.]—Pulmonary c. See Pulmonary PHTHISIS.—Senile pulmonary c. See Senile PHTHISIS.—Tubercular c. See TUBERCULOSIS.

CONSUMPTIVE, adj. Ko²ⁿ-su²mp²ti²v. Lat., consumptivus. Fr., consomptif, phthisique. Ger., schwindsüchtig. It., tisico. Sp., tisico, ético. Pertaining to, of the nature of, or affected with consumption, especially pulmonary consumption; as a n., an individual having that disease.

CONSYRE (Fr.), n. Ko²ⁿ-n²-ser. See CONSOLIDA and SYMPHYTUM officinale.

CONTABESCENCE, n. Ko²ⁿ-ta²b-e²s-e²ns. Lat., contabescencia (from contabescere, to waste away). Fr., c. Emaciation, marasmus. [A, 325.]

CONTABESCENT, adj. Ko²ⁿ-ta²b-e²s-e²nt. Lat., contabescens. Fr., c. Wasting, consumptive. [L, 41.]

CONTACT, n. Ko²ⁿ-ta²kt. Gr., ψαῖστος. Lat., contactus (from con, together, and tangere, to touch). Fr., c. Ger., Berührung, C. It., contattio. Sp., contacto. The state in which two or more bodies touch each other; a close association between two or more individuals.—C. action. See CATALYSIS.—C. substance. See CATALYST.—Direct c., Immediate c. Fr., c. immédiat. The c. of objects or individuals with each other without the intervention of another object or individual. [A, 301.]—Indirect c., Mediate c. Fr., c. mediat. The c. of a person with another or with anything by the intervention of some one or something. [L, 41.] C. by means of an interposed substance; in pathology, see MEDIATE CONTAGION.—Optical c. A c. between two transparent surfaces (as when two varieties of glass are united to form a single lens), so that there is no change in the direction of rays of light passing through the two media; also the c. of pigments with glass, so that there is no reflection from the painted side. [L.]

CONTACTILE, CONTACTUAL, ADJ'S. Ko²ⁿ-ta²kt'i²l, -u²-a²l. See TACTILE.

CONTACTUOUS, adj. Ko²ⁿ-ta²kt'u²-u²s. Contagious. ["Pop. Sci. Monthl.," Feb., 1880, p. 461 (B).]

CONTACTUS (Lat.), n. m. Ko²ⁿ-ta²kt(ta²kt')tu²s(tu²s). Gen., c. See CONTACT.—C. lateralis nervorum opticozum. See OPTIC CHIASM.

CONTAGE (Fr.), n. f. Ko²ⁿ-ta²zh. See CONTAGION.

CONTAGES (Lat.), n. f. Ko²ⁿ-ta(ta²)'jez(gas). Gen., contag'is. From contingere, to touch. See CONTACT and CONTAGION.

CONTAGIÉ (Fr.), n. Ko²ⁿ-ta²-zhe-a. A person to whom a contagion has been communicated. [L, 41.]

CONTAGIFÈRE (Fr.), adj. Ko²ⁿ-ta²-zhe-fe²r. From contages, contagion, and ferre, to bear. Carrying contagious virus; acting as the vehicle of contagion. [L, 41.]

CONTAGIO-MIASMATIC, adj. Ko²ⁿ-ta²'ji²-o-mi-a²-z-ma²t'i²kt. Contagious and miasmatic. [D, 3.]

CONTAGION, n. Ko²ⁿ-taj'y²u²n. Lat., contages, contagio, contagium (from contingere, to touch). Fr., contage, c. Ger., Ansteckung (1st def.), Ansteckungsstoff (2d def.). It., contagione. Sp., contagio. 1. The communication of disease from one individual to another by means of direct or mediate contact or, as used by some writers (in the sense of infection), by effluvia, etc. 2. The material cause or virus of a contagious disease. [A, 301, 322.]—C. miasmaticque (Fr.). C. propagated by a miasm. [L, 41.]—C. morte (Fr.). See MEDIATE c.—C. nerveuse (Fr.). C. névrosique (Fr.). The occurrence or causation in neurotic persons of symptoms like those manifested by other persons with whom they are associated; neurotic mimicry. [A, 385; L, 41.]—C. parasitaire (Fr.). C. by means of a living organism. [L, 41.]—C. purulente (Fr.). C. by contact with pus (as in gonorrhoea). [L, 41.]—C. virulente (Fr.). C. by the means of a virus. [L, 41.]—C. vive (Fr.). See IMMEDIATE c. and CONTAGIUM VIVUM.—Direct c. Contact of the living body with any specific morbid material capable of development within or upon that body, and by which disease, similar to that of which the materies morbi formed a part, is reproduced. [a, 25.]—Immediate c. Fr., c. immédiat, c. vive. Ger., unmittelbare Ansteckung. It., contagione immediata. Sp., contagio directo. C. due to actual contact with an affected person. [L, 41.]—Mediate c. Fr., c. mediat, c. morte. Ger., mittelbare Ansteckung. It., contagione mediata. Sp., contagio indirecto. The acquisition of a contagious disease from an intermediary person rather than directly from one affected with it. [J.]

CONTAGIONIST, n. Ko²ⁿ-taj'y²u²n-i²st. Fr., contagionniste, contagionnaire. A believer in the contagious origin of a given disease. [A, 108.]

CONTAGIONISME (Fr.), n. Ko²ⁿ-ta²-zhe-on-nezm. The doctrine which recognizes certain diseases as contagious. [L, 41.]

CONTAGIOSI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Ko²ⁿ-ta(ta²)-ji²(gi²)-os'i(e). Contagious diseases. [L, 97.]

CONTAGIOSITY, n. Ko²ⁿ-taj-i²-o²s'i²t-i². Fr., contagiosité. Ger., Ansteckbarkeit, Contagiosität. The property of being contagious, also the degree of contagiousness of a given disease. [A, 301; L, 41.]

CONTAGIOUS, adj. Ko²ⁿ-taj'y²u²s. Lat., contagiosus. Fr., contagieux. Ger., ansteckend, contagiös. It., Sp., contagioso. Susceptible of communication by contagion. [A, 301.]

CONTAGIOUSNESS, n. Ko²ⁿ-taj'y²u²s-ne²s. Fr., contagiosité. Ger., Contagiosität, Ansteckungsfähigkeit. It., contagiosità. Sp., contagiosidad. The quality of being contagious.

CONTAGIUM (Lat.), n. n. Ko²ⁿ-ta(ta²)'ji²(gi²)-u²m(u²m). Fr., contage c. Ger., C., Ansteckungsstoff. It., Sp., contagio. A virus or material having contagious properties. [D, 1.]—C. animatum. See C. vivum.—C. febrile. See C. halituosum.—C. fixum. A non-volatile medium of contagion. [D, 3.]—C. halituosum. A contagious exhalation from a patient, especially the breath. [D, 3.]—C. pellis. An obsolete name for scabies. [G.]—C. per contactum. See DIRECT CONTAGION.—C. vivum. Any living organism, animal or vegetable, that is the essential cause of a contagious disease.—Nervous c. A hypothetical medium of the spread of certain diseases of the nervous system. [Remak, "Med. Central-Ztg.," 1864, No. 87 (D).]

CONTAMINATION, n. Ko²ⁿ-ta²m-i²n-a'shu²n. Lat., contaminatio (from contaminare, to pollute, corrupt), contamen. Fr., c. Ger., C. The state of being corrupted by some extrinsic influence.

CONTAMINATUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²ⁿ-ta²m(ta²m)-i²n-a(a²)'tu²s-(tu²s). Fr., contaminé (1st def.), taché (2d def.). Ger., gefleckt (2d def.). 1. Contaminated. 2. As a species name, spotted. [L, 180.]

CONTÉMELE (Fr.), n. Ko²ⁿ-t'e²me²l. The Agaricus procerus. [L, 105.]

CONTEMPLABILIS (Lat.), adj. Ko²ⁿ-te²mp-la²b(la²b)'i²l-i²s. From contemplare, to watch closely. Requiring special watchfulness (said anciently of certain supposed critical days of a disease). [A, 325.]

CONTENANT (Fr.), adj. Ko²ⁿ-t'na²n². 1. Containing, retentive. 2. Continent. [L, 41.]

CONTENBLÄTTER (Ger.), n. pl. Ko²ⁿ-te²nt'blat-te²r. The Prunus lauro-cerasus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CONTENTIF (Fr.), adj. Ko²ⁿ-ta²n²-tef. See RETENTIVE.

CONTENTION (Fr.), n. Ko²ⁿ-ta²n²-se-o²n². Lat., contentio. See RETENTION.

CONTENU (Fr.), n. Ko²ⁿ-t'nu². The contents of anything.—C. cellulaire. See CELL-contents.

CONTEXTUS (Lat.), n. m. Ko²ⁿ-te²xt'u²s(u²s). Gen., c. From contexere, to weave, to construct. A tissue.—C. cellululosus. Cellular tissue. [L, 180.]

CONTEXTURE (Fr.), n. Ko²ⁿ-te²xt-u²r. See TEXTURE.

CONTIA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²ⁿ-shi²(ti²)-a². Of Pliny, a variety of the olive. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONTIGUITY, n. Ko²ⁿ-ti²-gu²'i²t-i². Fr., contiguïté. Ger., Contiguität. The state of being contiguous; of a limb, a joint as opposed to the continuity of the bones.

CONTIGUOUS, adj. Ko²ⁿ-ti²-gu²-u²s. Gr., συναφής. Lat., contiguus (from contingere, to touch). Fr., contigu. Ger., contigiös. It., Sp., contiguo. Literally, touching; in contact or nearly in contact, adjacent, neighboring. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

CONTINENCE, CONTINENCY, n's. Ko²ⁿ-ti²n-e²ns, -e²ns-i². Lat., continentia (from continens, temperate). Fr., c. Ger., Enthaltſamkeit. It., continenza. Sp., continencia. Self-restraint, especially abstinence from sexual indulgence.

CONTINUA (Lat.), n., f. of adj. continuus. Ko²ⁿ-ti²n(u²)-a². See CONTINUED FEVER.

CONTINUED, adj. Ko²ⁿ-ti²n(u²)-d. Lat., continuus (from continere, to hang together). Fr., continu. Ger., beständig, fortlaufend, ununterbrochen, anhaltend. It., continuo. Sp., continuo. Uninterrupted; of a fever, without intermissions; of a morbid cause, existing throughout the continuance of a disease; of a stem, peduncle, or fruit, not jointed. [B, 121 (a, 24); L.]

CONTINUITÄT (Ger.), n. Ko²ⁿ-tin-u²-i²t-at'. See CONTINUITY.—C'sstörung. See SOLUTION OF CONTINUITY.

CONTINUITY, n. Ko²ⁿ-ti²n-u²'i²t-i². Lat., continuitas. Fr., continuité. Ger., Continuität, Zusammenhang. It., continuità. Sp., continuidad. The state of being continuous, unbroken, uninterrupted.

CONTORSILE, adj. Ko²n-to²r²i²l. From contorque, to turn, to twist. Capable of torsion (said of leaves, etc.). [a, 24.]

CONTORSIO (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-to²r²sh²i²(si²)-o. See CONTORTION.

CONTORTÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²n-to²r²t(e)a²-e². From contortus, twisted. Fr., contortées. A group of plants comprising the Gentianaceae, Apocynaceae, Asclepiadaceae, Oleaceae, etc., characterized by a gamopetalous corolla which in profoliation is twisted or turned on itself. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONTORTED, adj. Ko²n-to²r²t'e²d. Lat., contortus. Fr., contourné. Ger., gedreht. Twisted. See C. ÆSTIVATION.

CONTORTI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Ko²n-to²r²t'i(e). See CONTORTÆ.

CONTORTION, n. Ko²n-to²r²shu²n. Lat., contortio (from contorque, to twist). Fr., contorsion. Ger., Verdrehung, Verknüpfung. A twisting or writhing of the body or of a part; also an old name for a sprain, ileus, lateral curvature of the spine, and wry-neck. [L, 94.]

CONTORTIPLICATE, adj. Ko²n-to²r²t-i²p²li²-kat. Lat., contortiplicatus (from contortus, twisted, and plicatus, folded). Twisted and folded on itself. [L, 81.]

CONTORTIVE, adj. Ko²n-to²r²t'i²v. Twisted. [B, 77.]

CONTORTO-CONVOLUTIF (Fr.), adj. Ko²n-to²r²t-o-ko²n²-vol-u²-tef. From contortus, twisted, and convolutus, convoluted. Twisted and convoluted. [L, 41.] See Corrugated ÆSTIVATION.

CONTORTUPLICATUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-to²r²t-u²(u²)-pli²-kat-(ka²t)/u²s(u²s). See CONTORTIPLICATE.

CONTORTUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-to²r²t/u²s(u²s). See CONTORTED.

CONTOURNÉ (Fr.), adj. Ko²n²-turn-a. Contorted, twisted; of limbs, deformed; of a shell, spirally shaped. [L, 41.]

CONTRA-APERTURA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-tra²-a²p(u²a²p)-u²r-(e²r)-tu²r(tu²r)/a². From contra, opposite to, and aperire, to open. Fr., contre-ouverture. Ger., Gegenöffnung. It., contrapertura. Sp., contra-abertura. A counter-opening. [L, 81.]

CONTRACAPITANA, n. At Carthage, the Aristolochia anguicida. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONTRA-COLEVRA, n. In South America, the Ægrophila salutaris. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONTRACTED, adj. Ko²n-tra²kt'e²d. Lat., contractus (from contrahere, to draw together). Fr., contracté. Ger., zusammengezogen. It., contratto. Sp., contraído. Drawn together upon itself, narrowed, shortened; lessened in size; of a muscle, in a state of active contraction. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONTRACTILE, adj. Ko²n-tra²kt'i²l. Lat., contractilis. Fr., c. Ger., contractil, zusammenziehbar. It., contractile. Sp., contractil. Capable of contracting; tender to contract. [L, 56, 109.]

CONTRACTILITAS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-tra²kt-i²l-ti²-a²s(a²s). Gen., contractilitat'is. See CONTRACTILITY.

CONTRACTILITÉ (Fr.), n. Ko²n-tra²kt-tel-e-ta. Contractility. [K.]—C. animale [Bichat]. See Voluntary CONTRACTILITY.—C. organique [Bichat]. See Involuntary CONTRACTILITY.

CONTRACTILITY, n. Ko²n-tra²kt-i²l-ti². Lat., contractilitas. Fr., contractilité. Ger., Contractilität, Contractionsvermögen, Zusammenziehbarkeit. It., contractilità. Sp., contractilidad. Capacity for or tendency to contraction; especially capacity for responding to stimulation by movements. [K; L, 135.]—Amoeboid c. See Cellular c.—Animal c. See Voluntary c.—Cellular c. Fr., contractilité cellulaire. The c. of masses of protoplasm. [L, 44 (a, 14).]—Ciliary c. Fr., contractilité ciliaire. Protoplasmic movement originating in the substance of the ciliary cells, and without influence from the nerve-centres; divided by Valentin into imbatifform, undulatory, oscillatory, and uncinat. [L, 41, 44.]—Electrical c. Fr., contractilité électrique. The c. of a muscle on electrical stimulation.—Faradaic c. Fr., contractilité faradique. The c. of a muscle on stimulation with a faradaic current.—Galvanic c. Fr., contractilité galvanique. The c. of a muscle on galvanic stimulation.—Involuntary c. Fr., c. organique [Bichat]. Capacity for movements (such as those in smooth or unstriated muscular fibre) which are not dependent upon or governed by the will. [K.]—Muscular c. Fr., contractilité musculaire. Ger., muskuläre Contractilität. The contractile power of a muscle.—Organic c. Fr., contractilité organique [Bichat]. See Involuntary c.—Organic insensible c. Fr., contractilité organique insensible [Bichat]. The contractility of the smooth muscle-fibres of glands, ducts, and capillaries; manifested by contractions so limited in extent as to escape notice, except on minute observation. [K; L, 41.]—Organic sensible c. Fr., contractilité organique sensible [Bichat]. See Involuntary CONTRACTILITY.—Voluntary c. C. (such as that in striped muscular fibre) which depends upon or is governed by the will of the individual. [K.]

CONTRACTION, n. Ko²n-tra²kt'shu²n. Gr., συστολή (from συστέλλεσθαι, to contract). Lat., contractio (from contrahere, to contract), systole. Fr., c. Ger., Zusammenziehung, Zuckung, C., Contraction, Verengung (constriction), Verkürzung (shortening). It., contrazione, ristrettezza (narrowing). Sp., contracción. 1. The act of contracting. 2. The state of being contracted. 3. In physiology, the sum of the phenomena which accompany a single muscular movement. [K.]—Anodal-closure c. See ANODAL-CLOSURE c.—Anodal-opening c. See ANODAL-OPENING c.—Breaking c. Ger., Öffnungszuckung. The contraction which takes place in a muscle, through which a galvanic current is passing, at the moment of breaking the circuit. [B, 12.]—Cathodal-closure c. See Cathodal-closure CLOSURE.—Cathodal-duration c. A contraction occurring at the cathode and persisting during the entire time of closure of the circuit. The same as cathodal-closure teta-

nus. [B, 21.]—Cathodal-opening c. See Cathodal-opening CLOSURE.—Cicatricial c. Fr., rétraction cicatricielle. The gradual c. of a scar.—C. en sablier, C. en verre (Fr.). See Hour-glass c.—C. musculaire dynamique (Fr.). Muscular c. accompanied by well-marked calorific phenomena. [K, 31.] Cf. C. musculaire statique.—C. musculaire statique [Béclard] (Fr.). Muscular c. unaccompanied by external phenomena, such as the development of heat. [K, 31.]—C's mittel (Ger.). An astringent.—C's ring (Ger.). See C. RING.—Dupuytren's (finger) c. A contracture of the palmar fascia, producing permanent flexion of the fingers. [Keen, "Phila. Med. Times," March 11, 1882; "Med. News," April 8, 1882.]—Fibrillar c's, Fibrillary c's, Fr., c's fibrillaires. Ger., fibrilläre Zuckungen. Phenomena sometimes observed in muscles after section of the main trunks of their motor nerves (especially the facial). They consist of alternate c's of the separate bundles of fibres. The cause is probably intrinsic in the muscles, rather than central. It may be due to disease. [Landois (K); "N. Y. Med. Jour.," May 19, 1888, p. 533.]—Front-tap c. A modification of the ankle-clonus described by Gowers. It is a reflex extension movement of the foot elicited by tapping the muscles on the front of the leg. [Landois (K).]—Hour-glass c. Fr., c. en sablier, c. en verre de montre. Ger., stundenglasförmige (oder sanduhrförmige) C., partieller Uteruskampf (Fr.), Nachgeburtzeit, spastischer Stricture des Uterus. A form of irregular c. of the uterus in which it is constricted in its meridional zone so as to resemble an hour-glass.—Idio-muscular c. Fr., c. idio-musculaire. Ger., idio-muskuläre Kontraktion. 1. A localized c. observed in a fatigued muscle when struck violently with a percussion-hammer; described by Schiff. [Landois (K).] 2. See MYO-EDEMA.—Idiopathic c. with rigidity. See CONTRACTURE.—Independent (or Inherent) c's of the uterus [Bedford]. The ante-partum c's of the uterus commonly termed "painless." [A, 95.]—Initial c. Ger., anfängliche Zuckung. 1. The first c. observed in a muscle on the application of a series of rapid induction shocks, before the occurrence of tetanus. 2. A c. occurring in a rheoscopic limb when its nerve is applied to a muscle tetanized with strychnine. [Landois (K); K, 19.]—Irregular c. of the uterus. Fr., rétraction spasmodique, stricture (ou étranglement de l'utérus). Ger., partieller Uteruskampf, spastische Stricture der Gebärmutter. It., contrazioni spasmodiche dell' utero. Sp., contracción espasmódica de la matriz. C. of certain zones of the uterus of a spasmodic sort, so as to impede the expulsion of its contents or the introduction of the hand into its cavity. Cf. Hour-glass c.—Making c. Ger., Schliessungszuckung. The c. which takes place in a muscle, through which the galvanic current is passing, at the moment of making the circuit. [B, 12.]—Muscular c. Fr., c. musculaire. Ger., muskuläre C., Muskeln c. C. due to muscular action; the c. of a muscle when it is called into action.—Over-maximal c. Ger., übermaximale Zuckung. A further c. (exceeding the previous maximum) which takes place when the strength of a stimulus applied to a muscle is gradually increased until a maximum of c. is obtained, and then, after a short interval, is increased still further; first observed by Fick. [Landois (K).]—Paradoxic c. Fr., c. paradoxale. Ger., paradoxische Zuckung. 1. A c. of the muscles supplied by both branches of a large nerve (like the sciatic in the frog) observed when an electrical current is applied to one of its two primary divisions. [Landois (K).] 2. Of Westphal, the c. of a muscle when its points of origin and insertion are suddenly approximated (i. e., when the muscle is suddenly relaxed); usually associated with paresis of the lower extremities. [D, 35.]—Pelvic c. Fr., rétrécissement du bassin (ou pelvien), angustie pelvienne. Ger., Beckenverengung. It., contrazione della pelvi. Sp., contracción de la pelvis. Syn.: confinement of the pelvis. Narrowing of the pelvis in any of its diameters.—Peristaltic c. Fr., c. péristaltique. Ger., péristaltische fortschreitende C. The undulatory c. of the muscular coat of the intestines by which their contents are propelled downward.—Permanent c. See CONTRACTURE.—Perverted uterine c. Fr., c. utérine pervertie. A general term for irregular and spastic uterine c. [A, 15.]—Pulsatile c's. Fr., c's pulsatiles. Ger., pulsirende Zusammenziehungen. Certain c's of the orbicularis palpebrarum muscles which are synchronous with the pulse. [K, 16.]—Residual c. [Hermann]. Ger., residuale (oder bleibende) Zuckung. See Elastic after-VIBRATION.—Rhythmical c. A c. (such as that of the heart) which recurs at regular intervals. [K.]—Sanduhrförmige C. (Ger.). See Hour-glass c.—Secondary c. Ger., secondäre Zuckung. A muscular c. corresponding to the cardiac systole observed when the nerve of a muscle-nerve preparation is laid upon a living heart; described by Matteucci in 1842. [Landois (K).]—Spastic c. Fr., c. spastique. Ger., spastische C. Convulsive muscular c. without intervals of relaxation, as in tetanus.—Stundenglasförmige C. (Ger.). See Hour-glass c.—Tetanic c. Lat., contractio tetanica. Fr., c. tétanique. Ger., starrkrampfartige Zuckung. It., contrazione tetanica. Sp., contracción tetánica. Firm and prolonged muscular c. such as occurs in tetanus or when rapidly repeated induction shocks are passed through a muscle. [K; D.]—Unipolar induced c. Ger., unipolar induzirte Zuckung. A c. such as is produced in a frog's muscle (not entirely insulated) when a single electrode is applied to it, the other end of the circuit being connected with the ground. [Landois (K).]—Vermicular c. See Peristaltic c.

CONTRACTOR (Lat.), n. m. Ko²n-tra²kt(trä²k)/to²r. Gen., contractor'is. A muscle the action of which is to render a part tense; a tensor.—C. chordæ [Oehl]. A bundle of muscular fibres extending between the left auriculo-ventricular valve and the wall of the ventricle, lying in certain of the chordæ tendineæ. [A, 262; L, 31.]

CONTRACTUR (Ger.), n. Ko²n-tra²kt-tur'. See CONTRACTURE.—Biegsame C. See CONTRACTURE SOUPLE.—Idiopathische C. See Neuropathic CONTRACTURE and TETANY.—Secondäre C. See Paralytic CONTRACTURE.

CONTRACTURA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²n-tra²kt(trä²k)-tu²r(tur)/a². See CONTRACTURE.—C. ab acrimonia irritante. Contracture resulting from some irritating cause. [L, 102.]—C. ab antagonists paralyticis. See Paralytic Contracture.—C. ab inflammatione. Contracture arising from inflammation. [L, 102.]—C. articularis. Permanent rigid contraction of muscles near joints. [L; L, 290.]—C. artuum. Ger. Zusammenziehung der Glieder. See Contracture (1st def.).—C. a spasmo. Tonic spasm; cramp depending on spasm. [L, 102.]—C. phimosi. Phimosi. [L, 290.]—C. Pottii. Pott's disease. [L, 135.]—C. superficialis. See Pharpha cutaneum.

CONTRACTURA, n. Lat., contractura. Fr., c. Ger., Contractur. It., contrattura. Sp., contractura. 1. Permanent contraction of a soft structure, especially a muscle, with rigidity. 2. In physiology, the condition of permanent contraction assumed by a muscle after prolonged and excessive stimulation. 3. In orthopedic surgery, a muscle spasmodically contracted. [D, 35; K, 16.]

Active myopathic c. Fr., c. myopathique active. A form of myopathic c. due to long-continued or excessive use of the affected muscles, to myositis, the effect of cold, etc. [L, 87.]—C. par apprehension [Dally] (Fr.). A voluntary c. of the muscles about a diseased part when manipulation is attempted and is painful. [L, 87.]—C. par distension des antagonistes (Fr.). A term suggested by Eilenmeyer to replace paradoxical contraction. In his account, however, only hysterical subjects are referred to, while in Westphal's no such discrimination is made [C. Féré, "Prog. méd.," Jan. 26, 1884, p. 69 (D)].—C. pelvienne (Fr.). An intermittent lameness of horses, supposed to be due to some affection of the muscles, etc., of the legs. [L, 87.]—C. reflexe ascendante par traumatisme articulaire [Duchenne] (Fr.). A form of c. due to an injury of articulations (especially those of the hand), in which the muscles moving the affected joint are the ones affected. [L, 87.]—C. rhumatismale des nourrices (Fr.). Tetany in nursing women. [D, 72.]—C. souple (Fr.). Ger., biegsame Contractur. Of M. Regnaud, a peculiar stiffness of the joints in hemiplegics, the position or that of flexion, which yields readily to manual correction to an effort of the patient's will, but is gradually reproduced. [Seeligmüller (A, 319).]—C. sympptomatique (Fr.). See Neuropathic c.—Essential c. Fr., c. essentielle. Tetanus. [L, 49, 88.]—Hysterical c. Fr., c. hystérique. Ger., hysterische Contractur. Neuropathic c. due to hysteria. It usually affects the lower extremity, comes on suddenly, and after awhile disappears as suddenly as it came. CONVALLAIRE (Fr.), n. $Ko^2n-va^2l-a^2r$. See CONVALLARIA.

CONVALLALARINE (Fr.), n. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}a^1\text{-}a^1\text{-}a^1\text{-}en$. A principle extracted by water from Convallaria maialis; said to be more active than convallarin. [L., 87; "Prog. méd.," July 8, 1882, p. 528.]

CONVALLAMARETIN, CONVALLAMARHETIN, n's. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}a^2r\text{-}et^{12}n$. From convallaria (q. v.), and $\beta\gamma rrv$, resin. Fr., convallamarétine. A product, $C_{20}H_{32}O_8$, obtained from the action of sulphuric acid on convallarin. [B., 14 (a, 24).]

CONVALLAMARIN, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}a^2m\text{-}a^2r\text{-}i^2n$. From convallaria (q. v.), and amarus, bitter. Fr., convallamarine. Ger., C. A glucoside, $C_{23}H_{44}O_{12}$, found by Walz in Convallaria maialis; white powder, soluble in water, in ethyl alcohol, and in methyl alcohol, but insoluble in ether, in chloroform, and in amyl alcohol. In small doses, it is an active emetic. It acts on the heart, through the vagi nerves, slowing its action, and increasing the blood pressure; used in cardiac dropsy; its effects are not so cumulative as those of digitalis. [B., 5 (a, 24); Tanret, "Bull. gén. de thérap.," Aug. 30, 1882, p. 179.]

CONVALLARETIN, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}a^2r\text{-}et^{12}n$. See CONVALLARHETIN.

CONVALLARIA (Lat.), n. f. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1(wa^1)\text{-}la(la^3)rj^2\text{-}a^3$. Fr., convallaire, muguet. Ger., Maiblume. 1. May lily, lily of the valley; of Linnaeus, a genus of the Liliaceae, tribe Convallarieae, with a subglobose, campanulate perianth, of 6 lobes; stamens 6; ovary 2 (rarely 3)-celled; berry blue, 2-celled, and from 2- to 10-seeded; leaves radical; and scape bearing an umbel. 2. CONVALLARIA MAIALIS. [A., 327.]

CONVALLARICEÆ [Link] (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1(wa^1)\text{-}la(la^3)\text{-}ri^2\text{-}a^3$. Fr., convallariacées. A suborder of the Liliaceae, comprising Convallaria, Polygonatum, Maianthemum, Smilacina, Dianella, and Streptopus. [B., 170 (a, 24).]

CONVALLARIÆ [Reichenbach] (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1(wa^1)\text{-}la(la^3)\text{-}ri^2\text{-}e(a^3\text{-}e^2)$. A subdivision of the Smilacineæ. [B., 170.]

CONVALLARIÉ (Fr.), adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}a^2r\text{-}e\text{-}a$. Resembling the Convallaria; as a n. in the f. pl., c'es, a section of the order Asparagineæ, family Liliaceæ. [L., 41.]

CONVALLARIÉÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1(wa^1)\text{-}la^2(la^3)\text{-}ri^2(e^2\text{-}e^3\text{-}e^2)$. Fr., convallariées. 1. Of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Liliaceae, comprising Convallaria, Theropogon, Spearantha, and Reineckea. 2. Of Endlicher, a tribe of the Smilacaceae, comprising Drymophila, Streptopus, Polygonatum, Convallaria,

Smilacina, Smilax, Ripogonum, Luzuriaga, Callixene, Ruscus, and Prosartes. 3. Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Smilacineæ, comprising the same genera as Endlicher's, and in addition Danadia and the divisions Herreriæ, Eriospermeæ, Roxburghiæ, and Philesiææ. [B., 42, 170, (a, 24).]

CONVALLARIN, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}a^2r\text{-}i^2n$. A glucoside, $C_{23}H_{44}O_{12}$, obtained from Convallaria maialis; it occurs in colorless prisms, of acrid taste, scarcely soluble in water, but readily so in alcohol and in ammonia, and insoluble in ether. It is a purgative, though great discrepancy exists as to its therapeutic effects, owing, it is supposed, to the impurity of the drug. [B., 5, 14 (a, 24).]

CONVALLARINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1(wa^1)\text{-}a^2r\text{-}i^2n$ (en/e(a^3\text{-}e^2)). Of Reichenbach, a division of the Sarmentaceæ, comprising Convallaria and Streptopus. [B., 121 (a, 24).]

CONVALLARHETIN, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}a^2r\text{-}et^{12}n$. From convallaria (q. v.), and $\beta\gamma rrv$, resin. Fr., convallarrhétine. A poisonous substance, $C_{28}H_{42}O_{10}$, resulting, in conjunction with sugar, from the action of acids on convallarin. [A., 385; B., 5, 14 (a, 24).]

CONVALLIA (Lat.), n. f. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1(wa^1)\text{-}li^2\text{-}a^3$. See CONVALLARIA.—Flores convallieæ. The flowers of Convallaria maialis. [B., 180 (a, 24).]

CONVALLIUM (Lat.), n. n. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1(wa^1)\text{-}li^2\text{-}u^3m(u^4m)$. Of Reichenbach, a section of the genus Convallaria of Adanson. [B., 121 (a, 24).]

CONVAL LILY, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}va^1\text{-}li^2\text{-}i^2$. The Convallaria maialis. [A., 505.]

CONVELLENS (Lat.), adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2(we^2)\text{-}le^2nz(lans)$. See CONVULSIVE.

CONVENTIO (Lat.), CONVENTUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2n(we^2n)\text{-}shi^2(ti^2)\text{-}o\text{-}u^3s(u^4s)$. Gen., conventionis, ventus. From convenire, to come together. See CORTUS.

CONVERGENCE, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}vu^3rj^2e^2ns$. Lat., convergentia. Fr., c. Ger., Zusammenlaufen, Näherung. It., convergenza. Sp., convergencia. The state of being convergent; also the power of converging or bringing together (said especially of the eyes). [B.]

CONVERGENT, adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}vu^3rj^2e^2nt$. Lat., convergens (from con, together, and vergere, to incline). Fr., c, convergent, convergente. Ger., convergierend, zusammenlaufend. It., Sp., convergente. Inclining toward each other, coming together at a common point; in botany, nearly synonymous with convivent. [B., 121 (a, 24).] See also C. STRABISMUS.

CONVERGENTI-NERVOSE, adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}vu^3rj^2e^2nt\text{-}i^2\text{-}nu^3rv'$. Lat., convergentinervis (from convergens, convergent, and nervus, a nerve). Fr., converginervé. Having veins which diverge from the midrib and converge toward the margin (said of leaves). [B., 19 (a, 24).]

CONVERGINÉ (Fr.), adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2r\text{-}zhen\text{-}a$. See CONVERGENT.

CONVERGINERVED, adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}vu^3rj^2i^2\text{-}nu^3rvd$. Lat., converginervius. Fr., converginervé. See CONVERGENTI-NERVOSE.

CONVERGING, adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}vu^3rj^2i^2ng$. See CONVERGENT.

CONVERSION, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}vu^3r\text{-}zhu^3n$. Lat., conversio (from convertere, to transform, change over). Fr., c. Ger., Wechsel, C. It., conversione. Sp., conversión. A changing (of form or material features).

CONVEX, adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x'$. Lat., convexus. Fr., convexe. Ger., c, gewölbt. It., convesso. Sp., convexo. Having a curved surface the centre of which is more elevated than the borders. [L., 81.]

CONVEXIROSTRE (Fr.), adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x\text{-}e\text{-}ro^3s\text{-}tr$. $-ve^2\text{-}xe\text{-}ro^3s\text{-}tr$. From convexus, convex, and rostrum, a beak. Having a convex beak. [L., 41.]

CONVEXITY, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x\text{-}i^2t\text{-}i^2$. Lat., convexitas. Fr., convexité. Ger., Wölbung, Convexität. It., convessità. Sp., convexidad. A convex surface (as of the cerebral hemispheres). [I., 23.]

CONVEXO-CONCAVE, adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x\text{-}o\text{-}ko^2n\text{-}kav'$. Lat., convexoconvexus. Ger., hohlgewölbt, convex-concav. It., convesso-concavo. Sp., convexo-concavo. See CONCAVO-CONVEX.

CONVEXO-CONVEX, adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x\text{-}o\text{-}ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x'$. Lat., convexoconvexus. Fr., convexo-convexe. Ger., doppelt-convex, doppelt gewölbt. It., convesso-convesso. Sp., bi-convexo-convexo doble. See BICONVEX.

CONVEXULUS (Lat.), adj. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x(we^2x)\text{-}u^2(lu^4)\text{-}u^3s(u^4s)$. Dim. of convexus. Fr., convexule. Very slightly convex. [L., 180.]

CONVOLUTE, CONVOLUTED, adj's. $Ko^2n\text{-}vol\text{-}u^2v\text{-}u^2e^2d$. Lat., convolutus (from convolvere, to roll together). Fr., convoluté, convolutif. Ger., aufgerollt, tutenförmig. It., rotolato, rotolato, envuelto. Rolled upon itself (said of leaves, such as those of the apricot [see C. ASTIVATION]); in entomology, infolding completely (said of wings enveloping the body and giving it a cylindrical appearance). [B., 19, 77 (a, 24); L.]

CONVOLUTIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^2n\text{-}ve^2x(we^2x)\text{-}u^2(tu^4)\text{-}i^2d\text{-}e(a^3\text{-}e^2)$. Syn.: Acela. A family of the Rhabdocela. [L., 353.]

CONVOLUTION, n. $Ko^2n\text{-}vol\text{-}u^2\text{-}shu^2n$. Lat., convolutio (from convolvere, to wind together), gyrus (from gyros, a ring). Fr., convolution, pli, gyre (3d def.). Ger., Windung. It., convoluzione. Sp., convolución, circunvolución. 1. The process of winding spirally or irregularly. 2. A coil of intestine, also a raised portion of similar appearance on the surface of the brain. 3. A depression on the inner surface of the skull, corresponding to a cerebral c. 4. The phase or condition of a nucleus in indirect or caryocentric division in which the nuclear fibrils become sharply defined, twisted, and convoluted, so as to give somewhat the appearance of an irregularly wound ball of twine. [J., 32; L., 31.]—Angular c. Lat., gyrus angu- laris, gyrus parietalis secundus. Fr., pli courbe [Gratiolet], circunvolución angular. It., circunvoluzione angolare. Sp., circunvolución angular. A gyrus, sometimes extremely complex, which forms the posterior portion of the inferior parietal lobe. It is continuous in front with the supramarginal c., and descends behind the parallel fissure to unite with the middle temporo-sphenoidal c. It is connected with the occipital lobe by annectant gyri. [I, 1.]—Annectant c's. Lat., gyri annectantes. Fr., plis de passage. Ger., Uebergangsbrücken. Uebergangswindungen. It., pieghe de passaggio. Sp., pliegues de pasaje. The four gyri which connect the c's on the upper surface of the occipital lobe with the parietal and temporo-sphenoidal lobes. [I, 15.]—Anterior central c. See Ascending frontal c.—Anterior orbital c. Lat., gyrus orbitalis anterior. Fr., pli orbitaire antérieure. Ger., vordere Orbitalwindung. It., circunvoluzione orbitale anteriore. Sp., circunvolución orbital anterior. A c. which lies in front of the orbital sulcus, and is continuous with the middle frontal c. [I, 15.]—Antero-temporal c. See First temporal c.—Ascending frontal c. Lat., gyrus precentralis (seu centralis anterior). Fr., circunvolución prérolandique, premier pli ascendant, pli frontal ascendant, circunvolución frontale ascendente. Ger., vordere Centralwindung. It., circunvoluzione parietale anteriore (o frontale ascendente), processo enteroides verticale di mezzo (anteriore). Sp., circunvolución parietal anterior (o frontal ascendente). Syn.: transverse c., anterior central c., antero-parietal gyrus. A gyrus forming the anterior boundary of the fissure of Rolando, with which it is parallel. It extends from a point just behind the bifurcation of the Sylvian fissure to the edge of the great longitudinal fissure. It is generally continuous with the ascending parietal c., both above and below. [I, 1.]—Ascending parietal c. Lat., gyrus centralis posterior. Fr., deuxième pli ascendant, circunvolución parietale ascendente (ou postrolandique, ou transverse médio-parietale). Ger., hintere Centralwindung. It., processo enteroides verticale di mezzo (posterior), circunvoluzione parietale posteriore lunga. Sp., circunvolución parietal posterior. Syn.: postero-parietal gyrus, posterior central c. A c. which runs parallel with the ascending frontal c., from which it is separated by the fissure of Rolando, except at its superior and inferior extremities, where the two are generally united. It is continuous above with the superior parietal gyrus. [I, 1.]—Bridging c's. See Annectant c's.—Broca's c. Fr., circunvolución de Broca. Ger., Broca'sche Windung. It., circunvolución cerebral de Broca. Sp., circunvolución cerebral de Broca. A term sometimes applied to the operculum, but more properly by Ferrier to the inferior (or third) frontal c. [I.]—Callosal c. Calloso-marginal c. See Gyrus fornicatus.—Cerebral c's. Fr., cerebral hemisphere of the dog. This author numbered them from below upward, calling the lowest the first c., but Ferrier reverses this order, calling the highest the first, because they have their homologues in the human and the simian brain. [Ferrier (a, 18).]—External olfactory c. Lat., gyrus olfactorius externus. Fr., circunvolución olfactive externe. Ger., äussere Riechwindung. It., circunvoluzione olfattoria esterna. Sp., circunvolución olfatoria externa. The small projection forming the outer boundary of the GYRUS.—Inferior frontal c. Lat., gyrus frontalis tertius (seu inferior). Fr., pli frontal, circonvolution inférieure, troisième circonvolution frontale. Ger., dritte Stirnwindungsgruppe, dritte (oder untere) Stirnwindung, unterer Gyrus frontalis. It., circonvoluzione frontale inferiore. Sp., circonvolución frontal inferior (ó terza frontale). The lower and outer part of the frontal lobe. It is continuous posteriorly with the ascending frontal c.; anteriorly it curves around the anterior extremity of the lobe, and appears on its under surface as the posterior orbital gyrus; it is of importance (on the left side) as forming an essential part of Broca's "speech-centre." [1, 1.]—Inferior occipital c. Lat., gyrus occipitalis inferior. Fr., pli occipital inférieure. Ger., dritte untere Hinterlappenwindung. It., circonvoluzione occipitale inferiore. Sp., circonvolución occipital inferior. A small c. which lies between the middle and inferior occipital fissures. It is directly continuous anteriorly with the middle temporo-sphenoidal c., and is connected with the inferior by a bridging gyrus. [1, 29.]—Inferior temporal (or temporo-sphenoidal) c. Lat., gyrus temporalis (lateralis) inferior. Fr., circonvolution tempore inférieure, pli temporal inférieur. Ger., dritte (oder untere) Schläfenwindung. It., terza circonvoluzione sfenotemporale, circonvoluzione tempore inferiore. Sp., circonvolución temporal inferior. The lowest of the three temporo-sphenoidal c's, connected posteriorly with the third occipital c. [1, 23.]—Infra-marginal c. Lat., gyrus inframarginalis. Fr., circonvolution tempore supérieure, pli temporal supérieur. Ger., erste Schläfenwindung. The superior temporo-sphenoidal c., so called because it forms the lower edge of the posterior limb of the Sylvian fissure. [1, 1.] See Superior temporo-sphenoidal c.—Insular c. Lat., circonvolutio (seu gyrus insulae). Fr., circonvolution de l'insula. Ger., Inselwindung. It., circonvoluzione dell'insula. Sp., circonvolución de la isla. One of a group of small c's which form the island of Reil, and are concealed by the operculum. They are separated from the lenticular nucleus by a thin layer of white matter (the claustrum). [1, 23.]—Internal c. See GYRUS FORNICATUS.—Internal olfactory c. Lat., gyrus olfactorius internus. Fr., pli (ou circonvolution) olfactif interne. Ger., innere Riechwindung. It., circonvoluzione olfattoria interna. Sp., circonvolución olfatoria interna. The ridge along the inner side of the olfactory groove. [1, 31.]—Internal orbital c. The gyrus next outside of the gyrus rectus. [a, 18.]—Internal temporo-occipital c. Fr., circonvolution occipitale latérale. See GYRUS FUSIFORMIS.—Intestinal c's. Fr., anses des intestins. Ger., Darmwindungen. Ger., Spindelwindung, unterer äusserer Hinterhauptwindungszug. It., processo fondamentale posteriore. Sp., circonvolución temporal posterior. A term for the fusiform lobules (q. v.), so called because they connect the occipital and temporal lobes. [1, 23.]—Marginal c. Lat., gyrus marginalis. Fr., face interne de la première circonvolution frontale. Ger., Gyrus frontalis superior, mediale Fläche. It., cintura periferica, circonvoluzione marginale. Sp., circonvolución marginal. A c. which begins in front of the locus perforatus anterior, and bounds the longitudinal fissure on the mesial aspect of the hemisphere, being separated below from the gyrus fornicatus by the callosa-marginal fissure, which, together with the upper end of the fissure of Rolando, also separates it posteriorly from the quadrate lobule. [1, 1.]—Middle frontal c. Lat., gyrus frontalis medius. Fr., deuxième circonvolution frontale, pli (étage) frontal moyen. Ger., mittlere Stirnwindung. It., circonvolution frontale media. A c. which is continuous posteriorly with the ascending frontal c., and extends forward over the anterior end of the hemisphere to its orbital surface, where it is continuous with its middle orbital c. It is more or less separated from the superior frontal c. by short irregular sulci. [1, 15.]—Middle occipital c. Fr., deuxième circonvolution occipitale. Ger., zweite Hinterhauptwindung. A c. situated between the first and third occipital c's. It is limited superiorly by the sulcus occipitalis transversus, inferiorly by the sulcus occipitalis longitudinalis inferior, and internally by the median longitudinal fissure. Externally or anteriorly it runs into the angular gyrus. [Ferrier (a, 18).]—Middle occipito-temporal c. Lat., gyrus occipito-temporalis medialis, lobulus linguialis. Fr., cinquième circonvolution tempore. Ger., Zungenwindung, Zungenläppchen. It., circonvoluzione lingueforme. Sp., circonvolución lingual. See Lingual LOBULE.—Middle orbital c. Fr., circonvolution orbitaire moyenne. The longitudinal gyrus next external to the internal orbital c. Fr., deuxième circonvolution tempore. Ger., zweite Schläfenwindung. It., seconda circonvoluzione tempore (o temporo-sfenoidale). Sp., circonvolución temporal media. A small gyrus, continuous with the middle occipital or angular gyrus. It occupies the middle of the temporo-sphenoidal lobe, and has a general horizontal direction. [1, 29.]—Occipito-temporal c. Lat., gyrus occipito-temporalis. Fr., pli occipito-temporal. Ger., Hinterhauptwindung. It., circonvoluzione occipito tempore. Sp., circonvolución occipito-temporal. Two small c's on the lower surface of the temporo-sphenoidal lobe. The collateral fissure extends between them. The name is sometimes given to the fusiform lobule alone. [1, 15.] See Fusiform, and Lingual LOBULE.—Olfactory c. Lat., gyrus olfactorius. Fr., circonvolution olfactive. Ger., Riechwindung. It., circonvoluzione olfattoria. Sp., circonvolución olfatoria. See OLFACTORY LOBE.—Orbital c's. Lat., gyri orbitales. Fr., circonvolutions orbitaires. Ger., Orbitalwindungen. It., circonvoluzioni orbitali. Sp., circonvoluciones orbitales. The small gyri on the orbital surface of the frontal lobe. [1, 1.]—Parietal c's. See Ascending parietal c. and Superior parietal c.—Posterior central c. See Ascending parietal c.—Posterior orbital c. Lat., gyrus orbitalis posterior. Fr., pli orbitaire postérieur. Ger., hintere Orbitalwindung. It., circonvoluzione orbitale posteriore. Sp., circonvolución orbital posterior. A small c. situated on the posterior and outer side of the orbital sulcus, and continuous with the inferior frontal c. [1, 15.]—Posterior parietal c. See Ascending parietal c.—Precentral c. See Ascending frontal c.—Sagittal c. Fr., circonvolution sagittale [Broca]. In the brain of Edentata, the longitudinal gyrus lying next to the great interhemispheric fissure, being the most internal of the longitudinal c's. [a, 18.]—Secondary c. 1. As opposed to "primitive" c., an elevation of the superficial portion of the cerebral cortex. 2. Of Owen (after Foville), one of the smaller gyri which may be identified in the principal c's. [1, 14, 15.]—Second (or middle) frontal c. Lat., gyrus frontalis secundus (seu medius). Fr., deuxième circonvolution frontale. Ger., zweite (oder mittlere) Stirnwindung. It., circonvoluzione frontale media. Sp., circonvolución frontal media. A c. which is continuous posteriorly with the ascending frontal c., runs forward along the medial surface of the lobe, and, curving around its anterior extremity, becomes continuous with the middle orbital gyrus on the inferior surface. It lies between the superior and inferior frontal c's, from which it is separated by fissures. [1, 1.]—Second occipital c. See Middle occipital c.—Superior c. See Superior temporo-sphenoidal c.—Superior frontal c. Lat., gyrus frontalis superior. Fr., étage frontal supérieur, première circonvolution frontale. Ger., erste (oder obere) Stirnwindung. It., circonvoluzione frontale superiore. Sp., circonvolución frontal superior. A c. which bounds the great longitudinal fissure, arising posteriorly from the upper end of the ascending frontal c., and turning around the anterior extremity of the frontal lobe to appear on its under surface as the internal orbital c. The mesial surface of this superior frontal c. is described as a separate gyrus (the marginal). [1, 15.]—Superior occipital c. Lat., gyrus occipitalis superior. Fr., pli (ou circonvolution) occipital supérieur. It., circonvoluzione occipitale superiore. Sp., circonvolución occipital superior. The upper of the three c's on the superior surface of the occipital lobe. It is connected by an annectant gyrus with the superior parietal lobule. [1, 15.]—Superior occipito-temporal c. See Fusiform LOBULE.—Superior parietal c. Lat., gyrus parietalis superior. Fr., première circonvolution pariétale. Ger., obere Scheitelwindung. It., circonvoluzione parietale superiore. Sp., circonvolución parietal superior. The portion of the parietal lobe which is limited anteriorly by the upper part of the fissure of Rolando, posteriorly by the external parieto-occipital fissure, and inferiorly by the intraparietal sulcus. It is generally continuous with the ascending frontal c. [1, 15.]—Superior temporo-sphenoidal c. Lat., gyrus temporalis superior (seu primus). Fr., pli temporal supérieur, première circonvolution tempore-sfenoidale. Ger., erste obere Schläfenwindung. It., prima circonvoluzione tempore (o temporo-sfenoidale). Sp., circonvolución temporal superior. The upper of the three c's forming the temporo-sphenoidal lobe. It lies just below and is parallel with the Sylvian fissure. [1, 4.]—Supplementary c. See Secondary c.—Supra-marginal c. Lat., lobulus supramarginalis (seu tuberis). Fr., pli (ou lobule du pli) marginal supérieur, circonvolution supramarginale. Ger., dritte Scheitellappenwindung, unterer Zug aus der hintern Centralwindung, Scheitelhöckerläppchen, erste (oder vordere) Scheitelbogenwindung. It., circonvoluzione sopra-marginale. Sp., circonvolución supra-marginal. The anterior portion of the inferior parietal lobule, situated behind the inferior extremity of the intraparietal fissure (sulcus), below which it joins the ascending parietal c. It curves around the upper end of the posterior (ascending) limb of the Sylvian fissure to be continuous below with the superior temporo-sphenoidal and ascending parietal fissures. [1, 15.]—Supra-orbital c. [Leuret]. Lat., gyrus supraorbitalis. Fr., pli supraorbitaire, circonvolution supra-orbitaire. Ger., Supraorbitalwindung. It., circonvoluzione supra-orbitale. Sp., circonvolución supra-orbital. See Inferior frontal c.—Supra-Sylvian c. The third external c. of the dog. [Ferrier (a, 18).]—Sylvian c. [Owen]. Fr., circonvolution sylvienne. That portion of the brain of marsupials which surrounds the Sylvian fissure. [1, 14.]—Third frontal c. See Inferior frontal c.—Third occipital c. See Inferior occipital c.—Transitive c's. Fr., plis de passage. C's that form communications between the different lobes of the brain. [1, 149 (a, 18).]—Transverse medio-parietal c. Leuret's name for the ascending parietal c. [a, 18.]—Transverse orbital c. Fr., circonvolution orbitaire transverse. The gyrus occupying the posterior portion of the inferior surface of the frontal lobe, at the anterior extremity of the fissure of Sylvius. Its general direction is transverse. ["Rev. d'anthropol." 1876, p. 33 (a, 18).]—Troisième c. frontale. See Inferior frontal c.—Uncinate c. Lat., gyrus uncinatus. Fr., cinquième circonvolution tempore. Ger., Hakenwindung. It., circonvoluzione unciforme. A c. extending from near the posterior extremity of the occipital lobe to the apex of the temporo-sphenoidal; so called from its peculiar hooked anterior end. [1, 15.]—Upper parietal c. See Superior parietal c.—Vaulted c. Lat., sibiculum cornu Ammonis. Fr., circonvolution arquée. Ger., Bogenwindung. It., circonvoluzione del corno di ammono. Sp., circonvolución arqueada. See GYRUS FORNICATUS.

CONVOLUTUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²n-vol(wo²)-u²t(ut)/u²s(u²s). See CONVOLUTE.

CONVOLVULACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²n-vo²(wo²)-vu²l-(wu²l)-a(a²)/se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²). Fr., convolvulacées. Ger., Convolvulaceen. It., convolvulacee. Sp., convolvuláceas. 1. Bind-weeds; of Ventenat and succeeding authors, an order of gametophalous dicotyledons, included in Lindley's solanale alliance. They are chiefly twining herbs, sometimes shrubby, with milky juice, and include many valuable medicinal plants; divided into the tribes Convolvulæ, Dichondrææ, Nolanææ, Cresceræ, and Cuscutææ. They are most abundant in tropical climes. 2. Of Endlicher, a family (order) of the class Tubifloræ. [B, 19, 34, 42, 121, 180 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULACEOUS, adj. Ko²n-vo²lv-u²l-a'shu²s. Lat., convolvulaceus. Fr., convolvulacé, convolvulé. Resembling Convolvulus, belonging to the Convolvulaceæ. [a, 24.]

CONVOLVULÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²n-vo²l(wo²l)-vu²l(wu²l)-e²-e(a²-e²). Fr., convolvulées. 1. Of Necker, St.-Hilaire, and others, an order of plants corresponding to the Convolvulaceae. 2. Of Endlicher and others, a suborder or tribe of the Convolvulaceae. [B, 170.]

CONVOLVULI (Lat.), n. m. pl. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}(wo^{2l})vu^{2l}(wu^{4l})-(e)$. 1. Of B. Jussieu (1759), an order of plants, comprising Convolvulus, Ipomoea, Evolvulus, Polemoniium, Phlox, Diapensia, Löwelia, and Prinea-e. g., genera since distributed among the Convolvulaceae and Polemoniaceae. In a later classification the order was restricted so as to resemble the Convolvulaceae. 2. Of Gray, a section of the Convolvulaceae, including Calyptegia and Convolvulus. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULIC ACID, n. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}v^{2l}u^{2l}i^{2k}$. Fr., acide convolvulique. Ger., Convolvulinsäure. It., acido convolvulinico. An acid, $C_{31}H_{52}O_{17}$ (or $C_{31}H_{50}O_{16}$), obtained by boiling convolvulin with baryta-water, precipitating with sulphuric acid, and evaporating. It melts at a little above $100^{\circ}C$. [B, 5, 41, 141 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULICOLUS (Lat.), adj. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}(wo^{2l})-vu^{2l}(wu^{4l})-i^{2k}o^{(2l)}u^{2s}(u^{4s})$. Fr., convolvulicole, and colere, to inhabit. Fr., convolvulicole. Living and growing upon the Convolvulus. [L, 109, 180.]

CONVOLVULIFOLIÉ (Fr.), adj. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}v^{2l}u^{2l}e-fol-e-a$. From convolvulus (q. v.), and folium, a leaf. Having convolvulaceous leaves. [a, 24.]

CONVOLVULIFORM, adj. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}v^{2l}u^{2l}i^{2k}fo^{2l}rm$. From convolvulus (q. v.), and forma, form. Resembling the genus Convolvulus. [A, 385.]

CONVOLVULIN, n. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}v^{2l}u^{2l}i^{2n}$. Fr., convolvuline. Ger., C. It., convolvulina. Sp., convolvulina. One of the active principles, a glucoside, $C_{31}H_{50}O_{16}$, obtained from the root of Ipomoea jalapa. It is an amorphous, colorless, and tasteless substance, fusing at $150^{\circ}C$, slightly soluble in water, freely so in alcohol and in dilute acid, and insoluble in ether. It is a powerful purgative. [B, 4, 5 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}(wo^{2l})-vu^{2l}(wu^{4l})-i(e)u^{2n}(a^{2e})$. Fr., convolvulinées. Of Miquel, a tribe of the Convolvulaceae. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULINÆE (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}(wo^{2l})-vu^{2l}(wu^{4l})-i^{2n}e^{2e}(a^{2e})$. Of Brongniart, a class of the Gamopelatae, comprising the families Polemoniaceae, Nolaneeae, and Convolvulaceae. [B, 170.]

CONVOLVULINOL, n. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}v^{2l}u^{2l}i^{2n}o^{2l}$. Fr., c. Ger., C. The oily, crystallizing product, $2C_{29}H_{52}O_2H_2O$ (or $C_{58}H_{102}O_2$), obtained by treating convolvulin with aqueous solutions of the alkalies; soluble with difficulty in water, dissolving in alkalies, with the production of a salt of convolvulinic acid. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULINOLIC ACID, n. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}v^{2l}u^{2l}i^{2n}o^{2l}i^{2k}$. Fr., acide convolvulinolique. Ger., Convolvulinolsäure. A product, $C_{12}H_{22}O_4$ (or $C_{12}H_{20}O_4$), obtained by treating convolvulin with solutions of alkalies. It is soluble with difficulty in water, precipitates in crystalline masses, and melts at 40° to $50^{\circ}C$. [B, 4, 14 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULOIDES (Lat.), n. f. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}(wo^{2l})-vu^{2l}(wu^{4l})-o^{(2l)}i(e)dez(das)$. From convolvulus (q. v.), and eidos, resemblance. Of Münch, the genus Pharbitis. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CONVOLVULUS (Lat.), n. m. $Ko^{2n}no^{2l}(wo^{2l})vu^{2l}(wu^{4l})u^{2s}$ -(u^s). From convolvere, to roll up. Fr., c., liseron. Ger., Winde (1st def.), Zusammenwindung (2d def.). It., convolvolo. Sp., convólulo. 1. Bind-weed; a genus of the Convolvulaceae; they are erect twining shrubs indigenous to the temperate and subtropical regions of the globe; many of the species are medicinally valuable. [B, 34, 42 (a, 24).] 2. Volvulus. [A, 322.]—C. acetosifolius [Vahl]. The Ipomoea carnososa. [B, 212.]—C. africanus [Nicholson]. The Ipomoea cathartica of Poirlet. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. althaeoides [Linnaeus]. A species found in southern Europe, having a bitter and acid herb, which is used as a purgative. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. americanus. The Ipomoea jalapa. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. anceps [Linnaeus]. The Ipomoea turpethum. [B, 212.]—C. arenarius [Vahl]. The Ipomoea carnososa. [B, 212.]—C. argyreus [De Candolle]. Fr., liseron à feuilles de Guimare. See C. althaeoides.—C. arvensis [Linnaeus]. Fr., petit liseron, bedille. Ger., Ackerwinde, Kornwinde. Small bind-weed; a species having purgative properties, formerly official. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. batatas [Linnaeus]. The Ipomoea batatas. [B, 173 (a, 24), 212.]—C. batatas candida. Fr., liseron blanche. An esculent variety of C. batatas found in the Indies. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. batatas lutea. Fr., liseron jaune. An esculent variety of C. batatas. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. batatas rubra. Fr., liseron rouge. An esculent variety of C. batatas. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. batifla [Kunth]. A South American species resembling in properties and uses the Ipomoea batatas. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. bifidus [Vahl]. The Ipomoea bifida. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. biobatus [Roxburgh]. The Ipomoea pes-caprae. [B, 172, 180 (a, 24).]—C. blandus [Roxburgh]. The Ipomoea cymosa. [B, 212.]—C. brasilienis [Linnaeus]. The Ipomoea maritima. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. bryoniaefolius. A species closely related to the C. althaeoides. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. cantabrica. Cantabrian (or lavender-leaved) bind-weed; a species considered antihelmintic and actively cathartic. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—C. carnosus [Sprengel]. The Ipomoea carnososa. [B, 212.]—C. chryso-orrhizus [Solander]. Fr., patata douce de Taïti. An edible species employed like the Ipomoea batatas, and cultivated in the Sandwich Islands. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. enorum. Shrubby bind-weed; a species having silvery-haired foliage and white flowers, and growing in southern Europe. [B, 19, 275 (a, 24).]—C. colubrinus. The Pareira brava. [L, 104.]—C. copticus [Linnaeus]. Fr., liseron de la thebaïde. A species a decoction of which is used as a lotion for headaches. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. cyamosus [Lamarck]. The Ipomoea cymosa. [B, 212.]—C. digitata [Sprengel]. The Ipomoea digitata. [B, 212.]—C. discolor [Kunth]. A South American species an infusion of the leaves of which is used in gonorrhoea. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).] Cf. C. turpethum.—C. dissectus. A species that contains hydrocyanic acid, and is one of the plants furnishing the liqueur nouyau. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. edulis [Thunberg]. C. esculentus [Salisbury]. The Ipomoea batatas. [B, 212.]—C. farinosus [Linnaeus]. A species found in southern Europe and the East, regarded as one of the plants called σκαραμωρία by Dioscorides. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. flexuosus. See C. althaeoides.—C. horridus [Linnaeus]. Fr., liseron effilé, liseron à balais. A high shrub with abundant blossoms indigenous to the Canary Islands; it produces rosewood (lignum rhodium), and by distillation an oil (oil of rhodium) used in perfumery. The plant, powdered, is used as a sternutatory. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. foetidus. A plant growing in India and the Moluccas and cultivated in Europe. Its leaves, when pressed, give out a foetid odor. [a, 24.]—C. formosus [Gmelin]. Fr., liseron remarquable. A species indigenous to Brazil but growing in Europe and India. The leaves are used in cataplasms in cutaneous diseases, and the root is purgative. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. frutescens. The Ipomoea operculata. [a, 24.]—C. gemellus [Vahl]. The Ipomoea gemella. [B, 172, 180 (a, 24).]—C. guajanensis [Aublet]. A Guiana species which furnishes an odoriferous wood. [L, 30.]—C. grandiflorus [Römer and Schultes]. Fr., liseron à grandes fleurs. The Ipomoea grandiflora. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. hastatus. See under CALI-VALLI.—C. indicus [Morison]. The Ipomoea batatas. [B, 212.]—C. insignis [Sprengel]. The Ipomoea digitata. [B, 212.]—C. italicus. A species closely related to C. althaeoides. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. jalapa [Linnaeus]. Fr., liane à médecine, jalap. Ger., Jalappa, purgirende Trichterwinde. It., jalappa. Sp., jalapa. The Ipomoea purga. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. linariae folio. See C. cantabrica.—C. lineatus. Pigmy bind-weed; an ornamental species with narrow leaves and flesh-colored flowers. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. littoralis [Linnaeus]. The Ipomoea carnososa. [B, 212.]—C. macrocarpus [Linnaeus]. Fr., liseron à long fruit. A West Indian species; the root is purgative and feulent. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. macrorrhizus [Linnaeus]. Fr., liane à minquet. Ger., grosswurzelige Trichterwinde. The Ipomoea macrorrhiza. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. major (albus). See C. sepium.—C. malabaricus [Linnaeus]. The Ipomoea malabarica.—C. mammosus [Loureiro]. A Cochinchina species used like C. chrysoorrhizus.—C. marinus. See C. soldanella.—C. maritimus [Lamarck]. See Ipomoea pes-caprae.—C. mauritanicus. Blue rock bind-weed; an ornamental species with oval foliage and violet-colored flowers. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. mechoacanha [Linnaeus]. CONVOLVULUS SCAMMONIA.

nea. Sp., escamonea. A species indigenous to Syria and certain islands of the Grecian Archipelago, furnishing Aleppo scammony and Smyrna scammony. [B, 5, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. scoparius [Linnaeus fil.]. Ger., Besenwinde. A species found in the Canary Islands, said to furnish the lignum rhodium, although by some the latter is attributed to C. floridus. [B, 180.]—C. sepium [Linnaeus]. Fr., grand tisonon. Ger., Zauwinde. Great (or hedge) bind-weed, German scammony; a species found in Europe, Asia, and North America. The root is a powerful purgative; the plant was formerly official as herba convolvuli majoris. [B, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. Sibthorpii [Römer and Schultes]. A species of the Grecian Archipelago thought to be one of the plants called σκασμωβία by Dioscorides. [B, 180.]—C. soldanella [Linnaeus]. Fr., chou marine. Ger., Meerkohlwinde. Sea bind-weed; a species found on the coast of the Mediterranean and of the Black Sea. The herb (herba soldanella [seu brassica marina]) was official, being used in scurvy and dropsy, and was the κράμβη θαλασσία of Dioscorides. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).] Cf. A convulsive action of the muscular apparatus of the larynx. [D, 72.]—C's sourdes (Fr.). See Internal c's.—Croup-like c. Spasm of the glottis. [D, 40.]—Eclamptic c's. Fr., c's éclamiques. Ger., eclamptische C'en. General c's, with more or less impairment of consciousness, that recur at intervals, and then never appear again, or recur at long and irregular periods (e. g., the ordinary c's of infants and those of pregnant, parturient, or lying-in women). [R. Arndt (A, 319).]—Epileptic c. Fr., c. épileptique. Ger., epileptische C. The c. that characterizes a paroxysm of epilepsy.—Epileptiform c., Epileptoid c. Fr., c. épileptóide. A c. resembling an epileptic c. [D, 36.]—Essential c. See Spontaneous c.—Febrile c. A c. which sometimes marks the onset of an acute febrile disease, especially lobar pneumonia, the eruptive fevers, and intermittent fever. [D, 35.]—General c. Fr., c. générale. Ger., allgemeiner Krampf. A c. affecting all or most of the voluntary muscles. [D, 35.]—Hydrophobic c. Fr., c. hydrophobique. Ger., hydrophobische C. A c. due to hydrophobia.—Hysterical c. Fr., c. hystérique. A c. due to hysteria, resembling that of epilepsy, but usually without unconsciousness. [L, 20.]—Hystero-epileptic c. Fr., c. hystéro-épileptique. Ger., hystero-epileptische C. 1. A c. that begins as an hysterical c. and becomes epileptoid. 2. An epileptic c. in an hysterical person. [R. Arndt (A, 319).] See Hystero-EPILEPSY.—Idiopathic c. Fr., c. idiopathique. Ger., idiopathische C. See Spontaneous c.—Infantile c's. Fr., c's de l'enfance (ou des enfants). Ger., Kinderkrämpfe. Eclamptic c's occurring in infancy.—Internal c's. Inward c's. Fr., c's internes (ou sourdes, ou imminentes). Ger., innere C'en. 1. Popular terms for slight convulsive movements limited to a portion of the body, without unconsciousness, but with the intellectual faculties suspended momentarily, and with the organic functions intact. At first the respiration is usually hastened and occasionally irregular, but it soon becomes suspended or imperceptible, with pallor of the face, a violaceous color of the lips, and fixity of the eyes. The whole attack lasts but a few seconds. [A, 301.] 2. Of some authors, c's chiefly affecting the muscles of respiration. [D, 40.]—Mimetic c., Mimic c. See Convulsive tic.—Local c., Oertlicher C. (Ger.). See SPASM.—Oscillating c., Oscillatory c. Ger., oscillirender (oder oscillatorischer) Krampf. A c. in which the individual fibre-bundles of a muscle are affected, not simultaneously, but in succession. [R. Arndt (A, 319).]—Puerperal c's. Fr., c's puerpérales. Ger., Kindbettkrämpfe. It., convulsioni puerperali. Sp., convulsiones de parto. Eclamptic c's occurring in pregnant, parturient, or lying-in women.—Reflex c. Fr., c. réflexe. Ger., reflectorische C. A c. due to some recognizable peripheral irritation. [R. Arndt (A, 319); D, 35.]—Respiratory c's. C's depending on discharging lesions in the lowest of the three levels or grades of motor centres recognized by Hughlings Jackson (i. e., those centres which represent the least complex muscular movements, are first to be evolved, and lowest in position, being situated in the anterior cornua of the spinal cord, the medulla oblongata, and pons Varolii, and including the centres that regulate nutrition, respiration, and vaso-motor action). The term includes laryngismus stridulus, spasmodic asthma, the paroxysms of whooping-cough, etc. ["Brit. Med. Jour.," June 18, 1887, p. 1326 (a, 17).]—Salaam c's. Lat., eclampsia nutans. Fr., tic de salaam, salutation convulsive. A disease of the mixed cranial nerves, of the bilateral clonic variety, and mostly confined to children between the periods of first dentition and puberty. It occurs in paroxysms, lasting from a few seconds to several minutes, and of varying frequency (e. g., once in several days or several times in an hour), which are characterized by a bowing of the body and head many times during an attack, with more or less bewilderment at the time, and, possibly, facial spasm, blepharospasm, strabismus, or convulsive action of one or another of the extremities. [D, 35.]—Spontaneous c. Fr., c. spontanée. Ger., spontane C. A c. that is not called forth by any recognizable exciting cause, but depends wholly on an abnormality of the central nervous system. [R. Arndt (A, 319).]—Static c. Fr., c. statique (ou de la station). Ger., statische C. A paroxysm characterized by uncontrollable turning around, walking forward or backward, running in a circle, etc. [R. Arndt (A, 319).]—Suffocative c. Laryngismus stridulus. COPAIBA (Lat.), n. f. Ko-pa³-e⁶-ba³. Lat., c. [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], balsamum copaiiva [Dan. Ph., Norweg. Ph., Swed. Ph.] (see copaivæ [Ger. Ph., Austr. Ph., Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph., Netherl. Ph., Hung. Ph.]), copaivæ balsamum [Gr. Ph.]. Fr., copahu [Fr. Cod.], baume de copahu (ou capivi). Ger., Copaivabalsam, Kopaiva. It., copaibe, balsamo di copaiiba. Sp., bálsamo de copaiba. Syn.: balsam of c., balsam of c. The oleoresin of various species of Copaifera, especially that of Copaifera officinalis, Copaifera guianensis, Copaifera coriacea, and Copaifera Langsdorffii. It is obtained by making incisions in the trees, a single tree yielding 84 pints. As it flows from the tree it is clear, colorless, and thin, but soon becomes thicker and darker. Brazil furnishes the largest quantity. It is a light yellow, clear liquid, of an agreeable odor, having a specific gravity of from 0.920 to 1.000, and has a bitter, irritating taste. It is soluble in alcohol, ether, and the fixed and volatile oils, and makes an emulsion with the alkalies, on which it acts as an acid. Mixed with magnesia and set aside, it solidifies. Its essential constituents are volatile oil and resin. It has been in use as a stimulant of the mucous membranes for more than a century, and employed with benefit in gonorrhœa in the subacute stage, gleet, leucorrhœa, and chronic catarrhal affections of the bowels and lungs. [B, 2, 5 (a, 24).]—Alkaline tincture of balsam of c. See Essentia balsami COPAIBÆ kalica.—Alcoholic tincture of c. See Tinctura COPAIBÆ balsami.—Balsam of c., Balsamum de c. See C.—Brazilian c. The c. derived from many species of Copaifera; natives of Brazil are entitled to this name, but, according to Hayne, the Brazilian species from which most of the c. of commerce is derived is the Copaifera multijuga, growing in the province of Para. Others think it applies solely to the Copaifera officinalis (the Copaifera Jacquinii of Desfontaines). [B, 5, 121, 173 (a, 24).]—C. camphor. Fr., camphre de copahu. A product of the action of hydrochloric acid on oil of c.; a crystallizable body, C₁₂H₉Cl. [A, 301.]—Copaiba injectio. C. injection; containing 4 parts of balsam of c. and 1 part each of gum arabic and lime-water; used as an astringent injection in gleet, gonorrhœa, and leucorrhœa. [L, 104 (a, 21).]—Enema of balsam of c. Fr., lavement au copahu. Ger., Copaivabalsam-Klystier. An enema made of 25 grammes of c.-balsam, the yolk of 1 egg, 0.05 gramme of extract of opium, and 150 grammes of water. Ger., Copaiba-Pillenmasse. Sp., píldoras de c. [Sp. Ph.]. Syn.: pilule copaibæ [U. S. Ph., 1870]. A preparation made by mixing 94 parts of c. with 6 parts of recently prepared magnesia, allowing to concrete into a pilular mass, and dividing into 100 pills of nearly 5 grains each [U. S. Ph.]; 5 parts of magnesia usta and 60 parts each of c. and althea-root [Sp. Ph.]. The pilules de copahu of the French Codex contain 3.86 grains of c.; those of the U. S. Ph., 1870, contain 4.8 grains of c. Cf. Pilule COPAIBÆ cum magnesia. [B, 81, 95 (a, 21).]—Mixtura resinæ copaibæ. See Emulsio balsami COPAIBÆ.—Mixtura vinosa de c. [Sp. Ph.]. It., olio di copaiivæ. Sp., aceite de c. A substance, C₂₀H₃₂, which constitutes one third to one half of c. It is colorless, with the odor and taste of c., neutral, boils at 470° C. It is soluble in ether and alcohol, and has a specific gravity of about 0.800. It is used for the same purposes as c. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Píldoras de c. [Sp. Ph.], Pilule copaibæ [U. S. Ph., 1870]. See Massa copaibæ.—Powdery form of c. Of P. Charles, a preparation made by melting together 150 parts of resin of c., 200 parts of c., adding 100 parts of calcined magnesia, and working the whole into a homogeneous mass, which, when hard, may be powdered. [“Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.” xxx (a, 21).]—Red c. A spurious c. introduced into the market some years since. It was like balsam of Tolu. Its source was unknown. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Resina copaibæ [U. S. Ph.], Resin of c. Ger., Copaivaharz. The residue left after distilling off the volatile oil of c. It is of a yellowish color, brittle, has a weak odor and taste of c., and an acid reaction. It is a diuretic, and has been used in bladder affections. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Solidified c. Fr., copahu solidifié. See Massa copaibæ.—Syrup of balsam of c., Syrup of c. See Syrupus copaiivicus.—West Indian c. The Copaifera officinalis (q. v.).

COPAL, n. Kop'a²l. Lat., gummi copalivum. Fr., c. copale. Ger., C. Kopal. It., Sp., c. Mex., copalli. Native African, sandarusa, sandarusi. Syn.: copale. A resinous substance brought from the East Indies, South America, and the eastern and western coasts of Africa. It is the concrete juice of different trees—viz., the Vateria indica [Linnaeus] (=the Elaeocarpus copalliferus [Retzius]), different species of Hymenaea, the Trachylobium mozambicense, the Guibourtia copallifera, and others. It presents a variety of appearances, according to the source of supply, but is generally in roundish, irregular pieces, colorless or slightly yellowish, more or less transparent, very hard, with a shining conchoidal fracture, of a specific gravity of 1.045 to 1.139, soluble in alcohol, and partially so in ether and oil of turpentine. Some 5 different resins have been obtained from it: (1) A soft resin, C₄₀H₆₄O₄ (the kind generally used in varnishes), fusible on a water-bath, and soluble in 72-per-cent. alcohol and in oil of turpentine; (2) a resin, soft, fusible below 100° C., soluble in alcohol, ether, and in oil of turpentine, and isomeric with 1; (3) a resin, C₄₀H₆₂O₃, white, not readily fusible, soluble in alcohol and ether; (4) a resin, white, still less fusible, soluble in alcohol and solution of potassa, and insoluble in ether; (5) a resin, C₄₀H₆₅O₃, insoluble in all menstrua. Violette however, states that even those copals insoluble in alcohol and other menstrua become soluble by heating in closed vessels to from 350° to 400° C. Aniline oil has also been found a good solvent of c. [B. 5, 14 (a, 24).]—American c. Fr., c. d'Amérique. A resin extracted from the bark of Rhus copallina. [B. 121, 173 (a, 24).]—Bombay c. The commercial name of the c. coming from East Africa through Bombay [B. 77 (a, 24)].—Brazilian c. Fr., gomme anime du Brésil. Ger., brasilianischer Kopal. C. obtained from the Hymenaea martiana (the Trachylobium martianum), Hymenaea courbaril, Hymenaea stilbocarpa, and other Brazilian species. [B. 173, 180 (a, 24).]—Calcutta c. The commercial name of the coarser kind of c. from Zanzibar that comes through the port of Calcutta. [L. 41.]—C. d'Algarrobo (Fr.). Fr., gomme (ou résine) anime d'Amérique courbaril. Ger., westindischer Kopal. The resin of Hymenaea courbaril. See Oil of c.—Indian c. Piney varnish. A species of resin furnished by the Vateria malabarica of Blume, or white dammar-tree; an excellent varnish, resembling c. It is very hard, has a shining vitreous fracture and the appearance of amber, and is often confounded with the c. of the Vateria indica [Linnaeus]. Like c., it is but slightly soluble in alcohol, but can be readily dissolved by the addition of camphor to the alcohol, and it is directly soluble in turpentine and oils, without preliminary destructive fusion, as in the case of c. COPISCUS (Lat.), n. m. Kop(ko²p)-i²sk'u³s(u⁴s). Gr., κόπισκος. Fr., copisque. A kind of frankincense mentioned by Dioscorides. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

COPOPSIA (Lat.), n. f. Kop(ko²p)-o²ps'i²-a³. From κόπος, fatigue, and ὄψις, sight. A weariness or fatigue of the sight or power of acute vision. It was originally used to denote a fatigued or worn-out retina, and was often confounded with amblyopia. [F.]

COPOS (Lat.), n. m. Kop(ko²p)'o²s. Gr., κόπος. Fr., copose. Weariness, lassitude, resulting from disease; of some authors, severe cramp-like pain in the calves of the legs. [A, 322, 325; L, 41, 94.]

COPPAROSA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²p-pa²r(pa³r)-os'a. Copperas; green vitriol. [L, 94.]

COPPER, n. Ko²p'u³r. For deriv., see CUPRUM. Gr., χαλκός. Lat., cuprum [Br. Ph.] (cæs cyprium). Fr., cuiivre. Ger., Kupfer. It., rame. Sp., cobre. A metallic element known from very early times. It occurs widely diffused in nature, both uncombined and compounded in the form of various minerals. It usually occurs under the form of an amorphous, very tenacious, malleable, and ductile substance, of peculiar reddish color and metallic lustre. It may also be obtained in the form of octahedral crystals. It melts at 1,090° C. Sp. gr. 8.92 to 8.95. It is an excellent conductor of heat and electricity. In compounds it acts usually as a bivalent radicle (see CUPRIC), sometimes apparently as a univalent radicle (see CUPROUS), though the cuprous compounds may be supposed to be formed by the addition of copper to the cupric compounds, and the metal still to remain bivalent. Atomic weight, 63.7; symbol, Cu. A compound of c. and acetic acid. Normal cupric acetate, the cupri acetat of the U. S. Ph., Cu(C₂H₃O₂)₂ + H₂O, forms efflorescent green prismatic crystals of a disagreeable metallic taste, moderately soluble in water, soluble with difficulty in alcohol. It is employed medicinally like c. sulphide, but is not used internally. [B, 5.] See also C. subacetate.—C. acetoarsenite. A green substance, 3Cu.(AsO₂)₂.Cu(C₂H₃O₂)₂, used as a pigment under the name of Schwefelfurt green or imperial green, and often employed for tinting wall-paper. [B, 2.]—C. acetylhyd. Fr., acétylure de cuiivre. Ger., Kupferacetylid. A compound, C₂Cu₂ + H₂O, of acetylene and c., forming a dark-red, amorphous powder exploding on percussion or heating. It has been found in copper gas-pipes. [B, 3.]—C. adipate. Fr., adipate de cuiivre. Ger., adipinsäures Kupfer. A compound of c. and adipic acid, Cu(C₂H₃O₂)₂. [B, 2.]—C. albuminate. Fr., albuminate de cuiivre. Ger., Kupferalbuminat. A compound of egg-albumin and copper; according to Harnack ["Ztschr. f. physiol. Chem.," v. p. 198], there are two such compounds, one containing 1.35 per cent. of the metal and having the composition C₂₄H₃₂N₁₂O₁₆S₂Cu, the other containing twice as much of the metal and having the composition C₂₄H₃₂N₁₂O₁₆S₂Cu₂. [a, 24.]—C. amalgam. Fr., amalgame cuiivrique, mastic métallique, amalgame de cuiivre. Ger., Kupfer-amalgam. It., amalgama di rame. Sp., amalgama de cobre. An alloy of c. with mercury; when containing 2 or 3 parts of mercury to 1 part of c., the amalgam becomes soft and plastic on heating to 100° C. and on cooling gradually changes into a hard substance of crystalline texture. [B, 3.]—C. ammoniochloride. See C. and ammonium chloride.—C. ammoniosulphate. Lat., cuprum sulfuricum ammoniatum [Ger. Ph.], sulfas cuproammonicus [Fr. Cod.]. Fr., sulfate de cuiivre ammoniacal [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Kupferammoniumsulfhid. It., sulfato di rame ammoniacale. Sp., sulfato de cobre anioniacal. Ammoniated c. sulphate, ammoniated copper; a compound of c. sulphate with ammonia. It varies in composition according to the mode of its preparation; as usually prepared, by evaporation of a solution of c. sulphate in ammonia-water [Fr. Cod.], it forms efflorescent blue crystals, CuSO₄.4NH₃ + H₂O. A similar compound was directed by the U. S. Ph. of 1870 to be made by rubbing together c. sulphate and ammonium carbonate. When heated to 150° C., this substance is converted into a green powder, CuSO₄ + 2NH₃, and on further heating to 200°, forms the substance CuSO₄ - NH₃. A blue powder having the composition CuSO₄ - 5NH₃ is formed by heating anhydrous c. sulphate with dry ammonia gas. [B, 3.]—C. ammoniosulphite. See C. and ammonium sulphite.—C. ammoniuret. See C. ammoniosulphate.—C. and ammonium chloride. C. ammoniochloride; a compound of cupric chloride with ammonia. Several such compounds are known, one forming a blue powder of the constitution CuCl₂ + 6NH₃; another, a blue crystalline substance, CuCl₂ + 4NH₃ + H₂O; and a third, a green powder of the composition CuCl₂ + 6NH₃. [B, 3.]—C. and ammonium sulphate. See C. ammoniosulphate.—C. and ammonium sulphite. Fr., sulfite de cuiivre et d'ammonium. Ger., schweflig-säurer Kupferammoniak. It., solfito di rame e d'ammonio. Sp., sulfito de cobre y de amonio. C. ammoniosulphite; a compound of cuprous sulphite with sulphite of ammonium. Two such compounds are known, having respectively the constitution $(\text{NH}_4)_2\text{SO}_3 \cdot (\text{Cu}_2\text{SO}_3)$ and $(\text{NH}_4)_2\text{SO}_3 \cdot 2(\text{CuSO}_3)$. Both form crystalline scales. [B. 3.]—C. and potassium cyanide. Fr., cyanure de cuivre et potassium. Ger., Kaliumkupfercyanür. It., cianuro di rame e potasio. Sp., cianuro potásico de cobre. A compound of c. and potassium and cyanogen, formed by the action of cuprous cyanide on aqueous potassic cyanide. Two such compounds, both crystalline, colorless bodies, are known: potassium cuprocyanide, $\text{K}_2\text{Cu}_2\text{C}_6\text{N}_4$, and potassium cupricyanide, $\text{K}_6\text{Cu}_2\text{C}_6\text{N}_8$. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. and potassium ferrocyanide. Ger., Ferrocyan-kupferkalium. A dark, reddish-brown powder, $\text{K}_2\text{CuFe}(\text{C}_6\text{N}_6)_2$, insoluble in water. [B.]—C. and sodium tartrate. Fr., tartrate de cuivre et de sodium. Ger., weinsaures Kupfernatron, Natriumkupfertartrat. It., tartrato di rame e di sodio. Sp., tartrato de cobre y de sodio. A basic tartrate, occurring in Fehling's solution, having the composition $\text{CH}_2 = (\text{O.Cu}) \langle \text{CO}_2\text{ONa} \rangle \text{CO}_2\text{ONa}$. [B. 4.]—C. and uranium arsenate. Cuprouranic arsenate; a green salt of the composition $(\text{U}_2\text{O}_7)_2\text{Cu}(\text{AsO}_4)_2 \cdot 8\text{H}_2\text{O}$. [B. 2.]—C. antimoniate. Fr., antimoniato de cuivre. Ger., antimonsaures Kupfer. It., antimoniato di rame. Sp., antimoniato de cobre. A substance having the composition $\text{Cu}(\text{SbO}_3)_2$. [B. 2.]—C. arsenate. Lat., cuprum arsenicum (seu arsenicum). Fr., arséniate de cuivre. Ger., arsensaures Kupferoxyd. It., arseniato di rame. Sp., arseniato de cobre. A compound of c. and arsenic acid; the normal orthoarsenate of c., cupric arsenate, is a blue amorphous substance, $\text{Cu}_2(\text{AsO}_4)_2 \cdot 2\text{H}_2\text{O}$. In addition, several basic arsenates of c. are known, some occurring native as minerals. [B. 3.]—C. arsenide. Fr., arséniure de cuivre. Ger., Kupferarsenid. It., arseniuro di rame. Sp., arseniuro de cobre. A compound of c. with arsenic. Various arsenides of c. are known, many occurring native. [B. 3 (a, 24).]—C. arsenite. Fr., arsénite de cuivre. Ger., arsenisaures Kupfer. It., arsenito di rame. Sp., arsenito de cobre. A light-green, insoluble powder (Scheele's green), CuHAsO_3 , prepared by treating a cupric salt with an alkaline arsenite. [B. 2, 158 (a, 24).]—C. ashes. See under ASH.—C. bichromate. See C. dichromate.—C. blue. Ger., Kupferblau. Azurite. [B. 180 (a, 24).]—C. bromide. Fr., bromure de cuivre. Ger., Bromkupfer. It., bromuro di rame. Sp., bromuro de cobre. A compound of c. and bromine. Two such compounds are known: 1. Cuprous bromide (Ger., Kupferbromür), a brownish crystalline substance, Cu_2Br_2 . 2. Cupric bromide (Ger., Kupferbromid), forming dark-colored, deliquescent crystals of metallic lustre, and possessing the composition CuBr_2 . [B. 3.]—C. carbonate. Fr., carbonate de cuivre. Ger., kohlensaures Kupferoxyd. It., carbonato di rame. Sp., carbonato de cobre. A compound of c. and carbonic acid. Basic carbonates of c. are known, occurring in nature as the minerals malachite ($\text{CuCO}_3 - \text{Cu}_2\text{OH}_2$) and azurite ($2\text{CuCO}_3 \cdot \text{Cu}_2\text{OH}_2$). Compounds of the same or similar composition may also be prepared artificially. One of these artificial basic carbonates, identical in composition with malachite, has been used in medicine in the Sardinian States under the title of carbonato di rame. [B. 3, 10, 158 (a, 24).]—C. chloride. Fr., chlorure de cuivre. Ger., Chlorkupfer. It., cloruro di rame. Sp., cloruro de cobre. A compound of c. and chlorine. Several such compounds are described: 1. Cuprous chloride (Ger., Kupferchlorür), a white crystalline, fusible substance, but little soluble in water, and prone to oxidation. It has the composition Cu_2Cl_2 . 2. Cupric chloride (Ger., Kupferchlorid), forming green crystals, $\text{CuCl}_2 \cdot 2\text{H}_2\text{O}$, which, when heated, parts readily with water of crystallization and becomes a yellowish-brown powder of the composition CuCl_2 . 3. Basic chlorides of c. See C. oxychloride and C. ammoniochloride. [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. croconate. Ger., krokonsaures Kupfer. A crystalline body which appears deep blue by reflected light, dark orange by transmitted light, and bright yellow when reduced to powder. Formula, $\text{C}_6\text{Cu}_2\text{O}_8 \cdot 3\text{H}_2\text{O}$. [B. 3.]—C. cyanide. Fr., cyanure de cuivre. Ger., Cyankupfer. It., cianuro di rame. Sp., cianuro de cobre. A compound of c. and cyanogen. The known c. cyanides are cupric cyanide, $\text{Cu}_2(\text{CN})_2 \cdot \text{Cu} + 5\text{H}_2\text{O}$, which occurs in greenish crystals, and cuprous cyanide (Ger., Kupfercyanür), $\text{Cu}_2\text{CN}_2 = \text{CN} - \text{Cu} - \text{CN}$, a white powder insoluble in water. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. dichromate. Fr., dichromate de cuivre. Ger., doppelchromsaures Kupfer. It., bichromate di rame. Sp., bichromato de cobre. A substance, $\text{CuCr}_2\text{O}_7 \cdot 2\text{H}_2\text{O}$, forming dark-brown deliquescent crystals. [B. 3.]—C. dioxide. Fr., dioxyde de cuivre. Ger., Kupferdioxyd. It., diossido di rame. Sp., dióxido de cobre. C. peroxide, cupric peroxide; a yellowish-brown substance, $\text{CuO}_2 + \text{H}_2\text{O}$, formed by the action of hydrogen dioxide on cupric hydroxide. [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. dipropargyl. C. dipropinyl. A yellow powder, $\text{Cu}_2\text{C}_6\text{H}_4 + 2\text{H}_2\text{O}$, explosive and inflammable, burning with a shower of sparks. [B. 3 (a, 24).]—C. ferricyanide. Fr., ferricyanure de cuivre. Ger., Ferridcyan-kupfer. It., ferricianuro di rame. Sp., ferricianuro de cobre. Cupric ferricyanide; a yellow powder, $\text{Cu}_4\text{Fe}_2(\text{C}_6\text{N}_6)_4$, insoluble in water and in dilute hydrochloric acid. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. fluoride. Fr., fluorure de cuivre. Ger., Fluorkupfer. It., fluoruro di rame. Sp., fluoruro de cobre. A compound of c. and fluorine. Two c. fluorides are known: Cuprous fluoride (Ger., Kupferfluorür), a red powder, Cu_2F_2 , and cupric fluoride (Ger., Kupferfluorid), a blue crystalline substance, $\text{CuF}_2 + 2\text{H}_2\text{O}$. [B. 3.]—C. formate. Fr., formiate de cuivre. Ger., ameisensaures Kupfer. It., formiato di rame. Sp., formiato de cobre. A body occurring as large blue, transparent crystals, soluble in water, and having the constitution $\text{Cu}(\text{O.CHO})_2 + 4\text{H}_2\text{O}$. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. fulminate. Fr., fulminato de cuivre. Ger., Kupferfulminat. It., fulminato di rame. Sp., fulminato de cobre. Cupric fulminate, $\text{C.Cu}(\text{NO}_2)\text{CN} = \text{CuC}_2\text{N}_2\text{O}_2$, formed by the action of copper on a hot saturated solution of mercuric fulminate. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. glance. Native cuprous sulphide. [B. 158.]—C. hemioxide. Fr., protoxyde (ou oxyde) de cuivre. Ger., Kupferoxydul. It., ossidulo di rame. Sp., oxidulo de cobre. C. suboxide, cuprous oxide, red oxide of c., Cu_2O , occurring native as the minerals chalcotrichite and cuprite, often in transparent and ruby-red crystals, and obtained in the same state artificially. [B. 3, 158; Dana (a, 24).]—C. hydrate. Fr., hydrate de cuivre. Ger., Kupferhydrat. It., idrato di rame. Sp., hidrato de cobre. See C. hydroxide.—C. hydride. Fr., hydrure de cuivre. Ger., Kupferhydrür. It., idruro di rame. Sp., hidruro de cobre. A yellowish or dark-red substance, Cu_2H_2 . [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. hydrocarbonate. Fr., hydrocarbonate de cuivre. Ger., kohlensaures Kupferhydrat. It., idrocarbonato di rame. Sp., hidrocarbonato de cobre. Basic c. carbonate. [a, 24.] See C. carbonate.—C. hydroxide. Fr., hydroxyde de cuivre. Ger., Kupferhydroxyd. It., idrossido di rame. Sp., hidróxido de cobre. A compound of c. and hydroxyl. Two such compounds are known: 1. Cuprous hydroxide, a bright-yellow substance, $\text{Cu}_2\text{O}_3(\text{OH})_2$. 2. Cupric hydroxide, a light-blue substance, $\text{Cu}(\text{OH})_2$. Both dissolve readily in an aqueous solution of ammonia. [B. 3 (a, 24).]—C. iodide. Fr., iodure de cuivre. Ger., Kupferjodür. It., ioduro di rame. Sp., ioduro de cobre. Cuprous iodide; a white crystalline powder, CuI_2 . [B. 3.]—C. methyloamidovalerianate. A substance, $\text{Cu}(\text{C}_6\text{H}_5\text{N}_2\text{O}_2)_2 + 2\text{H}_2\text{O}$, forming blue, prismatic crystals. [A. Menozzi and C. Belloni, "Ann. di chim. e di farmacol." Aug., 1886, p. 108 (B).]—C. monoxide. Fr., monoxyde de cuivre. Ger., Kupferoxyd. It., monossido di rame. Sp., monóxido de cobre. Cupric oxide, black oxide of c.; a substance, CuO , occurring native as melaconite, and obtainable artificially in the form of an amorphous, black, hygroscopic powder, which may by heating be converted into the crystalline state. It has been used as an external application for the removal of chronic indurations of the glands. [B. 3, 5, 158 (a, 24).]—C. nitrate. Fr., azotate de cuivre. Ger., salpetersaures Kupferoxyd. It., nitrato di rame. Sp., nitrato de cobre. Cupric nitrate; a substance, $\text{Cu}(\text{NO}_3)_2 + 3\text{H}_2\text{O}$, forming blue, deliquescent, prismatic crystals, readily soluble in water, and possessing caustic properties. There is also an insoluble basic nitrate, of a greenish color. [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. nitride. Fr., azoture de cuivre. Ger., Kupfernitür. A dark-green substance, Cu_3N_2 . [B. 3 (a, 24).]—C. nitroacetoneitrile. See C. fulminate.—C. orthoarsenate. See C. arsenate.—C. orthophosphate. See C. phosphate.—C. oxide. Fr., oxyde de cuivre. Ger., Kupferoxyd, Kupferoxydul. It., ossido di rame. Sp., óxido de cobre. A compound of oxygen and c. [a, 24.] See C. tetrantoxide, C. hemioxide, C. monoxide, and C. dioxide.—C. oxycetate. See C. subacetate.—C. oxychloride. Fr., oxychlorure de cuivre. Ger., basisches Kupferchlorid, braunschweiger Grün. It., ossicloruro di rame. Sp., oxiclouro de cobre. Basic cupric chloride; a compound of cupric oxide and cupric chloride. Several such compounds are known; among them are a blue substance, $(\text{CuO})_2\text{CuCl}_2 + 4\text{H}_2\text{O}$, and a green compound, $(\text{CuO})_3\text{CuCl}_2$, which occurs in the commercial Brunswick green. [B. 3.]—C. pentasulphide. A dark-brownish substance, Cu_5S_5 , formed by mixing solutions of c. sulphate and potassium pentasulphide. [B. 16.]—C. peroxide. Fr., peroxyde de cuivre. Ger., Kupferperoxyd. It., perossido di rame. Sp., peróxido de cobre. See C. dioxide.—C. phosphate. Fr., phosphate de cuivre. Ger., phosphorsaures Kupfer (oder Kupferoxyd). It., fosfato di rame. Sp., fosfato de cobre. A compound of c. and phosphoric acid. The normal orthophosphate of c. is a blue, crystalline substance, $\text{Cu}_3(\text{PO}_4)_2 + 3\text{H}_2\text{O}$. Several basic orthophosphates of c. are known, some occurring native as minerals, while others may be prepared artificially. [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. phosphide. Fr., phosphure de cuivre. Ger., Kupferphosphür. It., fosfuro di rame. Sp., fosfuro de cobre. A compound of c. and phosphorus. The c. phosphides are: 1. Cuprous phosphide (Ger., Kupferphosphür), Cu_3P_2 , a brittle substance varying in color from black or gray to a silvery white, depending upon the temperature at which it is formed. 2. Cupric phosphide (Ger., Kupferphosphid), Cu_2P_2 , a black powder, or a dark-green mass of metallic appearance. [B. 3.]—C. pyrothioarsenate. C. sulpharsenate; a dark-brown substance, $\text{Cu}_2\text{As}_2\text{S}_7$. [B. 2.]—C. pyrites. A double sulphide of c. and iron, found native. [B. 8.]—C. quadrantoxide. See C. tetranoxide.—C. salicylate. Fr., salicylate de cuivre. Ger., salicylsaures Kupferoxyd. It., salicitato di rame. Sp., salicitato de cobre. Normal c. salicylate, $\text{Cu}(\text{C}_6\text{H}_5\text{O}_2)_2 + 4\text{H}_2\text{O}$. It forms bluish-green acicular crystals, and, on heating, is converted into the dibasic c. salicylate. [B.]—C. silicate. Fr., silicate de cuivre. Ger., kieselsaures Kupfer. It., silicato di rame. Sp., silicato de cobre. A compound of c. and silicic acid. C. silicates of different composition are known, forming various minerals. [B. 3; Dana (a, 24).]—C. subacetate. Lat., cupri subacetis. Fr., sous-acétate de cuivre [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., essigsäures Kupferoxydul. It., sottocacetato di rame. Sp., sub-acetato de cobre. Basic c. acetate; a compound of c. and acetic acid with c. oxide or hydroxide. As commonly used, verdigris; a mixture of the basic c. acetates in varying proportions, formerly official as cupric subacetate or ærugo. It is employed medicinally like c. sulphate. [B. 3, 5 (a, 24).]—C. suboxide. Fr., sous-oxyle de cuivre. Ger., Kupfersuboxyd. It., sottossido di rame. Sp., sub-óxido de cobre. See C. hemioxide.—C. sulphantimonate. See C. thioantimonate.—C. sulpharsenate. See C. pyrothioarsenate.—C. sulpharsenite. See C. thioarsenite.—C. sulphate. Lat., cupri sulphas [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.]. cuprum sulphuricum [Ger. Ph.], sulfas cupricus [Fr. Cod.], cuprum vitriolatum. Fr., sulfate de cuivre. Ger., schwefelsaures Kupfer, Kupfersulfat. It., solfato di rame. Sp., sulfato de cobre. Blue vitriol, blue stone, cupric sulphate; a substance, $\text{CuSO}_4 + 5\text{H}_2\text{O}$, forming transparent, azure-blue triclinic crystals, of a disagreeable metallic taste; moderately soluble in water and insoluble in alcohol. When heated to 100°C . it loses 4 molecules of water of crystallization and forms a bluish-white powder, and, when heated to from 220° to 248°C ., it loses all its water of crystallization and forms a very hygroscopic, white mass (anhydrous sulphate of c., dried sulphate of c.). The latter substance may also be obtained in the crystalline form by treating c. with concentrated sulphuric acid in the absence of atmospheric moisture. C. sulphate is irritant or somewhat escharotic, and, in dilute solution, stimulant and astringent. It is used internally in chronic dysentery and diarrhoea for its influence upon the gastro-intestinal mucous membrane, and is also given as an emetic in narcotic poisoning or to remove false membrane or foreign bodies from the larynx and oesophagus. Only small doses should be given internally, as it is an active poison. Externally it is used in ophthalmic inflammation, and is applied as an escharotic for destroying warts, etc., and to promote the cicatrization of ulcers. It is also used as an injection in gonorrhœa and leucorrhœa. [B. 3, 5, 158 (a, 24).]—C. sulphide. Fr., sulfure de cuivre. Ger., Schwefelkupfer. It., solfuro di rame. Sp., sulfuro de cobre. Cuprous sulphide; a compound of c. and sulphur. There are known: 1. Cuprous sulphide (Ger., Kupfersulfür). Cu_2S , a substance occurring in nature under the form of tabular or prismatic crystals of metallic lustre, and obtainable artificially as octahedral crystals. 2. Cupric sulphide (Ger., Kupfersulfid), a substance, CuS , found native as indigo copper, or covellin, in soft, bluish-black hexagonal plates and spheroidal masses. 3. C. pentasulphide (q. v.). [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. sulphite. Fr., sulfite de cuivre. Ger., schwefligsaures Kupfer. It., solfito di rame. Sp., sulfito de cobre. A compound of c. and sulphurous acid. There are known: 1. Cuprous sulphite, a body forming red, prismatic crystals of the composition $Cu_2SO_3 + H_2O$. 2. Cupric cupro-sulphite, of the constitution $CuSO_3 \cdot Cu_2SO_3 + 2H_2O$. [B. 3.] See also C. and ammonium sulphite.—C. sulphocacodylate. See C. thiocacodylate.—C. sulphocyanate. See C. thiocyanate.—C. tartrate. Fr., tartrate de cuivre. Ger., Kupfertartrat, weinsaures Kupfer. It., tartrato di rame. Sp., tartrato de cobre. A crystalline body having the composition $C_2H_4(OH)_2 \cdot \frac{CO_3O}{CO_3O} \cdot Cu = C_4H_4O_6Cu$. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. tetrantoxide. C. quadrantoxide; an olive-green substance, Cu_4O , oxidizing quickly when exposed to the air. [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. thioantimoniate. Fr., thioantimoniato (ou sulfantimoniato) de cuivre. Ger., thioantimoniat (ou sulfarsenit) de rame. Sp., thioantimoniato (o sulfantimoniato) de cobre. C. sulphantimonate; a compound having the formula $Cu_3(SbS_4)_2$. [B. 2.]—C. thioarsenite. Fr., thioarsenite (ou sulfarsenite) de cuivre. Ger., thioarsensaures Kupfer, schwefelarsensaures Kupfer, Kupferthioarsenit. It., tiarsenito (o sulfarsenito) di rame. Sp., thioarsenito (o sulfarsenito) de cobre. C. sulpharsenite; a compound of c. and thioarsenous acid. Normal c. thioarsenite is a light-brown, flaky substance, $Cu_3(AsS_3)_2$. Other c. thioarsenites of more complex structure are known. [B. 2, 158 (a, 24).]—C. thiocacodylate. Cuprous thiocacodylate; a bright-yellow powder of loose texture, insoluble in water, alcohol, or ether, $2As(CH_3)_2 \cdot Cu_2S_4$. [B. 2.]—C. thiocyanate. Ger., Schwefelcyan-kupfer, thioarsensaures Kupfer. C. sulphocyanate; a compound, $Cu(SCN)_2$, insoluble in water. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. vanadate. Fr., vanadate de cuivre. Ger., vanadinsaures Kupfer. A compound of c. and vanadium pentoxide. Several such compounds are known. The orthovanadate, $Cu_3(VO_4)_2 + H_2O$, constitutes the mineral volborthite. [B. 3, 158 (a, 24).]—C. vitriol. Lat., vitriolum cupri. Fr., couperose bleu. Ger., Kupfervitriol. It., vitriolo di rame. Sp., vitriolo azul. See C. sulphate.—Dibasic c. salicylate. Ger., überbasisch-salicylsaures Kupferorbid. A light yellowish-green powder, $Cu_2C_7H_5O_3 + 4H_2O$, almost insoluble in water, produced by heating the normal c. salicylate or treating it with ether. [B.]—Indigo c. See C. sulphide.—Liniment of subacetate of c. Fr., liniment cuivreux, fléolé d'acétate de cuivre. A liniment made by triturating 3 or 4 grains of c. subacetate with 1 oz. of olive-oil. [B. 97 (a, 21).]—Ointment of subacetate of c. See Unguentum æruginis.—Ointment of sulphate of c. Of Augustin, a preparation used as a remedy for syphilitic ulcers; made by mixing 1 part of c. sulphate with 16 parts of lard. [B. 97 (a, 21).]—Oxymel of subacetate of c. See Linimentum æruginis.—Pills of subcarbonate of c. and of ammonia. A preparation official in the Ferr. Ph., 1825; made by mixing 2 grains of solid carbonate of c. and ammonium and 1 scruple of licorice with a sufficient quantity of syrup, and dividing into 8 pills; used in certain fevers. [B. 97 (a, 21).]—Pills of sub sulphate of c. and of ammonia. See Pilule ammoniacetici cupri.—Purple c. See ERUBESCITE.—Rademacher's tincture of c. acetate. See Tincture of c. acetate.—Red c. oxide. Fr., oxyde rouge de cuivre. Ger., rothes Kupferoxydul. It., ossido rosso di rame. Sp., óxido rojo de cobre. Cuprous oxide. [a, 24.] See C. hemioxide.—Sesquibasic c. acetate. See under C. acetate.—Solution of acetate of c. A solution of c. subacetate, in fine powder, in $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. of acetic acid and a sufficiency of distilled water. The acid is dissolved in $\frac{1}{2}$ fl. oz. of the water, and the c. subacetate is digested in the mixture at a temperature not exceeding 100° C., with repeated stirring, the heat being continued until a dry residue is obtained. This is digested in 4 fl. oz. of boiling distilled water, with the addition of enough more of the water to make up the solution to 5 fl. oz. It is then filtered. [B. 5 (a, 24).]—Solution of c. ammonio-sulphate. A solution of crystals of c. sulphate in distilled water, with ammonia added till the precipitate first formed is nearly dissolved. The solution is then filtered, and distilled water added. [B. 5 (a, 24).]—Solution of sub sulphate of c. and of ammonia. See Liquor cupri ammoniaci.—Tincture of c. A preparation official in the Dutch Ph., 1805. Niemann's Notes; made by fusing 1 part of c. sulphate with 2 parts of ammonium chloride over a very slow fire, stirring the mass with an iron rod till it has acquired a blackish hue, pulverizing it on becoming cool, and pouring upon it a sufficient quantity of spirit of ammonia. [B. 97 (a, 21).]—Tincture of c. acetate. See Tinctura cupri aceticæ Rademacheri.—Tincture of sulphate of c. See Tinctura cupri sulphurici.

COPPERAS, n. $Ko_2p'u^4r-a^2s$. Lat., cupri rosa. Fr., couperose. Ger., Kuperose. It., cupparosa. Sp., caparrosa. A term formerly synonymous with vitriol, now restricted to green vitriol (ferrous sulphate). [B. 81; L. 77.] See IRON sulphate.—Blue c. See COPPER sulphate.—Green c. See C.—White c. See ZINC sulphate.

COPPERNOSE, n. $Ko_2p'u^4r-noz$. See ROSACEA.

COPPERY, adj. $Ko_2p'u^4r-i^2$. Lat., cupreus. Fr., cuivreux. Ger., kupferig. Brownish-red with a metallic lustre. [B. 19.]

COPRA, n. The kernels of the cocoa-nut broken into small pieces and dried in the sun. From them the oil of cocoa is obtained by pressure. [B. 77, 121 (a, 24).]

COPRACRASIA (Lat.), COPRACRATIA (Lat.), n's f. $Ko_2p-ra^2k(ra^2k)ra^2z(ra^2s)^i2-a^3$, -rash(ra^2t) $i(e)^a^3$. From κόπρος, fæces, and ἀκρασία or ἀκραια, want of control. Fr., coprocrasie, coprocratie. Ger., unwillkürlicher Kothabgang. Involuntary defecation. [A. 322.]

COPRACRATUS (Lat.), adj. $Ko_2p-ra^2k(ra^2k)ra^2t(ra^2t)-u^2s$ (u^4s). From κόπρος, fæces, and ἀκρατής, powerless. Unable to restrain the evacuation of the bowels. [A. 322.]

COPREMIA (Lat.), n. f. $Ko_2p-rem'(ra^2e^2m)-i^2-a^3$. From κόπρος, fæces, and αἷμα, blood. Of R. Barnes, a condition of the system attributed to the prolonged retention of fæces and the absorption of some of their constituents, including bile, into the blood; characterized by loss of appetite, sometimes vomiting, and an earthy, dirty, yellow tinge of the skin. [A. 204.]

COPRAGOGUE, adj. $Ko_2p'ra^2-go^2g$. Gr., κοπραγωγός (from κόπρος, fæces, and ἄγω, to lead). Lat., copragogus. Fr., c. Ger., kothentleerend. Producing the discharge of fæcal matter; as a n. (Gr., κοπραγωγόν; Lat., copragogum; Fr., c.; Ger., kothentleerende Mittel), a cathartic. [L. 94 (a, 21).]

COPRAH, n. See COPRA.

COPRANON (Lat.), n. n. $Ko_2p'ra^2n(ra^2n)-o^2n$. Gr., κόπρανον. Fæces. [Hippocrates (A. 387).]

COPRECRITICUS (Lat.), adj. $Ko_2p-re^2k-kr'i^2t'i^2k-u^2s(u^4s)$. From κόπρος, fæces, and ἐκκριτικός, excretive. See COPRAGOGUE.

COPREMESIA (Lat.), COPREMESIS (Lat.), n's f. $Ko_2p-re^2m-ez(e^2s)^i2-a^3$, -re $m'e^2s-i^2s$. Gen., copremesiae, -emes'eos (-em'esis). From κόπρος, fæces, and ἐμεσις or ἔμεσις, vomiting. Fr., coprémèse. Ger., Kothbrechen. Stercoraceous vomiting. [A. 322.]

COPREPISCHESIS (Lat.), n. f. $Ko_2p-re^2p-i^2s-ke^2s(ch^2e^2s)-i^2s$. Gen., coprepisches'eos (pisch'esis). From κόπρος, fæces, and ἐπίσχεσις, obstruction. Fr., coprèpischèse. Ger., Zurückhaltung des Kothes. See COPROSTASIS.

COPRICUS (Lat.), adj. $Ko_2p'ri^2k-u^2s(u^4s)$. Gr., κοπρικός. Fæcal. [A. 322.]

COPRIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ko_2p'ri^2d-e(a^3-e^2)$. Fr., coprides. A family of the Coleoptera. [L. 292.]

COPRIEMETOS (Lat.), n. m. $Ko_2p-ri^2-e^2m'e^2t-o^2s$. From κόπριον (= κόπρος), fæces, and ἔμετος, vomiting. See COPREMESIS.

COPRIN (Fr.), adj. and n. Kop-ra^2n^2. See COPRINUS.

COPRINUS (Lat.), adj. $Ko_2p-ri^2(re)nu^2s(un^4s)$. From κόπρος, fæces. Fr., coprin. 1. Pertaining to fæces or to dung-hills. 2. As a n., of Persoon, a tribe (of Fries, a genus) of small dark-spored Fungi. They are numerous on dung-heaps or richly manured soils, developing and decaying in a few hours. [B. 19, 121 (a, 24).]—C. atramentarius (Fries). Fr., agaric deliquescens. An edible species yielding a dark juice which has been used as ink (encre de Chine). [B. 19, 121, 173 (a, 24).]—C. bolbitus. A species having salmon-colored spores. [B. 19 (a, 24).]—C. comatus. A species sometimes eaten when young and considered delicate and wholesome. [B. 19, 71, 105, 149 (a, 24).]—C. coronatus (Fl. Dan.). A species edible before the opening of the volva. [B. 121 (a, 24).]—C. fimetarius, C. plicatus [Persoon]. See C. atramentarius.

COPRIOLA (It.), COPRIOLE (It.), n's. Kop-re-o-la^3, -la. The Plantago coronopus. [B. 88, 121 (a, 24).]

COPRIPENTOLE (It.), n. Ko-pre-pe^2n-to-la^3. The genus Nymphæa. [B. 121 (a, 24).]

COPRIVOROUS, adj. $Ko_2p-ri^2v-or-u^2s$. Lat., coprivorus (from κόπρος, fæces, and vorare, to devour). See COPROPHAGOUS.

COPROBIOUS, adj. $Ko_2p-rob'i^2-u^2s$. Lat., coprobious (from κόπρος, fæces, and βίος, the mode of life). Fr., coprobie. Living upon manure. [L. 41.]

COPROCRITICUS (Lat.), adj. $Ko_2p-ro(ro^2)-kr'i^2t'i^2k-u^2s(u^4s)$. See COPRECRITICUS.

COPRODÆUM. $Ko_2p-ro(ro^2)-de'(da^3e^2)-u^2n(u^4m)$. Of the embryo, the innermost cloacal chamber. [Gadow, "Proc. of the Roy. Soc.," March 25, 1886 (L.).]

COPRODOCHEUM (Lat.), n. n. $Ko_2p-ro(ro^2)-do^2k(do^2ch^2)-e(a)^u^2m(u^4m)$. Gr., κοπροδοχείον. Fr., coprodochéon. Ger., Nacht-eimer, Stechbecken, Kloake, Mistgrube. A receptacle for fæces. [A. 322.]

COPROEMESIS (Lat.), COPROEMETUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. $Ko_2p-ro(ro^2)-e^2m'e^2s-i^2s$, -e $t^2-u^2s(u^4s)$. See COPREMESIS.

COPROLALIA (Lat.), n. f. $Ko_2p-ro(ro^2)-la^3(la^3)li^2a^3$. From κόπρος, filth, and λαλία, talkativeness. Fr., coprolalie, coprolalie. Ger., Coprolalie, Kothreden. Indecency of speech as a manifestation of disease. [De la Tourette, "Arch. de neurol.," Jan., 1885, p. 19.]

COPROLITES [W. Buckland], n. pl. $Ko_2p-ro-lits$. From κόπρος, fæces, and λίθος, a stone. Fossil bodies of varying shapes, the petrified excreta of animals. [B. 77 (a, 24); L. 14, 121.]

COPROLITH, n. $Ko_2p-ro-li^2th$. Lat., coprolithus (from κόπρος, fæces, and λίθος, a stone). Fr., coprolithe. Ger., Kothstein. A faecal or other intestinal concrement. [A. 322.]

COPROPHAGOUS, adj. $Ko_2p-ro^2f-a^2g-u^2s$. Lat., coprophagus. Fr., coprophage. Ger., kothfressend (1st def.), kothessend (2d def.). 1. Living normally upon faecal matter (said of certain animals). [L, 182.] 2. Addicted to morbid coprophagy. [A, 301.]

COPROPHAGY, n. Ko²p-ro²f'a²i². Lat., coprophagia (from κόπρος, faeces, and φαγεῖν, to eat). Fr., coprophagie. Ger., Coprophagie, Kothessen. The eating of faeces (a manifestation of some forms of insanity and of hysteria). [A, 301.]

COPROPHILOUS, adj. Ko²p-ro²f'i²l-u²s. Lat., coprophilus (from κόπρος, faeces, and φιλεῖν, to love). Fr., coprophile. Growing or living upon excrement. [L, 41.]

COPROPHORESIS (Lat.), COPROPHORIA (Lat.), n's f. Ko²p-ro(ro²)-for(fo²r)-es(as)²i²s, -for(fo²r)²i²a². From κόπρος, faeces, and φορεῖν, to bring. Fr., coprophorie. Ger., Aussteerung des Koths. Purgation by the bowels. [A, 322.]

COPROPHORUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²p-ro²f'o²r-u²s(u²s). Causing coprophoresis. [A, 322.]

COPROPLANESIS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²p-ro(ro²)-pla²n(pla²n)-e-(a)²si²s. Gen., coproplaneseos (-is). From κόπρος, faeces, and πλάνησις, a leading astray. Fr., coproplanèse. Ger., Verirrung (oder Austragung) des Kothes. Escape of the intestinal contents by an unnatural channel, such as a fistula. [A, 322.]

COPROPOIESIS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²p-ro(ro²)-poi-e(a)²si²s. Gen., copropoieseos (-is). From κόπρος, faeces, and ποιεῖν, to make. Fr., copropoiese. Ger., Kothbereitung. The physiological process of the formation of faeces. [A, 322.]

COPROPOITICUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²p-ro(ro²)-poi-e²(at)²i²k-u²s(u²s). Pertaining to copropoiesis. [A, 322.]

COPORRHEA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²p-ro²r-re'(ro²e²)a². From κόπρος, faeces, and ρεῖν, to flow. Fr., coporrhée. Ger., C. It., Sp., coporrea. Diarrhoea. [L, 41.]

COPORRHOICUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²p-ro²r(ro²)²i²k-u²s(u²s). Diarrhoeal. [A, 322.]

COPROS (Lat.), n. m. Ko²p-ro²s. Gr., κόπρος [Hippocrates]. Ger., Koth. Faeces. [A, 325.]

COPROSCLEROMA (Lat.), n. n. Ko²p-ro(ro²)-skle²r(sklar)-o'-ma². Gen., coproscleromatos (-is). Fr., coprosclérome. Ger., Kothverhärtung. A hardened faecal mass. [A, 322.]

COPROSCLOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²p-ro(ro²)-skle²r(sklar)-o'-si²s. Gen., coproscleroses (-is). From κόπρος, faeces, and σκληρῶν, to harden. Fr., coprosclérose. Ger., Kothverhärtung. Induration of the faeces. [A, 322.]

COPROSE, n. Ko²p-ro²s. The Papaver rhæas. [B, 121, 173, 275 (a, 24).]

COPROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²p-ro²si²s. Gen., copros'es (-is). See COPROPOIESIS and DEFECATION.

CORELLINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kōr'e²-e²-lī'(le)'ne(na³-e²). A subfamily of the Asciadiacæ. [L, 121.]

CORELYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kōr'e²-e²(al)i²s(u⁶s)-i²s. Gen., corelys'eos (-el'ysis). From κόρη, the pupil, and λύειν, to loosen. Fr., corélysie. The operation of detaching the pupillary or sphincter margin of the iris from any adhesions which it may have contracted to the cornea or to the capsule of the lens. [F.]

COREMA (Lat.), n. n. Kōr'e²-e(a)'ma³. Gen., corem'a'ios (-is). Gr., κόρημα. 1. Refuse, filth, anything purged away. 2. Of Paulus Ægineta, a general term for medicinal applications for cleansing and softening the skin. [A, 325.]

COREMEGINE [Runge] n. Kōr'e²m'e²j-en. From κόρη, the pupil, and μέγας, large. Fr., corémégine. Atropine. [A, 301; L, 49.]

COREMETAMORPHOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kōr'e²(a)-met-a³-mo²rf-os'i²s. Gen., coremetamorphos'eos (-is). From κόρη, the pupil, and μεταμόρφωσις, a transformation. Irregularity in the shape of the pupil. [F.]

COREMIACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kōr'e²m-i²-a(a³)'se²(ke²)-e(a³-e²). Fr., corémiacées. Of Payer, a family of arthropodaceous Fungi, having their receptacle formed by a union of many filaments. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

COREMIEI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kōr'e²m-i²(i²)e²-i(e). A tribe of the Hormiscineæ, comprising Coremium and Stysanus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

COREMIUM (Lat.), n. n. Kōr'e²m'i²-u²m(u⁴m). 1. A stalk consisting of a collection of hyphæ. [A, 396.] 2. Of Link, a genus of the Mucedines in which the receptacular filaments are gathered in a cylindrical shape, and at their summits spread out in the form of a bouquet. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

COREMORPHOMA (Lat.), COREMORPHOSIS (Lat.), n's n. and f. Kōr'e²(a)-mo²rf-om'a³, -os'i²s. See COROMORPHOMA and COROMORPHOSIS.

CORENBLOEM, n. In Belgium, the Vaccinium myrtillus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORENC (Fr.), n. Kor-a³n²k. A place in the department of Isère, France, where there is a cold sulphurous and saline effervescent spring. [A, 385.]

CORENCLEISIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(kōr²)e²n²(an²)-klis'(kle²-es')-is. Gen., corencleis'eos (-cleis'is). From κόρη, the pupil, and έγκλεισις, inclusion. See IRIDENCLEISIS.

COREOMETER, n. Kor-e²o²m'e²t-n²r. Fr., coréomètre. From κόρη, the pupil, and μέτρον, a measure. An instrument for measuring the diameter of the pupil; several varieties of instruments for this purpose have been proposed by Obers, Follin, Lawrence, Coccins, Galezowski, Obernier, Fick, Hondin, Badal, Mulder and Kreuchel, Dojter, and Landolt. One of the earliest and simplest is the instrument of Lawrence, which consists of a horizontal scale divided into quarters of a line. This scale carries two vertical indices, one of which is stationary while the other can be moved along the scale by means of a screw. [F.]

COREONCION (Lat.), COREONCIUM (Lat.), n's n. Kor(kōr²)e²(a)-o²n²(on²)si²(ki²)-o²n², -u³m(u⁴m). From κόρη, the pupil, and όγκος, a hook. Fr., coreoncion. 1. A hook-like instrument, devised by Langenbeck, for drawing out a portion of the iris through an incision in the cornea, so as to form an artificial pupil. 2. A forceps with double hooks, invented by the elder von Graefe. [F.]

COREOPE (Fr.), n. Kor-a-op. See COREOPSIS.

COREOPSISIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kōr'e²-e²-o²ps-i²d'e²-e(a³-e²). Fr., coréopsidées. Of Cassini, a subtribe of the Compositæ, comprising Guizotia, Synedrella, Trichospira, Heterospermum, Glossocardia, Microlecania, Coreocarpus, Dahlia, Hidalgo, Thelesperma, Cosmos, Bidens, Narcalina, Glossogyne, Isostigma, and Chrysanthellum. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

COREOPSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kōr'e²-e²-o²ps'i²s. Gen., coreopsis'eos (-is). From κόρη, a bug, and όψις, appearance. Fr., coréope, co-reopsis, coriope. Ger., Wanzengesicht. Tickseed; of Linnaeus, a genus of the Compositae, tribe Helianthoideae. [B, 34, 42, 275 (a, 24).]—C. alternifolia [Linnaeus]. See ACTINOMERIS squarrosa.—C. atkinsoniana. An ornamental species now referred to Calliopsis. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. bidens [Linnaeus]. See BIDENS cernua.—C. Drummondii [Torrey and Gray]. A species found in Texas. [B, 19, 34 (a, 24).]—C. georgina nuda. The Dahlia pinnata. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. georgina pruinosa [Cassini]. The Dahlia bidentifolia. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. trichosperma [Michaux]. Tickweed (or tickseed-) sunflower; a species growing in the United States. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—C. verticillata [Linnaeus]. Fr., coréopsis verticille. A species found in the Middle and Western United States; the leaves furnish a red dye. [B, 19, 34, 173 (a, 24).]

COREPALINOIXIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-e²(a)-pa²(pa²)-i²n-a²n(a²n)-o²(a²)-i²x²i²s. Gen., corepalinoix'eos (-is). From κόρη, the pupil, πάλω, again, and ἀνοίξις, an opening. An obsolete term for the re-opening or re-establishment of the natural pupil. [F.]

COREPARELCYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-e²(a)-pa²(pa²r)-e²i²si²s(ku²s)-i²s. See COROPARELCYSIS.

COREPHTHISIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-e²t(e²f)/ti²s(thi²s)-i²s. Gen., corephthis'eos (-eph'this'is). From κόρη, the pupil, and φθίσις, a shrinking. Fr., coréphthisie. Habitual contraction of the pupil. [A, 301.]

COREPLASTY, n. Kor'e²-pla²st-i². Lat., coreplastica, coreplastice (from κόρη, the pupil, and πλαστικός [τέχνη] understood), plastic art). Fr., coréplastie. The formation of an artificial pupil; cernomorphosis. [F.]

CORESTENOMA (Lat.), n. n. Kor(ko²r)-e²(a)-ste²n-o²-ma². Gen., corestenon'atos (-is). From κόρη, the pupil, and στένωμα, a narrow place. A narrowing or partial closure of the pupil. [F.]—C. congenitum [von Ammon]. Congenital c.; a peculiar deformity of the pupil caused by proliferations or outgrowths from the sphincter margin of the iris, which sometimes touch each other and thus form several pupils. [F.]

CORÈTE (Fr.), n. Kor-e²t. The genus Corchorus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. méloche, C. potagère. The Corchorus olitorius. [A, 301; B, 173 (a, 24).]

CORETODIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²r-et(at)-o²(o²)-di²(di²)-a²i²-(a²i²)i²s(u²s)-i²s. Gen., coretodialys'eos (-al'ysis). From κόρη, the pupil, and διάλυσις, a loosening. See IRIDODIALYSIS.

CORETODIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²r-e²t(at)-o²(o²)-mo²(mo²)-di²(di²)-a²i²-(a²i²)i²s(u²s)-i²s. Gen., coretodialys'eos (-al'ysis). From κόρη, the pupil, τέμνειν, to cut, and διάλυσις, a loosening. Fr., corétomédialyse. See IRIDOTOMY.

CORETOMY, n. Ko²r-e²t'o-mi². From κόρη, the pupil, and τέμνειν, to cut. Fr., corétomie. See IRIDOTOMY.

CORETONECTOMY, n. Ko²r-e²t-o-ne²k'to-mi². From κόρη, the pupil, and ἐκτέμνειν, to cut out. See IRIDOTOMY.

CORETOTOMY, n. Ko²r-e²t'o²t'o-mi². From κόρη, the pupil, and τέμνειν, to cut. See IRIDOTOMY.

COREVIA (Ar.), n. The Carum carvi. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORIAEA (Fr.), adj. Ko-re-a². See CORIACEOUS.

CORIACEA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²a(a²)/se²(ke²)-a². Fr., coriacés. 1. A subsection of the Cyclorrhapha. 2. A family of the Zoantharia. [L, 41, 121.]

CORIACEOUS, adj. Kor-i²a'shu²s. Lat., coriaceus (from corium, leather). Fr., coriace, coriacé. Ger., lederartig. It., coriaceo. Sp., coriaceo. Leathery. [B, 19, 34, 121 (a, 24).]

CORIAIRE (Fr.), n. Ko-re-ar. See CORIARIA.

CORIAL, adj. Kor-i²a². Lat., corialis. Of or pertaining to the genus Coriaria. [a, 24].—C. alliance. Lat., nizus corialis. See CORIALES.

CORIALES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²a(a²)/lez(las). Of Lindley, the Coriariæ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORIAMYRTIN, n. Kor-i²a²-mu²rt'i²n. Fr., coriamyrtine. The peculiar principle, C₃₀H₅₂O₁₀, of the fruit of Coriaria myrtifolia, discovered by Riban. It forms white, hitter crystals, without odor, slightly soluble in water, but freely so in alcohol, in ether, in chloroform, and in benzene. It is a violent poison, resembling picrotoxin in action. [A, 319; B, 5 (a, 24).]

CORIANDE, n. Kor-i²a²-ndu²r. Fr., coriandre. Ger., C. The genus Coriandrum; also the fruit of the Coriandrum sativum.—Common c. The Coriandrum sativum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—C-fruit, C-seed. Lat., coriandri fructus [Br. Ph.], coriandrum [U. S. Ph.], fructus coriandri [Ger. Ph.], Ger., C'samen. The fruit of Coriandrum sativum. [B, 5, 81 (a, 24).]—Essential oil of c. See Oil of c.—Gemeiner C. (Ger.). The Coriandrum sativum. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Oil of c. Lat., oleum coriandri [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.]. Fr., huile volatile (ou essence) de coriandre. Ger., C'öl. Sp., esencia de culantro [Sp. Ph.]. A volatile oil, isomeric with borneol, obtained by distillation, with water, from bruised c-seeds. It has the odor and taste of c., a neutral reaction, and the medicinal properties of the fruit. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Römischer C. (Ger.), Schwarzer C. (Ger.). The Nigella sativa. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CORIANDE (Fr.), n. Ko-re-a²-ndr'. See CORIANDE and CORIANDRUM.—Alcoolat de c. Spirit of coriander: made by macerating 1 part of coriander-seeds for 2 days in 8 parts of alcohol, and evaporating on a water-bath. [B, 92 (a, 21).]—C. commune. The Coriandrum sativum. [A, 301.]—Essence (ou Huile volatile) de c. Oil of coriander. [B, 5 (a, 24).]

CORIANDEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²a²-nd(a²nd')ri²d-e(a²-e²). Fr., coriandréés. 1. Of De Candolle, a tribe of the Um- belliferae-Cœlospermeæ, including Bifora, Astoma, Atrema, and Coriandrum. 2. Of Reichenbach, a division of the Umbelliferae, comprising (in 1827) Coriandrum and Biforis; in 1828 he made them a subdivision of the true Umbelliferae, including the same genera as before and adding Excoacantha; in 1837 including Lagoecia, Coriandrum, Atrema, Astomea, and Bifora; and in 1841 comprising Coriandrum, Biforis, Cymbocarpum, Astomea, Apiastrum, and Atrema. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CORIANDRIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²a²-nd(a²nd')ri²d-e(a²-e²). Of Lindley, a tribe of the Apiaceæ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORIANDRINÆ [Diétr.] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²a²-nd(a²nd)-rin'e²e(a²-e²). The Coriandrea of De Candolle. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CORIANDRUM [Linnaeus] (Lat.), n. n. Kor(ko²r)-i²a²-nd(a²nd)/ru²m(ru²m). Gr., κοριάνδρον, κοριάνων, κοριάνων. Fr., coriandre. Ger., Coriander. 1. A genus of umbelliferous plants of the Caucalineeæ. 2. Of the U. S. Ph., the fruit of C. sativum. [B, 5, 42 (a, 24).]—Ætheroleum coriandri. See Oleum coriandri ætherum.—Coriandri fructus [Br. Ph.]. See CORIANDE-fruit.—C. cicuta [Crantz]. The Conium maculatum. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. cynapium [Crantz]. The Æthusa cynapium. CORIANNON (Lat.), CORIANON (Lat.), n's n. Kor(ko²r)-i²a²-n(a²n)/no²n. -o²n. Gr., κοριάνων, κοριάνων. Ancient names of Coriandrum sativum and its fruit. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CORARIA (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-i²a(a²)/ri²a². Fr., redoul. Ger., Gerberstrach. The only genus of the Coriariæ. [B, 19, 42, 173 (a, 24).]—C. angustissima. A New Zealand species, thought by some to be identical with C. ruscifolia. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C. myrtifolia [Linnaeus]. Ar., arouze, er rouiza. Fr., redoul à feuilles de myrte, corroyère, herbe aux tanneurs, redon, redoux, sumac des teinturiers. Ger., myrtenblättriger Gerberstrach, Myrtensumach. A shrub, 2 to 3 feet high, with erect, opposite, myrtle-like leaves, which have been used to adulterate senna. The leaves are used for dyeing black. The berries and the young shoots, which contain coriamyrtin, are poisonous, causing violent cramps in the stomach, soon followed by vomiting, frothing at the mouth, loss of sight, coldness of the skin, clammy perspiration, convulsive movements, pulselessness, and loss of sensibility. [C. Rivière, "Jour. de méd. et pharm. d'Algérie"; "Nouv. rem." Aug. 24, 1888, p. 307; B, 19, 173, 185 (a, 24).]—C. nepalensis. A more spreading species than C. myrtifolia, indigenous to Nepal, where its fruit is said to be eaten. [B, 19, 185 (a, 24).]—C. nescifolia. See C. ruscifolia.—C. phyllifolia [Humboldt and Bonpland]. See C. thymifolia.—C. ruscifolia [Linnaeus]. C. sarmentosa [Forster]. Fr., redoul à feuilles de fragon. Toot-plant, tu-tu; a species growing in New Zealand, containing toot-poison, which is thought to be the same narcotic principle as coriamyrtin. The ripe berries are said to be refreshing, if the seeds are rejected. [B, 5, 19, 173 (a, 24).]—C. thymifolia [Willdenow]. Fr., redoul à feuilles de thym. Ink-plant; a species growing in New Zealand and South America; thought by some to be a variety of C. ruscifolia. The juice of its fruit is at first of a reddish color, but soon turns black. [B, 5, 173, 185 (a, 24).]

CORARIACEÆ (Lat.), CORARIÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²a(a²)/ri²a²-a(a²)/se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²). Fr., corariacées, corariées. An order of plants consisting of the genus Coriaria. [B, 42 (a, 24).]

CORARINE, n. Kor-i²-ar'en. Fr., c. An alkaloid extracted from Coriaria myrtifolia. [L, 41, 49, 87.]

CORARIINÆÆ [Chat.] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²a²-r(a²r)-i²n'e²e(a²-e²). Fr., corariinées. A group of plants comprising the Coriariææ and Linnanthææ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORIDE (Fr.), n. Ko-red. See CORIS.

CORIDIEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)-i²d-i(i²)/e²e(a²-e²). Fr., coridiées. Of Reichenbach, a tribe of the Primulacææ, consisting of the genus Coris. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORIDINE, n. Ko²r-i²d-en. Fr., c. Ger., Coridin. A liquid, C₁₂H₁₄N, metameric with aniline and its homologues, and derived from the distillation of bones and other animal matter. It boils at about 211° C. [B, 4, 5, 158 (a, 24).]

CORIGEEN, n. Ko²r-i²-gen'. See CARRAGEEN.

CORISEN (Fr.), n. Kor-e-a³n². A Korean variety of ginseng, thought by some botanists to be an Aralia. [A, 301.]

CORISLÆ [Latreille] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kor(ko²r)¹i²s¹e(a²e²). From κόρις, a bug. A family of the Hemiptera. [L, 196.]

CORISPERMÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²r¹i²-spurm(spe²rm)¹e²-e(a²e²). From κόρις, a bug, and σπέρμα, a seed. Fr., corispermées. 1. Of Link, a tribe of the Salsolaceæ, comprising Agriophyllum, Corispermum, Anthochlamys, and Vallinia. 2. Of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Chenopodiaceæ, comprising Corispermum, Anthochlamys, and Agriophyllum. [B, 42, 121 (a, 24).]

CORIUM (Lat.), n. n. Kor(ko²r)¹i²-u²m(u²m). Gr., χόριον, δέρμα. Fr., derme, muco-derme (2d def.), chorion muqueux (2d def.). Ger., Lederhaut (1st def.), eigentliche Cutis (1st def.). It., corion. Sp., corión. 1. The dense felt-like membranous layer of the skin, covered on the ectal or free surface by the epidermis or cuticle, and on the ental or attached surface insensibly merging into the areolar subcutaneous tissue. It is composed of a dense network of white fibrous tissue with a slight admixture of elastic tissue. The meshes of the network are wide next the subcutaneous tissue, but become very close next the epidermis, from which it is said to be separated by a basement membrane; here also the c. is raised into blunt projections (formed by cutaneous follicles deflected upward) which constitute the papillæ upon which the epidermis is molded. Besides the proper fibrous tissue of the c., there are present in it blood-vessels and lymph-vessels, nerves and their endings, sweat-glands and sebaceous glands, the roots of the hairs and their arrector pili muscles, connective-tissue corpuscles and lymph-cells, muscular fibre-cells, and, in many animals, striated muscular fibres. 2. The connective-tissue framework or membrane, comparable with the c. of the skin, upon which rests the epithelium of mucous membrane. It contains considerable adenoid tissue, and is bounded next the epithelium, in most situations, by a basement membrane, and next the submucosa, by a thin layer of muscular fibre-cells (muscularis mucosæ). [J, 26, 30, 32, 35, 42; L, 115.] 3. The Poria of Pursh. 4. Of Pliny, the rind, bark, or shell of fruits, plants, or nuts. [a, 17; B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. phlogisticum, C. pleuriticum. CORNICULARIÆ [Nyl] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²rn¹-i²k¹u²(u⁴l)-a³r(a³r)-i(i²)-e²-e(a³-e²). Fr., corniculariées. A tribe of the Phylloideæ, comprising Platysma and Cornicularia. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORNICULARII (Lat.), n. m. pl. Ko²rn¹-i²k¹u²(u⁴l)-a(a³)-ri²-i(e). A family of discoid lichens, comprising Cornicularia, Roccella, Ramatina, and Physcia. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORNICULATÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²rn¹-i²k¹u²(u⁴l)-a(a³)-te-(ta³-e²). Fr., corniculatées. Ger., Gehornfrüchtige, Hornfrüchtige. 1. Of Reichenbach, a group of polypetalous dicotyledons, comprising the Crassulacæ and, in great part, the Saxifragacæ. 2. Of Endlicher, a class of the same grand division, comprising the Crassulacæ, Saxifragacæ, and Ribesiacæ. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 30.]

CORNICULATE, adj. Ko²rn¹-i²k¹u²l-at. Lat., corniculatus, corniculiferus, cornutus. Fr., corniculé, corniculifère. Ger., hornförmig, gehörnt. It., cornicolato. Sp., corniculado. Having horns or processes resembling small horns; in botany, having horn-shaped organs (e. g., petals). [A, 301; L.]

CORNICULIFEROUS, adj. Ko²rn¹-i²k¹u²l-i²f'e²r-u²s. Lat., corniculiferus from corniculum, a little horn, and ferre, to bear. Fr., corniculifère. Having horn-shaped processes (said of the throat of the corolla, as in the Consolida tuberosa). [B, 121; L, 41 (a, 14).]

CORNICULO-PHARYNGEUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²rn¹-i²k¹u²l-(u⁴l)-o(o²)-fa²r(fa²r)-i²n(u²n²)/je²(ge²)-u²s(u⁴s). Relating to or connected with the cornicula laryngis and the pharynx. [L, 31.]

CORNICULUM (Lat.), n. n. Ko²rn¹-i²k¹u²(u⁴l)-u²m(u⁴m). Dim. of cornu, a horn. 1. A little horn or horn-shaped body. 2. A cupping instrument shaped like a horn. [E.]—Cornicula interna ossis hyoidæ. See Cornicula of the hyoid bone.—Cornicula laryngis. The Santorinian cartilages; two small conical cartilages which articulate with the tops of the arytenoid cartilages of the larynx; composed of yellow fibro-cartilage. [C.] See cut under ARYTENOID CARTILAGES.—Cornicula of the hyoid bone. The small cornua of the hyoid bone; the cerato-hyals. [C.]—Cornicula santoriniana. See Cornicula laryngis.

CORNIER (Fr.), n. Korn-e-a. The Cornus mas. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. à grandes fleurs. See CORNUS FLORIDA.

CORNIFIC, adj. Ko²rn¹-i²f'i²k. From cornu, a horn, and facere, to make. Fr., cornifique. Forming or producing horn or horns.

CORNIFICATION, n. Ko²rn¹-i²-fi²-ka'shu²n. Fr., cornu, a horn, and facere, to make. Fr. c. Ger., Verhornung. It., cornificazione. Sp., cornificación. Conversion into a horn-like substance; the process of becoming horny. [D, 3; L, 121.]

CORNIFIED, adj. Ko²rn¹-i²-fid. Converted into a horn-like substance. [L, 121.]

CORNIFLE (Fr.), n. Kor-ne-fl'. The genus Ceratophyllum. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORNIFORM, adj. Ko²rn¹-i²-fo²rm. From cornu, a horn, and forma, form. Lat., corniformis. Fr., corniforme. Ger., hornförmig. It., Sp., corniforme. Horn-shaped.

CORNIGEROUS, adj. Ko²rn¹-i²j'e²r-u²s. Gr., κερατοφόρος. Lat., corniger, cornigerus (from cornu, a horn, and gerere, to bear). Fr., cornigère. Ger., gehörnt. It., cornigero. Sp., cornigero. Horn-bearing (said of plants having horn-shaped appendages). [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORNINE (Fr.), n. Korn-e-en. See CORNIN.

CORNILLE (Fr.), CORNILLET (Fr.), n's. Korn-el-y', -el-ya². 1. In Champagne, the Centaurea cyanus. 2. The cornel-tree. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 41.]

CORNILLET (Fr.), n. Korn-el-ya. The Cucubalus behen. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

CORNILLON (Fr.), n. Kor-nel-yon². See Horn CORES.

CORNIN, n. Ko²rn¹i²n. Fr., cornine, corniine. Ger., Cornein. It., cornicina. Sp., cornina. Cornic acid; a bitter principle obtained from the bark of Cornus florida, occurring in silky needles, soluble in water and in alcohol, little soluble in ether, and colored dark by alkalis. [B, 5 (a, 24).]

CORNINE, n. Ko²rn¹en. An alkaline bitter principle found by Carpenter in Cornus florida. [Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., xxviii, p. 158 (a, 21).]

CORNIOLE (Lat.), n. f. Ko²rn¹-i(i²)-ol(o²l)-a³. Fr., corniole. 1. Of Gray, the genus Collibia. 2. Of Adanson, the Genista tinctoria. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—Radix cornioleæ. Ger., Nurtoakwurzel. The root of a Syrian species of Asphodelus; sometimes used as a substitute for saleg. [Vogl (A, 319).]

CORNIOLE (Fr.), n. Korn-e-ol. The Trapa natans. [B, 121, 173 (a, 24).]

CORNIOLO (It.), CORNIOLO (It.), n's. Korn-e-ol'eo, -olo. The Cornus mas of Linnæus. [B, 121 (a, 21).]

CORNIOT (Fr.), n. Korn-e-o. In Champagne, the Cornus sanguinea. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORNIPLUME, n. Ko²rn¹-i²-plu²m. From cornu, a horn, and pluma, a plume. In ornithology, a tuft of feathers on the head, erected like a horn. [L, 343.]

CORNIX (Lat.), n. f. Ko²rn¹-i²x. Gen., corni'cis. Gr., κορώνη. 1. The carrion-crow, the dung of which was formerly used medicinally. [L, 94.] 2. An old term for a sharp, prominent, beak-like bony process. [Galen, Hippocrates (A, 325).] 3. The fornix cerebri. [A, 301.]

CORNOUILLE (Fr.), n. Korn-u-el-y'. The fruit of Cornus mas. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CORNOUILLE (Fr.), n. Korn-u-el-ya. The genus Cornus, especially Cornus mas. [B, 119, 173 (a, 24); L, 105.]—C. à feuilles arrondies. The Cornus circinata. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. à grandes fleurs. The Cornus florida. [L, 87.]—C. mâle. The Cornus mas. [L, 87.]—C. sauvage. The Cornus mas. [a, 22.]—C. soyeux. The Cornus sericea. [a, 24.]—Decoction de c. à grandes fleurs. See Decoction CORNI FLORIDÆ.—Huile de c. An oil obtained from the pulp of the berries of Cornus sanguinea. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—Conserve de c. See Conserva CORNORUM.

CORNOVA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²rn¹-o'va²(wa²). An undetermined tropical tree. The bark (Lat., cortex cornovæ; Ger., Crinde) is used as a stomachic and in fevers. [B, 180 (a, 24); L, 30 (a, 21).]

CORN-SALAD, n. Ko²rn¹-sa²l-a²d. The Valerianella oltioria. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Italian c.-s. The Valerianella eriocarpa. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Keeled c.-s. The Valerianella carinata. CORNTREON, n. The Cornus mas. [B, 88.]

CORNU (Lat.), n. n. Ko²rn¹u²(u⁴l). Indecl. in the sing.; nom. and acc. pl., corn'ua; gen. pl., corn'uum; dat. and abl. pl., corni'bus. Gr., κέρας. Fr., corne. Ger., Horn. It., corno. Sp., cuerno. 1. A horn. 2. A horn-shaped process or appendage; of the Arabian physicians, the zygomatic process of the temporal bone. 3. A horn-shaped extension of a cavity (e. g., those of the lateral ventricle of the brain and those of the cavity of the uterus). 4. The genus Glaucium. 5. The Plantago coronopus. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 343, 349.]—Alcis c. See C. alcis.—Anterior gray c. Fr., corne (grise) antérieure. The anterior projection of the mass of gray matter seen on each half of the spinal cord upon transverse section. This projection, found throughout the whole extent of the cord, forms a continuous structure, called the anterior gray column. As seen in section the anterior c. is larger than the posterior c., and is largest of all in the cervical and lumbar enlargements of the cord. It is composed of a spongy formation or fine felt network of nerve-fibrillæ, with some cementing neuroglia, and receives many fibres from the anterior roots of the spinal nerves. [Gowers (a, 18).]—Cervi c. See C. cervi.—C. acetabuli arterius (seu antium). The anterior curved end of the superficies lunata of the acetabulum. [L, 332.]—C. acetabuli majus. Lat., cornua ossis hyoidae majora. Fr., cornes de l'os hyoïde. Ger., grosse Zungenbeinhörner. The lower pair of processes which project backward from the sides of the body of the hyoid bone. During early life they are united by synchondrosis with the body of the bone, but in later life they fuse with it. In most vertebrates they exist as separate bones. [L. 7, 31, 142]. Cf. Thyreohyal bones.—Great c. of the thyroid cartilage. See Superior c. of the thyroid cartilage.—Inferior c. of the thyroid cartilage. Lat., c. cartilaginis thyroideae. Fr., corne inférieure du cartilage thyroïde. Ger., unteres Schildhorn. A short, blunt process which extends downward and somewhat forward (one on each side) from the lower end of the posterior margin of the thyroid cartilage. On the inner surface near the lip it presents a smooth surface for articulation with the cricoid cartilage. [L. 7, 31, 142].—Lateral cornua of the hyoid bone. See Great cornua of the hyoid bone.—Lesser cornua of the hyoid bone. Lat., cornua ossis hyoidae minor. Fr., cornes mineures de l'os hyoïde. Ger., kleine Zungenbeinhörner. Two short conical pieces which project upward and back from the points at which the great cornua unite with the body of the hyoid bone. They are often incompletely ossified, and are united with the body of the hyoid bone by a synovial articulation which rarely ankyloses. [L. 7, 31, 142]. See Cerato-hyal bones.—Middle c. See Middle turbinated bone.—Posterior c. of the lateral ventricle. See Posterior horn of the lateral ventricle.—Posterior c. of the medulla oblongata. Ger., Hinterhorn der Oblongata. A mass of gray matter in the medulla oblongata which corresponds to the posterior gray c. of the spinal cord. [L. 31; K.]—Posterior c. of the spinal cord. Lat., c. posterius. Fr., corne (grise) postérieure. The posterior projection of the mass of gray matter in each half of the spinal cord as seen upon transverse section. The totality of this projection is properly called the posterior gray column. It is longer and narrower than the anterior gray c. and receives some of the fibres from the posterior roots of the spinal nerves, while others of these fibres pass parallel to the c. between it and the posterior root zone. A gray gelatinous substance forms a sort of cap on this c. and is called the caput cornu posterioris. Isolated ganglion cells, medium and small in size, lie in the posterior horn, and a few small cells are found in the gelatinous substance. [Gowers (a. 18)].—Posterior spinal cornua. See Posterior c. of the spinal cord.—Sacral cornua. Lat., cornua sacralia. Fr., cornes sacrées (ou du sacrum). Ger., Kreuzbeinhörner. Two blunt, somewhat conical processes upon the lower end of the posterior surface of the sacrum, one on each side of the median line, which articulate with the cornua of the coccyx. [L. 31, 172].—Smaller c. of the thyroid cartilage. See Inferior c. of the thyroid cartilage.—Sphenoidal cornua. Lat., cornua sphenoidalia. Fr., cornes sphénoïdales. Ger., Wespenbeinhörner. Syn.: bones of Berlin. Triangular-shaped bones situated (one on each side) at the inferior anterior portion of the body of the sphenoid bone. Their inner concave surfaces assist in forming the sphenoidal sinuses, while the outer convex surface articulates with the ethmoidal and palate bones. They usually unite at puberty with the sphenoid bone, but occasionally remain separate through life. [L. 31, 142].—Styloid cornua of the hyoid bone. See Lesser cornua of the hyoid bone.—Superior c. of the thyroid cartilage. Lat., c. cartilaginis thyroideae superior. Fr., corne supérieure du cartilage thyroïde. Ger., oberes Schildhorn. A blunt, slender process which extends upward and slightly backward (one on each side) from the upper end of the posterior margin of the thyroid cartilage. It is connected with the tip of the greater c. of the hyoid bone of the same side by the lateral thyreo-hyoid ligament. [L. 7, 31, 142].—Thyroid cornua. See Great cornua of the hyoid bone and Superior and Inferior cornua of the thyroid cartilage.

CORNU (Fr.), adj. Korn-u⁶. Lat., cornutus. Horn-shaped (said of ergoted grain); projecting like a horn (said of the hip-bone in horses that are malformed or much emaciated). [A. 301.]

CORNUATE, adj. Ko²rn'u²-at. See CORNICULATE, CORNIFORM, and CORNIGEROUS.

CORNU CABRA, n. A plant found in the Argentine Republic. Its charcoal is used to remove spots from the skin. [Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., xxiv (a. 21).]

CORNU CERVI [Belg. Ph.] (Lat.), n. n. Ko²rn'u²(u)su⁴(r)(ke²ry- vi)(we). Gr., ελαφρόκερας. Fr., corne de cerf [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., cuerno (6 asta) del ciervo [Sp. Ph.]. Syn.: cervi cornu [Gr. Ph.]. Hartshorn; the horn of the stag [Belg. Ph.]; made into a jelly [Gr. Ph.]. The Fr. Cod. directs that only the extremities of the horn be used. [B. 95 (a. 21)].—C. c. calcinatum. See C. c. ustum.—C. c. preparatum [Netherl. Ph.]. Prepared hartshorn; made by digesting 2 parts of c. c. raspatum and 1 part of crude hydrochloric acid, of sp. gr. 1.165 to 1.170, in a sufficient quantity of water, until all the calcium phosphate is eliminated, then washing repeatedly with cold water, and drying at a gentle heat. [B. 95 (a. 21)].—C. c. raspatum [Netherl. Ph.]. C. c. rasum, C. c. tornatum. Ger., geraspelte Hirschhorn. Rased hartshorn; a preparation containing about 25 per cent. of gelatinous substance soluble in water, about 60 per cent. of salts of calcium soluble in hydrochloric acid, and about 60 per cent. of calcium phosphate. When thoroughly boiled in water, it yields an inodorous and tasteless jelly. [B. 95 (a. 21)].—C. c. ustum. Sp., cuerno de ciervo calcinado [Sp. Ph.]. Burnt hartshorn; made of calcined hartshorn, freed from impurities, pulverized, sifted, dried, and formed into troches. [B. 95 (a. 21)].—C. c. ustum album. Ger., weissgebranntes Hirschhorn. Crude calcium phosphate prepared by calcining hartshorn. [B. 270 (a. 24)].—C. c. ustum nigrum. The residue of charcoal and phosphate of calcium (i. e., bone ash) obtained in the preparation of c. c. ustum. [B. 270 (a. 24)].—C. c. ustum preparatum. See C. c. ustum.—Decoction c. c. A decoction of hartshorn made by boiling 1 part of burnt hartshorn in 12 parts of distilled water until 8 parts result, and straining; used as a drink in fevers attended with diarrhoea. [L. 104].—Decoction c. c. compositum [Belg. Ph., Gr. Ph.]. Compound decoction of hartshorn; made by dissolving 3 parts of sugar, 2 parts of gum arabic [Gr. Ph.] in a percolate obtained from 4 parts each of rasped hartshorn and white bread crumbs, and 150 parts, or a sufficient quantity, of water (192 parts [Gr. CORNUM (Lat.), n. n. Ko²rn'u²m(u⁴m). Fr., cornouille. The cornelian cherry, the fruit of Cornus mas; formerly used in medicine. [B. 119 (a. 21); B. 173, 180 (a. 24).]

CORNUMUSA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²rn-u²(u⁴)-mu²(mu)²za³(sa³). An old name for a retort. [Morley (A. 325).]

CORNUPES (Lat.), adj. Ko²rn²u²(u⁴)-pez(pas). From cornu, horn, and pes, the foot. Fr., cornupède. Ger., hornfüssig. Having the feet provided with hoofs. [L, 41.]

CORNUS (Lat.), n. f. Ko²rn²u²s(u⁴s). From cornu, horn, from its horn-like wood. Gr., κρᾶνεια. Fr., cornouiller (1st def.), écorce de cornouiller à grandes fleurs (3d def.). Ger., Hornstrauch (1st def.), grossblüthige Cornebrinde (3d def.). 1. The cornel-tree; of Linnæus, the typical genus of the Cornaceæ. 2. Of Catesby, the genus Bumelia. 3. Of the U. S. Ph., the root-bark of C. florida, formerly also of C. coccinea and C. sericea. [B, 5, 19, 42, 77, 121 (a, 24).]—Blue-berried c. See C. sericea.—C. alba. See C. sericea.—C. alternifolia [Linnaeus]. Alternate-leaved cornel; a small tree of the northern and western United States and of Canada. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—C. amomum [Miller]. C. cœrulea [Lamarck]. See C. sericea.—C. canadensis. Fr., cornouiller du Canada. The low cornel (or dog-wood), pudding-berries; a species found in the United States having the same properties as C. sericea. [B, 34, 173, 185 (a, 24).]—C. chilensis [Molina]. The Aristotelia macqui. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. coccinea [L'Héritier]. A North American species with verrucous branches and orbicular or broadly oval leaves, white, and tomentous beneath; formerly recognized in the U. S. secondary list. Its uses are similar to those of C. florida. The bark, when dried, affords a powder resembling that of ipecacuanha. [B, 5, 34, 173, 180, 270 (a, 24).]—C. cyanocarpus [Mönnch]. C. femina, C. ferruginea. See C. sericea.—C. florida [Linnaeus]. Fr., cornouiller à grandes fleurs, bois de chien. Ger., schönblühender Hornstrauch, virginische Hundsbere. The flowering dogwood; a North American species growing in the forests from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and cultivated in Europe as an ornament. The root-bark (c. of the U. S. Ph.) is used as a stomachic and febrifuge and as a substitute for Peruvian bark. It is bitter, astringent, and aromatic. It contains gum, mucilage, gallic acid, resin, tannin, and cornine. The young branches, stripped of their bark, are used for whitening the teeth. [B, 5, 19, 77, 173, 180, 280 (a, 24).]—C. herbacea. See C. sericea.—C. lanuginosa [Michaux]. See C. sericea.—C. mas, C. mascula [Linnaeus]. Fr., cornouiller mâle, ouronnier, canéule, cornes, cornouiller des bois. Ger., gelber Hornstrauch, Kornelbaum, Kornelkirsche, rother Hartriegel. The cornelian cherry; a species from 15 to 20 feet high, growing in central and southern Europe and through northern Asia to Japan. The pulpy fruits (fructus corni), when unripe, contain much tannin, and when ripe are edible, and were formerly used in inflammatory diseases. They are made into marmalades and comfits, which are astringent.—C. mas odorata. The Sassafras officinalis. [a, 22].—C. officinalis. A Japanese species, the fruit of which is used for antiseptic beverages in certain forms of fever. The Japanese name is San-si-u. [J. Matsumura (a, 22).]—C. paniculata [L'Héritier]. Fr., cornouiller paniculé. Panicked or white cornel; a species growing in the Northern and Western United States and in Canada. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—C. rubiginosa. See C. sericea.—C. rugosa [Lamarck]. See C. coccinea.—C. sanguinea [Linnaeus]. Fr., cornouiller sanguin bois pûne, cornouiller femelle, puine noire, sanguinelle, savignon, verge sanguine. Ger., gemeiner Hartriegel. The hound's-tree, dogberry; a species reaching a height of 8 or 9 feet, common in the thickets and uncultivated fields in Great Britain. The fruits are of a dark purple, and contain a large percentage of oil, which is used in Italy in soups and elsewhere in lamps and in the manufacture of soap. [B, 19, 77, 173 (a, 24).]—C. sericea [L'Héritier]. Fr., cornouiller à fruit bleu. Swamp dogwood; a North American species with round, blue fruit. It has similar uses to those of C. florida. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. suecica. Dwarf cornel, dwarf honeysuckle; a dwarf species, native of Britain, northern Europe, Asia, and America. The little red berries are eaten by the Esquimaux and in the Scotch Highlands, where they are reputed to be tonic. [A, 305; B, 19, 77 (a, 24).]—C. tomentulosa [Michaux]. C. verrucosa. See C. coccinea.—Decoction c. floridæ [U. S. Ph., 1870]. Decoction of dogwood; made by boiling the bruised root-bark of C. florida in water. [B, 5 (a, 21).]—Extractum c. floridæ fluidum [U. S. Ph., 1870]. Extractum c. fluidum [U. S. Ph.]. Fr., extrait liquide de cornouiller à grandes fleurs. Ger., flüssiger Kornelrindenextrakt. Fluid extract of dogwood; made by exhausting the powdered root-bark of C. florida with a mixture of glycerin and alcohol. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Fructus corni. See CORNUM.

CORNUTIBIUM (Lat.), n. n. Ko²rn²u²(u⁴)-stib²b²-i²-u²m(u⁴m). From cornu, a horn, and stibium, antimony. An old name for a cruet of horn for holding antimony. [A, 325.]

CORNUTA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²rn²u²(ut)²a². See RETORT.

CORNUTE, adj. Ko²rn²u²t. See CORNUTUS.

CORNUTINE, n. Ko²rn²u²t(en). Fr., c. Ger., Cornutin. A poisonous alkaloid obtained by extracting a fluid from large quantities of ergot of rye with 3-per-cent. hydrochloric acid, straining, nearly neutralizing the percolate with sodium carbonate, evaporating, and extracting with alcohol, distilling off the last, alkalizing the residue with a solution of sodium carbonate, extracting with acetic acid, washing, and precipitating the c. from the acetic acid by shaking it with water containing citric acid. ["Ctblrl. f. Gynak.," May 15, 1886, No. 20, p. 309 (a, 21).]

CORNUTUS (Lat.), adj. Fr., cornute. Ger., hörntragend. In the form of a horn, or furnished with appendages resembling horns. [B, 1, 121 (a, 24).]

CORNWEED, n. Ko²rn²wed. The Biserrula pelecinus. [B, 19.]

COROA, n. See CORNOVA.

COROCLEISIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-o(o²)-klis(kle²-es²)-i²s. Gen., corocleisis (-is). From κόρη, the pupil, and κλείσις, a closing. Fr., coréclise. Ger., Pupillenverschluss. Closure or obliteration of the pupil by a membrane or an inflammatory exudate. [F.]

COROCRUM (Lat.), n. n. Kor(ko²r)-o²k-ru²m(ru⁴m). See FERMENT.

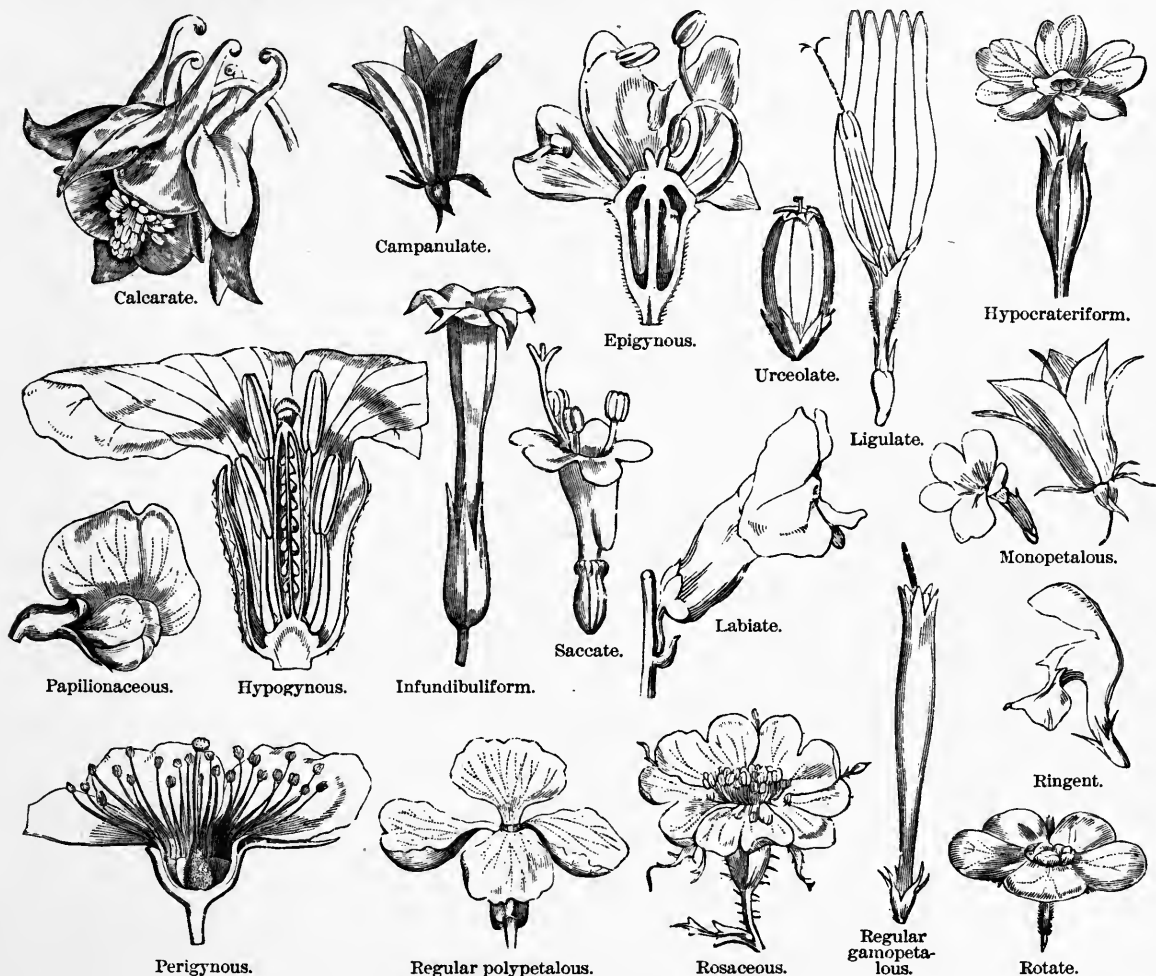

CORODIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-o(o²)-di(di²)-a²(a²l)²i²s-(u⁴s)-i²s. Gen., corodialysis (-al²ysis). From κόρη, the pupil, and διάλυσις, a loosening. See INFUNDIBULYSIS.

CORODIASTASIS (Lat.), CORODIASTOLE (Lat.), n's f. Kor(ko²r)-o(o²)-di(di²)-a²st(a²st)²/a²st(a²s)-i²s, -o(o²l)-e(a). Gen., corodiastasis (-ast²/asis), -ast²/oles. From κόρη, the pupil, and διάστασις or διαστολή, separation. Dilatation of the pupil. [A, 322.]

COROLLA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²r-o²l²a²s. Dim. of corona, a crown. Gr., στεφάνη. Fr., corolle. Ger., Blumenkrone, Korolle. The inner floral envelope forming the whorl of petals, often colored, between the calyx and the stamens. [B, 19, 77 (a, 24).]—Abnormal c. Fr., corolle anormale. Ger., regelwidrige Korolle. Any irregular, dialypetalous c., not papilionaceous. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—Actinomorphic c. A c. in which the parts are radially disposed, i. e., one which is divided into symmetrical halves by vertical planes passed through its centre in any direction. [B, 245.]—Alsinaceous c. Fr., corolle alsinée. A c. in which the claw is less narrow than in the caryophylleous c. and there are distinct spaces between the petals. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Anisostemonous c. Fr., corolle anisostémonée. A c. in which the petals are not equal to the stamens in number. [B, 1 (a, 24).]—Apopetalous c. See Choripetalous c.—Appendiculate c. Lat., c. appendiculatus. Fr., corolle appendiculée. Ger., anhängselige Korolle. A c. which has scales or other outgrowths on its petals. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Bilabiate c. Lat., c. bilabiata. Fr., corolle bilabée. Ger., zweilippige Korolle. A c. divided into two segments or lips, each of which represents usually several united petals. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Caducous c. Lat., c. caduca. Fr., c. caduque. Ger., hinfallige Korolle. A c. which falls with its expansion. [B, 1, 77 (a, 24).]—Calcarate c. Lat., c. calcarata. Fr., corolle éperonnée. Ger., gesperrte Korolle. Syn.: spurred c. A c. in which one or more of the petals are prolonged in the form of a spur. [B, 291 (a, 24).]—Campanulate c. Lat., c. campanulata. Fr., corolle campanulée. Ger., glockige Korolle. A bell-shaped c. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Caryophyllaceous c. Lat., c. caryophyllacea. Fr., corolle caryophyllée. Ger., nelkenartige Korolle. A c. in which there are five petals with long, narrow, tapering claws. [B, 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]—Choripetalous c. Syn.: dialypetalous c., eulechterpetalous c., apopetalous c. A c. having separate and distinct petals. [B.]—Clavate c. Lat., c. clavata. Fr., corolle en massue, corolle clavé. A c. which is larger and with its petals thicker at the base than at the summit. [B, 1 (a, 24).]—Cruciform c. Lat., c. cruciformis. Fr., corolle cruciforme. Ger., kreuzförmige Korolle. A c. having four petals, often unguiculate, placed opposite in the form of a cross. [B, 77, 121 (a, 24).]—Dialypetalous c. Fr., corolle dialypétale. See Choripetalous c.—Digitaliform c. A slightly irregular c., longer than a campanulate c., as in Digitalis. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Eleutheropetalous c. See Choripetalous c.—Epigynous c. Lat., c. epigyna. Fr., corolle épigyne. Ger., epigynische Korolle. Syn.: superior c. A c. springing from the upper part of the ovary or from above it. [A, 301; B, 19 (a, 24).]—Funnel-shaped c. See Infundibuliform c.—Gamopetalous c. Lat., c. gamopétala. Fr., corolle gamopétale. Ger., verbundenblüthrige Korolle. A c. consisting of several united petals; commonly but incorrectly called monopetalous c. [B, 75.]—Hypocroteriform c. Lat., c. hypocroteriformis. Fr., corolle hypocroteriforme. Ger., tellerförmige Korolle. Syn.: salver-shaped c. A c. in which there is a straight tube surmounted by a flat spreading limb. [B, 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]—Hypogynous c. Lat., c. hypogyna. Fr., corolle hypogyne. Ger., unterweibige Korolle. Syn.: inferior c. A c. springing from the base of the ovary or from below it. [A, 301; B, 1 (a, 24).]—Imbricate c. Lat., c. imbricata. Fr., corolle imbriquée. Ger., schindelige (oder hypogynische) Korolle. A c. in which the edge of each petal overlaps the adjoining one. [B, 1 (a, 24).]—Inferior c. Fr., corolle infère. See Hypogynous c.—Infundibuliform c. Lat., c. infundibuliformis. Fr., corolle infundibuliforme. Ger., trichterförmige Korolle. Syn.: funnel-shaped c. A c. having the tube like an inverted cone, and the limb more expanded at the apex. [B, 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]—Irregular c. Lat., c. irregularis. Fr., corolle irrégulière. Ger., unregelmässige Korolle. A c. in which the petals are unequal as regards their development, number, size, or position. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Isostemonous c. Fr., corolle isostémonée. A c. in which the petals are equal in number to the stamens. [B, 1 (a, 24).]—Labiate c. Lat., c. labiata. Fr., corolle labiée. Ger., lippige Korolle. Syn.: lipped c. See Bilabiate c. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Ligulate c. Lat., c. ligulata. Fr., corolle ligulée. Ger., zungenförmige (oder geschweifte) Korolle. Syn.: strap-shaped c. A tubular c. split in such a manner as to form a strap-like process on one side. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Liliaceous c. A c. or, more strictly, a perianth composed of 6 segments regularly disposed to form a funnel-shaped tube. [B, 34.]—Lipped c. See Bilabiate c.—Marcescent c. Lat., c. marcescens. Fr., corolle marcescente. Ger., welkende Korolle. A c. which remains in a withered form after the ripening of the fruit. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Mask-like c. Fr., corolle en masque. See Personate c.—Monopetalous c. Fr., corolle monopétale. Ger., verbundene Korolle. Syn.: gamopetalous c., sympetalous c. 1. As commonly used, see Gamopetalous c. 2. More correctly, a c. consisting of a single petal, a unipetalous c. [Gray (B, 75).]—Orchidaceous c. Lat., c. orchidæa. Fr., corolle orchidée. Ger., orchidartige Korolle. A c. in which the floral leaves are epigynous, and the calyx and c. are in whorls of 3 pieces each, and one of the petals, called the lip, is decidedly different from the rest. [B, 291 (a, 24).]—Papilionaceous c. Fr., corolle papilionacée. Ger., schmetterlingsartige Korolle. That form of irregular polypetalous c. in which there are five petals—one posterior, placed next to the axis; two lateral, called wings; and two anterior, covered in part or whole by the wings and often united slightly by their lower margins, so as to form a single petal, a unipetalous c. [Gray (B, 75).]—Perigynous c. Fr., corolle pérygme. Ger., umweibige Korolle. A c. with the petals adnate to the throat of the calyx—i. e., around the pistil instead of at its base. [B, 123, 291 (a, 24).]—Personate c. Lat., c. personata. Fr., corolle personée. Ger., verlarvte (oder entstellte) Ko- rolle. Syn.: mask-like c. A labiate c. in which the lower lip is pressed back against the upper one, so as to give the appearance of a mask. [B. 19, 77 (a, 24).]—Polypetalous c. Fr., corolle poly-pétale. Ger., vielblättrige Korolle. Syn.: dialypetalous c., leu- ends and expanded at the middle. [B. 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]—Wheel-shaped c. See Rotate c.—Zygomorphous c. A c. which can be divided into two symmetrical halves by one vertical plane and no more. [B. 245.]

theropetalous c., apopetalous c., choripetalous c. 1. As commonly used, see Choripetalous c. 2. More properly, a c. composed of a considerable but unspecified number of petals. [Gray (B. 75).]—Regular c. Lat., c. regularis. Fr., corolle régulière. Ger., regelmässige Korolle. A c. in which the petals are equal in size, position, and development. [B. 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]—Regular gamopetalous c. Fr., corolle gamopétale régulière. A c. that is both regular and gamopetalous. [a, 24.]—Regular polypetalous c. A c. that is both regular and polypetalous. [a, 24.]—Reversed c. Lat., c. resupinata. Fr., corolle renversée. A labiate c. in which the upper lip seems to take the place of the lower one. [B. 1 (a, 24).]—Ringent c. Lat., C. ringens. Fr., corolle ringente (ou en queue). Ger., rachtige Korolle. A labiate c. in which the upper lip is much arched and the lips are separated by a wide opening. [B. 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]—Rosaceous c. Fr., corolle rosacée. Ger., rosenartige Korolle. A c. in which there are five spreading petals with short claws, and arranged as in the single rose and Potentilla. [B. 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]—Rotate c. Lat., c. rotata. Fr., corolle rotacée (ou en roue). Ger., radförmige Korolle. Syn.: wheel-shaped c. A c. in which the tube is very short and the limb flat and spreading. [B. 77 (a, 24).]—Saccate c. Lat., c. saccata. Fr., corolle gibbeuse. Ger., sackförmige Korolle. A c. that is gibbous or sack-like at the base. [B. 77 (a, 24).]—Salver-shaped c. See Hypocrateriform c.—Spurred c. See Calcarate c.—Superior c. Fr., corolle supérieure. See Epigynous c.—Sympetalous c. See Gamopetalous c.—Strap-shaped c. Fr., bandförmige Korolle. See Ligulate c.—Tubular c. Lat., c. tubulata. Fr., corolle tubulée. Ger., röhrlige Korolle. A c. in which the free limb is short and not at all spreading, retaining a cylindrical shape to its mouth. [B. 1 (a, 24).]—Tubular urceolate c. Fr., corolle tubulose urcéolée. A c. in which the claws are united into an urn-shaped tube. [B. 77 (a, 24).]—Unipetalous c. Fr., corolle unipétale. Ger., einblättrige Korolle. See Monopetalous c. (2d def.).—Urceolate c. Lat., c. urceolata. Fr., c. urcéolée. Ger., krugige Korolle. Syn.: urn-shaped c. A c. in which there is scarcely any limb, and the tube is narrow at both COROLLACEOUS, adj. Ko²r-o¹-a'shu's. Lat., corollaceus. Fr., corollacé. Ger., blumenartig. Having the appearance of a corolla. [B. 121 (a, 24).] Cf. PETALOID.

COROLLÆFLORÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²r-o¹-le(la³-e²)-flor'e-(a³-e²). From corolla (q. v.), and flor, a flower. Of G. Don., the Corollifloræ. [B. 121 (a, 24).]

COROLLAIRE (Fr.), adj. and n. Ko²r-ol-a²r. See COROLLARY and COROLLINE.

COROLLAR, adj. Ko²r-o¹-a²r. See COROLLINE.

COROLLARY, n. Ko²r-o¹-a-ri². Lat., corollarium. Fr., corollaire. Ger., Korollarium. In botany, a tendril formed by a depending segment of the corolla. [A. 301.]

COROLLATE, adj. Ko²r-o¹-at. Lat., corollatus. Fr., corollé, corollifère. Ger., mit Korolle versehen. Furnished with a corolla. [B. 121 (a, 24).]

COROLLE (Fr.), n. Kor-ol. See COROLLA.—C. en entonnoir. See Infundibuliform COROLLA.—C. en gueule. See Ringent COROLLA.—C. en masque. See Mask-like COROLLA.—C. en roue. See Rotate COROLLA.—C. éperonnée. See Calcarate COROLLA.—C. gibbeuse. See Saccate COROLLA.

COROLLET, n. Ko²r-o¹-e²t. See COROLLULA.

COROLLIC, adj. Ko²r-o¹-i²k. Fr., corollique. United with the corolla (said of stamens). [B. 1 (a, 24).]

COROLLIFEROUS, adj. Ko²r-o¹-i²f'e²r-u³s. Lat., corollifer (from corolla, and ferre, to bear). Fr., corollifère. Ger., eine Blumenkrone (oder Korolle) tragend. Producing or bearing a corolla. [B. 215.]

COROLLIFLORÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ko²r-o¹-li²-flor'e(a³-e²). 1. Of De Candolle, one of the four subclasses into which he divides the angiosperms. They have a gamopetalous, hypogynous corolla and epipetalous stamens, and comprise the Ericaceæ, Labiataæ, etc. 2.

Of Fries, the first series of Dicotyledoneae, comprising the classes Seminaiflorae, Annuliflorae, and Tubiflorae. [B, 34, 170 (a, 24).]

COROLLIFLORAL, COROLLIFLOROUS, adj's. Ko²r-o²-l²-flor²-a², -u²s. Fr., corolliflore. Having the petals united and springing from beneath the ovary. [De Candolle (A, 301).]

COROLLIFORM, adj. Ko²r-o²-l²-fo²rm. Lat., corolliformus. Fr., corolliforme. Ger., blumenkronenförmig. Having the form or appearance of a corolla. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

COROLLINE, adj. Ko²r-o²-l²-in. Lat., corollinus. Fr., corollin. Ger., korollenartig. Of the nature of, or pertaining to, a corolla. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

COROLLOIDEUS (Lat.), adj. Ko²r-o²-l²-lo²(lo²)-i²d(ed)²-e²-u²s(u²s). Fr., corolloïde. See COROLLIFORM.

COROLLULA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²r-o²-l²-u²(lu²)-a². Fr., corollule. Ger., Blumenkrönchen. The corolla of a floret of a compound flower. [A, 322.]

COROMEGINE, n. Kor-o²m'e²-j-en. Lat., coromegina, coromeginum (from κόρη, the pupil, and μέγας, large). Ger., Koromegin. Runge's name for atropine, on account of its dilating the pupil. [A, 322.]

COROMEIOSIS (Lat.), COROMIOSIS (Lat.), n's f. Kor-(ko²r)-o²(o²)-mi²(me²-i²)-os²i²s, -mi²(me²-os²)-i²s. Gen., coromeios/eos (-is), mios/eos (-is). From κόρη, the pupil, and μειώσις, diminution. Contraction of the pupil. [A, 322.]

COROMORPHOMA (Lat.), n. n. Kor(ko²r)-o²(o²)-mo²rf-om²-a². Gen., coromorphomatos (-is). From κόρη, the pupil, and μόρφωμα, a form. Fr., coromorphome. Ger., Koromorphom. An artificial pupil. [A, 322.]

COROMORPHOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-o²(o²)-mo²rf-os²-i²s. Gen., coromorphosios (-is). From κόρη, the pupil, and μόρφωσις, a forming. Fr., coromorphose. Ger., Koromorphose, künstliche Pupillenbildung. The operation of making an artificial pupil. [A, 322.]

COROMYDRIASIS (Lat.), n. f. Kor(ko²r)-o²(o²)-mi²d(mu²d)-ri²-a²(a²)/si²s. See MYDRIASIS.

COROMYDRIATIC, adj. Kor-o²-mi²d-r²-a²t²/i²k. See MYDRIATIC.

CORONA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²r-on²-a². Gr., στεφάνη. Fr., couronne. Ger., Kranz, Krone. A crown or any crown-like structure, the uppermost part; in botany, a cup-like structure between the corolla and the stamens; in zoology, the region of the head having the vertex as the highest point, a process of the frontal bone supporting the antler in the deer, the down surrounding the beak in birds of prey, also the corneal margin of the sclerotic; of a tooth, its free portion; in obstetrics, the rim of the os uteri externum stretched around the child's head during parturition. [B, 19, 123 (a, 24); L, 180, 231, 343, 349.]—C. ciliaris. Ger., Faltenkranz, Strahlenkranz. The ciliary processes taken collectively. [L, 332.]—C. conjunctivæ. That portion of the conjunctiva that surrounds the cornea. [L, 349.]—C. cordis. The articular portion of the heart. [L, 31.]—C. de frailes (Sp.). The Globularia alypum of Linnæus. The great commissure of the brain; a mass of white substance which connects the cerebral hemispheres. It lies at the bottom of the longitudinal fissure, and has a length of about 4 inches. Its form is arched, the convexity of the curve being upward. Anteriorly it bends downward (at the genu) and backward to the base of the brain, and terminates in two diverging masses (peduncles) which run across the anterior perforated space to terminate near the Sylvian fissure. Posteriorly it ends in a rounded projection called the splenium. In structure it presents a fibrous character, its upper surface showing numerous transverse bundles of nerve-fibres. The lower surface is continuous posteriorly with the fornix, but it is separated from the latter anteriorly by the septum lucidum. It is essentially commissural in its office, its fibres entering all three of the principal cerebral lobes. [K.]—C. cameratum. The fornix cerebri. [I, 3; K.]—C. candidans, C. candidum. Syn.: c. glandulosum [De Graaf]. The solid yellow body formed in the ovary during the retrograde metamorphosis, or histolysis, of a Graafian follicle after the extrusion of the ovum. It is composed of the somewhat wrinkled wall of the follicle and of the structures formed within the follicular cavity to take the place of the extruded ovum. These latter consist of a limited amount of blood derived from the capillaries broken at the rupture of the follicle, a fibrous stroma formed by proliferation of the cells of the membrana granulosa, and the surrounding ovarian stroma. It possesses an abundance of capillaries, and when first formed is considerably larger than the Graafian follicle, this enlargement being especially marked if pregnancy follows the extrusion of the ovum; it finally atrophies, however, and gives place to the ordinary ovarian stroma. The time required for the development and disappearance of a c. luteum is said to be about ten months when pregnancy follows the extrusion of the ovum, and in other cases about two months. [J, 14, 30, 32, 35, 42.]—C. luteum falsum, C. luteum of menstruation. A c. luteum formed in a Graafian vesicle that has discharged an ovule which has not become fecundated. A small portion of the encephalon, derived from the mesencephalon of the embryo, measuring about 12 mm. in antero-posterior diameter and 15 mm. in width, lying upon the posterior aspect of the caudex cerebri (q. v.), behind the third ventricle, beneath the splenium of the corpus callosum, anterior to the vermis superior, and above the upper extremity of the aquæductus Sylvii. A shallow crucial sulcus divides the mass into four rounded eminences, the larger two of which are situated side by side anterior to and above the lower and smaller pair. From each of the anterior eminences extends a tractus of white substance (brachium anterius corporis quadrigemini) to the c. geniculatum externum of the corresponding side. From each of the posterior eminences extends a somewhat similar tractus (brachium posterius corporis quadrigemini) to the c. geniculatum internum. The structure of the eminentiæ anteriores is as follows: 1st, an outer layer of white substance (stratum zonale); 2d, beneath this a layer of gray matter (stratum cinereum); 3d, a layer of gray matter mixed with fibres from the optic nerve (stratum opticum); 4th, a deep-lying layer of which the fibres participate in the formation of the lemniscus. Beneath this layer is the central gray substance surrounding the aquæductus Sylvii. [Hoffman-Schwalbe, Hartmann (a, 18)].—C. rubrum. Ger., Glaskörper. It., corpo vitreo. Sp., cuerpo vitreo. One of the transparent media, or so-called humors, of the eye lying between the lens, the suspensory ligament, and the retina. It is a flattened spheroid, with a depression in front, called the lenticular fossa. It is inclosed in a vitreous membrane, called the hyaloid, which is folded into the depressions of the ciliary body. The vitreous humor is transparent and gelatinous, and its middle portion is said to be arranged in concentric layers, while its outer parts are divided into sectors. A canal runs through its centre from the optic nerve to the lens, which contains the remains of the hyaline artery of the foetal life. [F].—C. Wolffianum. CORPUSCLE, n. Κορπύσιον. Lat., corpuseculum (dim. of corpus, a body). Fr., corpuscule. Ger., Körpchen. It., corpuscolo. Sp., corpúsculo. A general term for (a) a cell (e. g., a connective-tissue c.), (b) some minute particle which is not equivalent to a cell (e. g., a milk-c.), (c) a part composed of many cells or even complex structures (e. g., the Malpighian and taetle c's). [J].—Accessory c. Fr., corpuscule accessoire. Ger., Nebenkerne. Nebenkörper. Nebenkörperchen. Belegungskörper. It., corpúscolo secondario. Sp., corpúsculo accesorio. 1. A kind of secondary nucleus found in the most diverse cells of the body, but more especially in the male reproductive cells, where it was discovered by V. St. George in 1867. Later researches have shown that it is derived from the nucleus by a kind of budding, and that in cell division it again fuses with the nucleus. [¹ Arch. f. mikr. Anat., 1886 (J.) 2. An obsolete term for a nerve-cell. [L.]—Amniotic c's. Small outgrowths, sessile or pedunculated, springing from the amnion investing the umbilical cord, somewhat smaller than mustard-seeds, and of a yellowish-brown or olive tint; observed in certain mammals. [A, 11.]—Amylaceous c's, Amyloid c's. Lat., corpuscula (seu corpora) amylacea. Fr., corpuscules (ou corps) amylacés (ou amyloldes). Ger., amylöide (oder starkemehlartige) Körperchen, Amyloidkörper, Amylonkörnchen. Syn.: animal starch. 1. Small round or oval bodies, concentrically striated, found normally in the central nervous system and some other parts; so called by Virchow, who supposed them to be starch-like in character. In 1859 Schmidt and Bertholet showed them to be proteid; their origin and function are unknown. [J; K.] 2. Similar bodies, reacting like starch with iodine, found especially in the nervous system, in chronic wasting diseases, but not as a product of lardaceous degeneration. [K.]—Antheridian c. Fr., corpuscule des antheridiés. See ANTHEROZOID.—Areal c's. See Extrusion GLOBULE.—Articular nerve c's. Ger., Gelenknervenkörperchen. A modification of the tactile c's in the synovial articulations of the human fingers. They consist of rounded oval bodies, containing long and elliptical nuclei and a finely granulated matrix, into which from one to four double-contoured nerve-fibres enter, which divide dichotomously and are decidedly convoluted. [L, 332, 351.]—Assimilation c's. C's or cells which have the power of converting food into such a state that it is ready and proper for assimilation by the organism. [¹ Jour. of the Roy. Micr. Soc., 1888, p. 970 (L).]—Axile c., Axis c. Ger., Achsenkörper. Of Kölliker, the central part or core of a tactile c. [J, 24.]—Bizzozero's c. Fr., corpuscule de Bizzozero. Ger., Blutplättchen. A variety of c. differing from the ordinary red and white c's, discovered by Bizzozero in the blood; regarded by Norris as identical with his c. Syn.: muscle-nuclei. Small nucleiform or cell-like masses belonging to striated muscular fibres. In mammals they are situated on the surface of the muscular fibres, next to the sarcolemma, but in the lower vertebrates and in the invertebrates part of them are upon and part within the substance of the muscular fibre. They appear like nuclei and are sometimes surrounded by more or less granular protoplasm, which shades off gradually into the substance of the fibre. It is supposed to represent the cell-body, which originally, with others, gave rise to the muscular substance, and presides over the nutrition and growth of the fibres. [J, 30, 32; "Arch. f. Anat.," 1861, p. 1 (J).]—Nerve c's. Fr., corpuscules nerveux. Ger., Nervenkörperchen, Neurilenkerne (3d def.). 1. See Nerve-CELL. 3. Of Klein, the cell-like bodies or nuclei belonging to the inner surface of the neurilemma or primitive sheath in both medullated and non-medullated nerve-fibres. In the non-medullated fibres they have no very definite arrangement, but in the medullated there is a single nerve-c. to each segment—i. e., between every two nodes of Ranvier. According to Adamkiewicz, there are, in addition to the nuclei or c's belonging to the neurilemma or peripheral medullated nerves, special fusiform c's imbedded in the myelin. They appear semilunar on transverse section and stain orange with safranin. They are about one fifth as numerous as the nuclei of the neurilemma. Hermann suggests that they are nuclei of the neurilemma with a remnant of a cell-body. [Adamkiewicz, "Stzgsb. d. k. k. Akad. d. Wissensch. zu Wien," xci (J); Hermann, "Biol. Ger., Pacini'sche (oder Vater'sche, oder Vater-Pacini'sche) Körperchen. A form of nerve-ending discovered by Vater (1741), and named after him by Kölliker and Henle (1844). Each c. consists of a centrally situated blind termination of a medullated nerve-fibre surrounded by an ovoid mass consisting of several concentrically arranged layers with a central, nearly homogeneous core next to the nerve-fibre. The concentric layers forming the principal mass of the c. are supposed to be derived from the perineurium of the nerve-fibre and are surrounded by a layer of endothelial cells. The nerve-fibre enters the c. at one pole, very soon loses its myelin, and then extends as a naked axis-cylinder nearly to the opposite pole, where it enlarges into one or more club-shaped terminal masses. The c's are from 1 to 2 mm. or less in diameter, and have a wide distribution in the body of mammals, being especially abundant in the skin of the hands and feet of man and in the mesentery of the cat. CORTEGADA (Sp.), n. Kor-ta-ga³'da³. A place in Spain, where there are hot effervescent chalybeate and sulphurous springs. [A, 385.]

CORTEPINITANNIC ACID, n. Ko²rt'e²-pin-i²-ta²n'i²qk. Fr., acide cortépinitanique. Ger., Cortépinitanäsäure. An organic acid, C₁₆H₁₀O₁₀, found, together with pinitannic acid, in the bark of the fig-tree. [A, 385 (a, 24).]

CORTEX (Lat.), n. m. and f. Ko²rt'e²x. Gen., cort'icis. Gr., φλοιός. Fr., écorce. Ger., Rinde. It., corteccia. Sp., corteza. Bark, also any investing structure (the rind of a fruit, the peridium of certain fungi, the outer portion of the substance of the brain, the kidney, etc.). [B.]—Cerebral c. Lat., c. cerebri. Fr., écorce du cerveau. Ger., Hirnrinde. It., cortice (o corteccia). Cerebelle. Sp., corteza del cerebro. The external portion of the cerebral hemispheres, consisting of alternate layers of gray and white substance arranged in a convoluted manner. Meynert recognizes five separate layers, each of which possesses more or less distinct microscopical peculiarities. These layers differ in thickness at different points, the component cells being most distinct over the motor areas. In addition to the various pyramidal and multipolar nerve-cells of the c., it is traversed in all directions by fibres which radiate from the central white substance. [K.]—C. adstringens brasiliensis. Ger., Brasilienrinde, zusammenziehende brasilianische Rinde. A variety of barbatimão; a bark introduced into Europe in 1819 by a merchant named Schimmelbusch, who said that it came from a tall tree on some islands in the South Sea. It is without odor, and has an astringent, slightly bitter taste. It has been used as a remedy for leucorrhœa, hemorrhage, etc. Martius supposed that it came from the Acacia jurema. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. adstringens brasiliensis falsus. A spurious bark sold for C. adstringens brasiliensis. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. adstringens spurius. Ger., falsche Gerbstoffrinde. A bark believed by Martius to be barbatimão, derived from the Inga cochliocarpus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. adstringens verus. See C. adstringens brasiliensis.—C. ad totum ovi ambitus. COTIGNAC (Fr.), n. Ko-ten-ya²k. A jelly made of quinces and must; used as an astringent and nutrient. [L, 105 (a, 21).]

COTINGIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kot(ko²t)-i²n(i²n²)j²id(gj²d)-e(a²-e²). Of Garrad and Forbes, a family of the Heteromeri. [L, 121.]

COTINOS (Lat.), COTINUS (Lat.), n's m. and f. Ko²t(i²n-o²s)-u⁵s(u⁴s). Gr., κότινος. Of Theophrastus, the wild olive-tree (Elæagnus angustifolia); of Pliny, the Rhus cotinus. [B, 114, 115, 121 (a, 24).]

COTIS (Lat.), n. f. Kot(ko²t)i²s. Gr., κότις. Of Hippocrates, the occiput and the region of the nucha. [A, 325; L, 94 (a, 21).]

COTO-BARK, n. Ko'to-ba²rk. Lat., cortex coto. Ger., Cotoringe. A bark obtained from the interior of Bolivia, believed at first to be from a Cinchona, though its origin is now in dispute. It has a cinnamon-brown color, a pungent, aromatic odor, and a sharp, peppery taste. It contains oil, resin, starch, gum, sugar, and other substances, but its active principle seems to be a glucoside, cotoin. It has been used with benefit in diarrhœa, though it must be employed cautiously when there is a tendency to acute inflammation, as the bark is very irritating. The powder rubbed on the skin produces heat and redness. It is said to be used in South America in rheumatism. [B, 5, 270 (a, 24); Lascar, "N. O. Med. and Surg. Jour.," Apr., 1882 (a, 24).]

COTOIN, n. Ko'to-i²n. Fr., cotoïne. Ger., C. A crystalline substance, $C_{22}H_{32}O_8$, found in coto-bark; sparingly soluble in water, readily soluble in alcohol. It has been used in diarrhœa, and is said to lessen the excretion of indican. [Albertoni, "Ann. univers. di med.," v, p. 261 (a, 24); B, 5, 270 (a, 24).] See also PARACOTOIN, OXYCOTOIN, LEUCOCOTOIN, and HYDROCOTOIN.

COTONEA (Lat.), n. f. Ko²t-on²e²a². The Origanum vulgare, also the fruit of Cydonia vulgaris. [B, 121, 180 (a, 24); L, 87, 105.]—Semen cotoneæ. The seed of Cydonia vulgaris. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

COTONEASTER (Lat.), n. m. Ko²t-on²e²a²st(a³st)¹u⁵r(ar). Gen., cotoneasteros (-is). Fr., cotoneastre. A genus of small trees and trailing shrubs of the order Rosaceæ, tribe Pomecæ. [B, 19, 42 (a, 24).]—Black-fruited c., Common c. See C. vulgaris.—C. microphylla [Wallich]. A trailing Himalayan species the fruits of which are said to contain hydrocyanic acid. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]—C. nummularia [Fischer and Meyer]. An Asiatic species; a tall, stout shrub which yields a sort of manna or sweetmeat (see SHIRKISH), exported in quantity from Afghanistan to Russia and India. [B, 5, 18, 270, 275 (a, 24).]—C. pyracantha [Spach]. Gr., δένδρακθα. Fr., buisson ardent. Ger., Feuerdorn, Feuerstrauch. A shrub of southern Europe and Asia Minor, the scarlet berries of which are used in obstinate diarrhœa and menorrhœgia. [B, 180, 245.]—C. rotundifolia. An East Indian species, said to contain hydrocyanic acid. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. vulgaris [Lindley]. Syn.: Mespilus c. [Linneus]. Common c.; a species cultivated in Europe. The fruit was formerly used in diarrhœa. According to Wicke, the seeds contain amygdalin. [B, 5, 19, 121, 275 (a, 24).]—Moneywort-leaved c. See C. nummularia.—Small-leaved c. See C. microphylla.

COTTON, n. Ko²t²u. Gr., επιον από βύλον. Ar., cotin. Heb., zemer. Lat., gossypium [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], xyllum [Fr. Cod.], gossypium depuratum [Ger. Ph.], lanugo (seu lana, seu pili) gossypii. Fr., coton [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Baumwolle. It., cotone. Sp., algodón. The hairs of the seed of Gossypium barbadense and other species of Gossypium deprived of impurities. It consists of fine, soft, white filaments, without odor or taste, insoluble in water, in alcohol, or in ether, soluble in strong alkaline solutions, and decomposed by the concentrated mineral acids. Chemically, it is identical with lignin, and, besides its chief constituent, cellulose, contains wax, a fatty acid, coloring matter, pectic acid, and an albuminoid substance. Official c. is prepared by boiling raw c. in a diluted alkaline solution, the soap which is formed through the union of the alkali with the fatty matter being dissolved out by repeated washings. C. impregnated with almost any of the fixed oils will, if allowed to stand, take fire spontaneously. C., besides its use for fabricating cloth, is employed as a filtering medium, and is said to purify air which passes through it by straining out the microscopic organisms that induce fermentation. It is applied as a dressing for scalds, burns, wounds, etc., to absorb effused liquids, and to protect the affected parts from the air. It is also recommended as an external application in erysipelas and rheumatism. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Absorbent c. Lat., gossypium [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], gossypium depuratum [Ger. Ph.], gossypium purificatum. Fr., coton hydrophile, coton purifié. Ger., gereinigte Baumwolle. It., cotone assorbente. Sp., algodón absorbente. C. from which oil and all impurities have been removed; according to F. L. Slocum, made by boiling carded c. for half an hour with a 5-per-cent. solution of soda or caustic potassa, washing thoroughly, expressing, boiling again for 15 or 20 minutes in a 5-per-cent. solution of alkali, washing well with water, acidulated water, and water, expressing, and drying quickly. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Benzole c. A preparation made by immersing 1 kilogramme of clean absorbent c. in a solution of 50 or 100 grammes of benzoic acid and 10 or 20 grammes each of castor-oil and resin in 4 litres of alcohol, and then drying. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Chlorinated c. Of Pavesi, c. moistened with glycerin and subjected to the action of chlorine vapor. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Chloro-carbolated c. C. saturated with equal parts of chloral hydrate and phenol. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—C.-blue. See Soluble blue.—C.-bush. See the major list.—C.-grass. See the major list.—C.-holder. Fr., porte-coton. Ger., Baumwollehalter, Baumwollestab. It., portocotone. Sp., portalgodón. An instrument for carrying a film or wad of c.; either a probe-like rod (sometimes flattened and roughened at the end) around which a thin layer of c. is wound, or a forceps closing by means of a ring sliding on a long, slender shank, for grasping a wad of c.—C.-lint. Lint made from c. instead of linen. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—C'ól (Ger.). See COTTON-SEED OIL.—C.-plant. See Gossypium.—C. root-bark. Lat., gossypii radices cortex [U. S. Ph.]. Fr., écorce de raíz de algodónero. Ger., Baumwollenwurzelrinde. Sp., corteza de raíz de algodónero. The bark of the root of Gossypium herbaceum and other species of Gossypium. It is described as occurring in thin flexible bands or quilled pieces, of a brownish-yellow color on the outer surface (which is roughened with ridges or meshes) and on the inner surface whitish and of a silky lustre. It is without odor, and has a slightly acid, faintly astringent taste. It contains a peculiar acid resin, soluble, when pure, in water, and believed to be the active principle of the bark. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C.-rose. The genus Filago. Cod.]. Ger., Jodbaumwolle. It., cotone iodato. Sp., algodón yodado. C. prepared by placing 25 grammes of dry carded c., in whose meshes 2 grammes of finely powdered iodine have been evenly spread, into a jar of the capacity of a litre, and, after the expulsion of a portion of the air by heating, subjecting the whole to a temperature of nearly 100° C. for about two hours. The c. fiber takes up the iodine and becomes tinged of a brownish color. [B.] For the French preparation see CORON iodé.—Iodoform c. A preparation made by immersing 1 kilogramme of clean absorbent c. in 50 or 100 grammes of ethereal solution of iodoform and 10 or 20 grammes each of castor-oil and resin dissolved in 4 litres of alcohol, and drying. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Marine c. See ADENOS.—Nankeen c. The Gossypium religiosum. [B, 282.]—Natal c. A textile material obtained from the pods of a species of Ipomea. CREASOL, n. Kre⁴/a³s-o^{2l}. Fr., créosol. Ger., Kreosol. A phenol obtained from wood-tar creasote, C₆H₃(CH₃)(OH)OCH₃ = C₆H₁₀O₂. [B, 4, 5 (a, 24).]

CREASOTE, n. Kre⁴/a³s-ot. Lat., creasotum. [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.] (from κρέας, flesh, and σῶζεν, to preserve), kreosotum [Ger. Ph., Aust. Ph., Hung. Ph., Swiss Ph., Belg. Ph., Netherl. Ph., Dan. Ph., Russ. Ph., Greek Ph.]. Fr., créosote du goudron de bois. Ger., Kreosot. It., creosoto. Sp., creosota [Sp. Ph.]. A substance obtained by the distillation of wood-tar, consisting chiefly of a mixture of cresol, oxycresol, methylcresol, and phlorone. It is a highly refractive, oily liquid, having, when freshly prepared, a yellowish tinge which changes to red or brown on exposure to the light. It has a peculiar, sharp, empyreumatic odor and a burning taste, and produces a white stain on coming into contact with the skin. It has a sp. gr. of from 1.035 to 1.085, boils at nearly 200° C., and is inflammable. It is soluble in 80 parts of cold water and readily soluble in absolute alcohol, in ether, and in chloroform. It has marked antiseptic properties. It is used in medicine for its local action as a paralyzant of nerve tissue. Given in small doses, it acts as a sedative, but in overdoses it is a violent poison, producing nausea, headache, convulsions, and coma. It has been administered with advantage in cases of obstinate vomiting, cholera morbus, cholera infantum, lenteric diarrhoea, and typhoid fever, and is of special value in gastric diseases attended with fermentation. Externally it is applied as a stimulant styptic and in the treatment of decayed teeth. It has been found useful in skin diseases of a scaly nature and in the treatment of foul ulcers or inflamed tissues that give rise to foetid discharges in leucorrhœa, diphtheritic sore throat, etc. It has recently been recommended in the treatment of pulmonary phthisis. [B, 5, 95 (a, 24); a, 27.]—Coal-tar c. Fr., crésote du goudron de houille. Ger., Steinkohlentheerkrésot. 1. That portion of the heavy oil of coal-tar which distills between 165° and 200° C. It resembles c. in appearance, and is often substituted for it. It differs from c. in containing carboic acid. It also contains cresol, xylol, and other substances of the aromatic group. 2. An improper name for carboic acid. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C.-bush. The Larrea mexicana. [B, 81 (a, 24).]—C. capsules with balsam of tolu. Of Reuss, capsules containing each 5 centigrammes of c. with balsam of tolu. [“Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.” xxviii (a, 21).]—C. mixture. See Mistura CREASOTI.—C.-plant, C.-shrub. The Larrea mexicana. [B, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—C.-water [U. S. Ph.]. The calabazo de playa of Panama; a species common on the coasts of Central America and the West Indies, and cultivated in Japan. It is used like C. cuje. Its fruit is said to be poisonous. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. cuje. Fr., calabassier à longues feuilles. Ger., grossfrüchtiger Kürbisbaum. A West Indian and South American tree. The pulp of the fruit is used in the West Indies for pectoral complaints, dropsy, and diarrhoea. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. edulis [Desvieux]. Fr., calabassier comestible. A West Indian species, used like C. cuje. The pulp of the fruit is eaten cooked. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. latifolia [Lamarck and Miller]. See C. cucurbitina. 1. Of Dumortier, a tribe of the Bignoniaceæ. 2. Of Gardner, an order intermediate between the Bignoniaceæ and the Cyrtandraceæ. 3. Of Lindley, an order of the Bignoniales, comprising the genera of the Crescentieæ. 4. Of Endlicher and Seemann, a family comprising the tribes Tanacææ and Crescentieæ. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRESCENTIACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kre²s(kras)-se²n(ke²n)-shi²(ti²)-a²a³/se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²). Fr., rescentiacées.

CRESCENTIADS, n. pl. Kre²s-se²n'ti²-a²dz. See CRESCENTIACEÆ.

CRESCENTIC, adj. Kre^{2s}e²ⁿt^{12k}. Fr., crecencique. 1. Crescent-shaped. 2. Derived from a plant of the genus Crescentia. —C. acid. Fr., acide cressenticque. A crystalline acid obtained by Peckolt, of Brazil, from the fruit of Crescentia cujete. [¹ Pharm. Rundsch., Aug., 1884; "² Nouv. rem., June 15, 1885, p. 142 (B).]

CRESCENTINE, E (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kre^{2s}(kras)-se²ⁿ-ti¹²ⁿ-e²-e²(a²e²). Fr., crescencientes. A tribe of the Bignoniaceae, comprising, according to Don, Crescentia, Tanacium, and Tripinnaria, or, according to Bentham and Hooker, Phyllarthron, Schlegelia, Crescentia, and Kiegelia. [B, 19, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CRESCENTINE, E (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kre^{2s}(kras)-se²ⁿ(ke²ⁿ)-ti¹²ⁿ-e²(a²e²). 1. Of Baillon, a tribe of the Bignoniaceae, comprising the subtribes Tanaciceae and Crescenticeae. 2. Of Meissner, a suborder of the same family. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRESCENTI-PINNATISECT, adj. Kre^{2s}e²ⁿt¹²-pi¹²ⁿ-a²t¹²-i²-se^{2kt}. Lat., crescenti-pinnatisectus (from crescere, to grow, pinnatus, feathered, and sectus, cut). Having pinnated leaves, of which the lobes gradually grow larger toward the end. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CRESCIONE (It.), n. Kre^{2s}-chi²-o²-na. The Sisymbrium nasturtium, the Veronica beccabunga, and the Stium nodiflorum. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRESCITIVUS (Lat.), adj. Kre^{2s}(kras)-si^{2t}(ki^{2t})-(e)²-vu^{2s}(wu^{2s}). From crescere, to grow. Vegetative, nutritive, tending to increase. [A, 325.]

CRESERA (Lat.), n. f. Kre^{2s}(kra)-se^{2r}-a². Gen., ereseras. Gr., κρησέρα. A sieve. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

CRÉSINAU (Fr.), n. Kre^{2s}-e-no. In Provence, the Silene inflata. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRE SOL, n. Kre^{2s}-o²l. Fr., crésol. Ger., Kresol. A substitution compound, C₆H₄(OH)(CH₃), of benzene. It has three isomeric varieties: 1. Orthocresol, a white solid, melting at 31° C., and boiling between 185° and 186° C. 2. Metacresol, a colorless liquid with the odor of phenol, boiling between 195° C. and 200° C. 3. Paracresol, a white crystalline substance, which melts at 36° C. and boils at 198° C. It is sparingly soluble in water. These are in turn isomeric with benzyl alcohol. [B, 4, 158 (a, 24).]

CRE SOLSULPHONIC ACID, n. Kre^{2s}-o²l-su^{2l}f-o²n^{12k}. Fr., acide crésolsulphonique. Ger., Kresolsulfonsäure. A monobasic acid, C₆H₃(CH₃)(OH).SO₂.OH, formed from cresol by the substitution of the molecule SO₂.OH for hydrogen. Various isomeric forms are known: 1. Orthocresolsulphonic acid, C₆(OH,CH₃,H,SO₂,OH, H,H), derived from orthocresol. 2. Metacresolsulphonic acid, derived from metacresol. 3. Paracresolsulphonic acid, derived from paracresol, and presenting two varieties having respectively the compositions C₆(OH,SO₂,OH,H,CH₃,H,H.) and C₆(OH,H,SO₂,OH, CH₃,H,H.). [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CRE SOTIC ACID, CRE SOTINIC ACID, n's. Kre^{2s}-o²t^{12k}-o²-i²-p¹²ⁿ-i²k. Fr., acide crésotique. Ger., Kresotinsäure. An aromatic hydroxy-acid of the constitution C₆H(OH)(CH₃)CO.OH. Three isomeric compounds of this constitution may be prepared by the action of sodium and carbonic anhydride on the three modifications of cresol: a-c., from paracresol, melting at from 147° to 150° C.; b-c., from orthocresol, melting at 164° C.; and γ-c., from metacresol, melting at 174° C. They all form acicular crystals. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

CRE SOXACETIC ACID, n. Kre^{2s}-o²x-a²-s-et^{12k}. Fr., acide crésoxacétique. According to Heintz, an acid, CH₁₀O₃, formed by the action of chloroacetic acid on sodium cresylate. [B.]

CRE SPIGNIA (It.), n. Kre^{2s}-pen²-i²-a². The Sonchus oleraceus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRE SPILLA (Sp.), n. Kre^{2s}-pel²-ya². The genus Morchella. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRE SPOLINA (It.), n. Kre^{2s}-po²-le²-na². The Santolina chamaecyparissus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRESS, n. Kre^{2s}. A.-S., creesse. Fr., cresson. Ger., Kresse. It., crecione. Sp., mastuerzo. A popular name for many pungent, acid plants, especially of the genera Lepidium, Nasturtium, and Thlaspi; in the West Indies, the Lepidium sativum. [B, 282 (a, 24).]—American c. The Barbarea praecox. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—American water-c. The Cardamine rotundifolia. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—Amphibious c. See Great water-c.—Australia c. A variety of the Lepidium sativum. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—Bank-c. See American c.—Bastard c. The genus Thlaspi. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—Belle-Isle c. See American c.—Bitter c. The Cardamine amara and other species of Cardamine. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Broad-leaved c. The Lepidium latifolium. Syrup of cress; made by dissolving on the water-bath 9 parts of white sugar in 5 of the clarified juice of Nasturtium officinale and passing through a sieve. [B, 113 (a, 21).]—Suc de c. [Fr. Cod.]. Lat., succus nasturtii. A preparation made by bruising the fresh leaves of Nasturtium officinale, expressing the juice, and filtering. [B, 113 (a, 21).]—Suc de c. de fontaine. See Suc de c.

CRESSONÉE (Fr.), n. Kre^{2s}-so²-na. The Veronica beccabunga. [B, 81.]

CRESSONETTE (Fr.), CRESSONNETTE (Fr.), n's. Kre^{2s}-o²n²-e²t. The Barbarea praecox. [B, 121, 173 (a, 24).]

CRESSON SPRINGS, n. Kre^{2s}-o²n². A place in Cambria County, Pennsylvania, in the Alleghenies, 3,000 feet above the level of the sea, where there are springs (including the "Iron," the "Alum," and the "Magnesia") containing iron. The climate is invigorating. [A, 363, 512.]

CRESSWORT, n. Kre^{2s}/wu²rt. The Eupatorium perfoliatum. [B, 88.]

CREST, n. Kre^{2st}. Gr. ἀκρῶς. Lat., crista. Fr., crête. Ger., Kamm. It., Sp., cresta. The comb of a cock; in ornithology, a collection of long feathers on the head; in general, any ridge-like structure.—Anterior lacrymal c. Lat., crista lacrimalis anterior. Fr., crête lacrimale antérieure. The inner sharp edge of the lacrymal groove of the superior maxilla. [L, 332.]—Auditive c. See CRISTA AUDITIVA.—Canine c. Fr., crête canine. An elevation upon the superior maxilla over the situation of the root of the canine tooth. ["Rev. d'anthrop.," 1876, p. 515 (L).]—Chemical c. A ridge upon the posterior aspect of the tibia of certain birds. [L, 200.]—C. of the clitoris. See CRISTA CLITORIDIS.—C. of the ethmoid bone. See CRISTA GALLI.—C. of the illum. Lat., crista illi (seu ossis illi). Fr., crête illiaque (ou de l'os illiaque). Ger., Darmbeinkamm. It., cresta dell'ileo. Sp., cresta iliaca. The thickened upper border of the illum.—C. of the pubes, C. of the pubic bone. Lat., crista ossis pubis. Fr., crête pubienne. Ger., Schaambeinkamm. A rough ridge upon the upper border of the pubic bone. [C, 3; L.]—C. of the sacrum. Lat., crista sacralis. Fr., crête sacrée. Ger., Kreuzbeinhüste. A longitudinal c., situated in the median line, on the posterior surface of the sacrum, consisting of a series of eminences representing the spinous processes of the vertebrae.—C. of the tibia. Lat., crista tibiae. Fr., crête de la tibia. Ger., Schienbeinkamm. The sharp anterior border of the tibia.—C. of the urethra. See CAPUT GALLINAGINIS.—Dental c., Gingival c. Lat., crista gingivalis, cartilago dentalis. Fr., crête gingivale, cartilage dentaire. Syn.: dental cartilage. A whitish-gray, hard, sharp projection formed by the gingival mucous membrane of the edentulous fetus along the line subsequently to be occupied by the teeth; composed of vascular fibrous tissue. [A, 301.]—Ethmoidal c. Lat., crista ethmoidalis. Fr., crête éthmoïdale. 1. A transverse ridge upon the inner surface of the nasal process of the superior maxilla against which the anterior portion of the lateral mass of the ethmoid bone fits. 2. See Superior turbinate crest.—External occipital c. Lat., crista occipitalis externa. Fr., crête occipitale externe. A ridge which extends in the middle line between the posterior margin of the foramen magnum and the external occipital protuberance of the occipital bone. [L, 332.]—Frontal c. Lat., crista frontalis. Fr., crête frontale. A ridge upon the cerebral surface of the frontal bone which extends between the foramen cæcum and the anterior end of the groove of the longitudinal sinus. [L, 142, 332.]—Iliac c. See C. of the illum.—Incisior c. Lat., crista incisiva (Henle). Fr., crête incisive. The prolongation forward of the nasal c. which terminates in the anterior nasal spine, and having the cartilage of the septum of the nose resting upon it. [L, 142.]—Inferior turbinate c. A horizontal ridge on the nasal surface of the superior maxilla for articulation with the inferior turbinal bone. [L, 31, 142.]—Infra-temporal c. Fr., crête sous temporale. A ridge on the external surface of the greater wing of the sphenoid bone which separates the part of the bone which forms a portion of the temporal fossa, and that which aids in forming the zygomatic fossa. [L, 31, 142.]—Internal occipital c. Lat., crista occipitalis interna. Fr., crête occipitale interne. A ridge on the internal surface of the occipital bone, extending between the posterior margin of the foramen magnum and the internal occipital protuberance. [L, 31, 142.]—Lambdoid c. Fr., crête lambdaïde. In dogs, an elevation upon the posterior surface of the skull which is made up by the union in the middle line of two ridges, each of which runs downward and outward, on each side at the line of junction of the parietal and supra-occipital bones, to the squamosal bone, upon which it is continued to the upper edge of the external auditory meatus, forming the posterior edge of the temporal fossa. [L, 153.]—Nasal c. Lat., crista nasalis. 1. A c. on the palatal process of the superior maxilla, which receives the lower border of the vomer. 2. The vertical prolongation backward of the internal surface of the nasal bone which forms a portion of the nasal septum. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332.]—Neural c. In the embryo, a series of cellular swellings continuous with the medullary plates close to the place of inflection of the epiblast into the involution that forms the primary brain and spinal cord. The posterior roots of the spinal nerves and most of the cranial nerves are formed from them. [A, 5.]—Occipital c. See Lambdoid c.—Olfactory c's (Verrill). Longitudinal ridges upon the neck of the Oligopoda, believed to be olfactory in function. ["Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci." (L).]—Orbital c. Lat., crista orbitalis. The lower rounded margin of the orbital surface of the sphenoid bone. [L, 332.]—Posterior lacrymal c. Lat., crista lacrimalis posterior. Fr., crête lacrymale postérieure. The vertical ridge upon the outer surface of the lacrymal bone which divides it into two unequal parts, and assists in forming the inner side of the canal for the nasal duct. [L, 142, 332.]—Sagittal c. In dogs, a ridge upon the posterior and upper surface of the skull, which runs forward in the median line, and divides near the fronto-parietal suture into two less marked ridges which curve out to the superior posterior angle of the orbit. [L, 153.]—Sphenoidal c. A thin projecting edge of bone in the middle line of the anterior surface of the body of the sphenoid bone. [C.]—Spheno-maxillary c. An arched ridge formed partly by the anterior surface of the ala magna of the sphenoid bone and partly by the pterygoid process which forms the edge of the spheno-maxillary fissure. [L, 31.]—Sublingual c. A ridge in the floor of the mouth of solipeds at the top of which the ducts of the sublingual gland open. [L, 13.]—Superior turbinate c. Lat., crista turbinalis superior. A ridge upon the internal surface of the vertical plate of the palate bone which articulates with the middle turbinate bone. [L, 142, 332.]—Temporal c. Lat., crista temporalis. Fr., crête temporale. Ger., Schlafenbeinkamm. Syn.:

linea frontalis. A c. on the frontal bone which springs from the external angular process and passes backward to be continuous with the temporal line of the parietal bone, and separates the temporal and frontal portions of the bone. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Urethral c. See CAPUT GALLINAGINIS.—Zygomatic c. Lat., crista zygomatica. The anterior edge of the ala magna of the sphenoid bone, which articulates with the malar bone and separates the orbital and temporal surfaces. [L, 31, 142, 332.]

CRESTED, adj. Kre^{2st}/e^{2d}. Having a crest (in botany, said chiefly of anthers having an elevated, irregular or notched ridge, resembling the crest of a helmet). [B, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

CREST-MARINE, n. Kre^{2st}-ma²r-en'. The Crithmum maritimum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

CRESYL, n. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}. Fr., crésyle. Ger., Kresyl. The radicle of cresol, methyl-phenyl, C₆(CH₃)H₄ = C₇H₇. [B.]—C. hydrate. Fr., hydrate de crésyle. See CRESYL ALCOHOL.

CRESYL ALCOHOL, n. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}-a^{2l}/ko-ho^{2l}. A monatomic alcohol of the C_nH_{2n}-60 series (phenols), isomeric with benzyl alcohol and formed from phenylalcohol by substituting a molecule of methyl for an atom of the hydrogen of the phenyl. Formula: C₆H₅(OH)CH₃. [B, 2.]

CRESYLATE, n. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}-at. Fr., crésylate. Ger., Kresylat. A compound of cresol with a metallic radicle. The c's are homologous with the carbonates, and have the general constitution (C₆H₄(CH₃)O)_nR, where R is a radicle of the combining power n. [a, 24.]

CRESYLCHLORACETAMIDE, n. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}-klor-a²s-e^{2t}-a^{2m}-i^{2d}(id). Of Tommasi, tolylchloracetamide. [B, 2.]

CRESYLIC, adj. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}/i^{2k}. Fr., crésylique. Containing cresyl. [B.]—C. acid. Lat., acidum cresylicum. Fr., acide crésylique. Ger., Kresylsäure. Cresol; so called because, like phenol, it forms metallic derivatives called cresylates, by replacement of the hydrogen in its molecule of hydroxyl. [B.]—C. alcohol, C. phenol. See CRESYL ALCOHOL.

CRESYLLOL, n. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}-o^{2l}. Fr., crésylol. See CRESOL.

CRESYLSALICYLIC ACID, n. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}-sa^{2l}-i^{2l}-i^{2k}. Fr., acide crésylsalicylique. Of J. Williams, an acid that accompanies salicylic acid when prepared by Kolbe's process, and that is found in the mother-liquor. [a, 27.]

CRESYLSULPHUROUS ACID, n. Kre^{2s}/i^{2l}-su^{2l}/i^{2l}-u^{2r}-u^{2s}. Fr., acide crésylsulfureux. An acid, C₇H₈O₃ = CH₃-C₆H₄-SO₃H, formed by heating toluene and sulphuric acid for two days on a water-bath. [B, 244 (a, 27).]

CRETA (Lat.), n. f. Kre(kra)'ta³. Gr., γῆ κρητική (Cretan earth, from κρήνη, the island of Crete, whence the ancients derived their chief supply). Fr., crète. Ger., Kreide. It., c. Sp., c. greda. Chalk. [a, 24.]—Ceratum cretæ acetatis. See KIRKLAND'S (NEUTRAL) CERATE.—C. alba. White chalk. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. amoniacal (Sp.). Ammonium sesquicarbonate. [A, 447.]—C. argentaria. Chalk containing mica. [A, 325.]—C. barotica. See BARIUM CARBONATE.—C. blanca (Sp.). White chalk. [A, 447.]—C. branzonica, C. brigantina. See FRENCH CHALK.—C. cimolia. Fullers' earth. [L, 97.]—C. farinacea. See MINERAL AGARIC.—C. fullonica. Fullers' earth. [L, 97.]—C. gallica. See FRENCH CHALK.—C. hispanica. Venetian or Spanish chalk; a variety of talc used in the arts. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. lævigata. See C. præparata.—C. medicinal artificial (Sp.). See C. præparata.—C. præcipitata. Precipitated chalk; calcium carbonate obtained by precipitation. [B.]—C. præparata [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.]. Fr., crète préparée. Ger., präparirte Kreide. It., c. preparata. Sp., c. preparada, liza purificada, blanco de España. Prepared chalk; chalk freed from its impurities by elutriation. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—C. rubra. See RED CHALK.—C. selinusia. See TERRA SELINUSIA.—C. umbria. Yellow ochre; anciently employed in medicine. [L, 77 (a, 21).]—Creteæ unguentum compositum. See KIRKLAND'S (NEUTRAL) CERATE.—C. veneta. See C. hispanica.—C. viridis. Malachite. [A, 492 (a, 21).]—C. vulgaris. Common chalk. [L, 105 (a, 21).]—Decoctum c. Syn.: decoctum cretaceum. Decoction of chalk; of Baco, a preparation made by boiling down to 1 quart $\frac{1}{2}$ pound of powdered chalk in 3 pints of water, pouring off the clear, milky liquor, and adding to it a sufficient quantity of syrup. [L, 94 (a, 21).]—Mistura cretæ [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], Mistura de c. [Sp. Ph.] (Sp.), Mixtura cretæ. Fr., miixture de crète. Ger., Kreidemixtur. It., mistura di c. Chalk mixture; made, according to the U. S. Ph., by rubbing up 1 pound of compound chalk-powder with 2 parts each of water and cinnamon-water. The British preparation is made by triturating $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. (av.) each of prepared chalk and gum arabic with $\frac{7}{8}$ fl. oz. of cinnamon-water, and adding $\frac{1}{4}$ fl. oz. of syrup. This mixture is much employed in diarrhœa with acidity. Laudanum and kino are often added to increase its astringency. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Pulvis cretæ aromaticus [Br. Ph.]. Fr., poudre de crète aromatique. Ger., gewürztes Kreidepulver. It., polvere di c. aromatica. Aromatic powder of chalk, consisting of 8 parts of powdered cinnamon-bark, 6 each of powdered nutmeg and powdered saffron, 3 of powdered cloves, 2 of powdered cinnamon-seeds, 50 of sugar, and 22 of prepared chalk, intimately mixed and reduced to a fine powder. [B, 81.]—Pulvis cretæ aromaticus cum opio [Br. Ph.]. Fr., poudre de crète opiacée. Ger., Kreidepulver mit Opium. It., polvere di c. aromatica con oppio. Aromatic powder of chalk and opium, consisting of pulvis cretæ aromaticus and opium; used in diarrhœa. [B, 81.]—Pulvis cretæ compositus [U. S. Ph.]. Fr., poudre de crète composée. Ger., Kreidepulver mit Gummi. Compound powder of chalk; made by mixing 30 parts of prepared chalk, 20 of acacia in fine powder, and 50 of finely powdered sugar. [B, 5 (a, 21).]—Pulvis dentifricium cum c. et camphora [Fr. Cod.]. See Poudre dentifrice de CRAIE camphrée.—Pulvis e. c. compositus. See Pulvis cretæ compositus.—Pulvis e. c. compositus cum opio. See Pulvis cretæ aromaticus cum opio.—Trochisci cretæ

O, no; O², not; O³, whole; Th, thin; Th², the; U, like oo in too; U², blue; U³, hull; U⁴, full; U⁶, urn; U⁶, like ü (German).

[U. S. Ph.]. Fr., tablettes (ou pastilles) de craie lavée. Ger., Kreiepastillen. Troches of chalk, each containing 4 grains of prepared chalk, 1 grain of gum arabic, 6 grains of sugar, and 1 grain of nutmeg. [B, 81 (a, 21).]

CRETACEOUS, adj. Kre-ta'shu's. Lat., cretaceus. Fr., cretacé. Ger., kreidig, kreideweiss (1st def.), kreideartig (2d def.). 1. Chalky white. [B, 19, 123 (a, 24).] 2. Resembling, containing, or made from chalk.—C. acid. Lat., acidum cretaceum. Carbon dioxide. [B, 87.]

CRETHMON (Lat.), CRETHMOS (Lat.), n's n. and f. Kre'th-(krath)/mo'n, -mo's. Gr., κρήμων, κρήμος. Of Pliny, the Crithrum maritimum. [B, 114 (a, 24).]

CRETIFICATION, n. Kre't-i-fi'k-a'shu'n. From creta, chalk, and facere, to make. See CALCIFICATION.

CRÉTINAGE (Fr.), n. Kra-te-na'zh. See CRETINISM.

CRETINIC, adj. Kret'i'n-i'k. Fr., crétinique. Pertaining to cretins or to cretinism. [D, 36.]

CRÉTINIFORME (Fr.), adj. Kra-te-ne-fo'rm. See CRETINOID.

CRETINISM, n. Kre'ti'n-izm. Lat., cretinismus, cretismus (probably from creta, chalk, on account of the chalky complexion). Fr., cretinisme. Ger., Kretinismus. It., Sp., cretinismo. A condition of deformity of the entire body, but especially of the head (with premature cranial synostosis), together with imperfect development. The disease is endemic in the valleys of certain mountainous districts, particularly those of the Pyrenees, the Alps, and the Himalayas, and, to a certain extent, in those of Syria and China. It is accompanied by feebleness of the mental faculties and special senses, and is often associated with goitre. [A, 326.]—Complete c. That form of the disease which is characterized by idiocy, deaf-mutism, deficient general sensibility, absence of reproductive power, and incurability. [D, 1.]—Incomplete c. That form of c. in which the mental faculties are capable of development, the head is moderately well formed and erect, and the special senses and the reproductive power are preserved. [D, 1.]—Semi-c. That form of c. in which the mental faculties are limited to the impressions of the senses and to the bodily wants. General sensibility is imperfect, the head is badly formed and drooping, the speech is rudimentary, and the reproductive powers are feeble or absent. [D, 1.]—Sporadic c. A cretinoid condition observed in a person born of parents who are not cretins, and who has not lived in a district where c. prevails. According to L. E. Holt, the thyroid gland is never enlarged. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," Apr. 13, 1889, p. 414.]

CRETINOID, adj. Kret'i'n-oid. From cretin (q. v.), and εἶδος, resemblance. Fr., crétinoïde. Ger., Kreidlingähnlich. Resembling a cretin. Cf. MYXEDEMA.

CRETINISMUS (Lat.), CRETISMUS (Lat.), n's m. Kre't-(krat)-i'n-i'z(mu's)/mu's(mu's), kre't-(krat)-i'z(i'z)/mu's(mu's). See CRETINISM.

CRICO-ARYTÆNOID, adj. Kri²'ko-a²r-i²-ten'oid. Lat., crico-arytænoideus. Pertaining to the cricoid and to the arytænoïd cartilages. [L.]

CRICO-ARYTÆNOIDEUS (Lat.), adj. Kri(kri²)²'ko(ko²)-a²r-(a²r)-i²(u²)-ten(ta²-e²n)-o(o²)-i²d(ed)'e²-u²s(u⁴s). Fr., crico-arytænoïde. Crico-arytænoïd; as a n., a muscle having relations to the cricoid and the arytænoïd cartilages.—C.-a. anticus, C.-a. anterior, C.-a. lateralis. Fr., crico-arytænoïdien latéral. Ger., seitlicher Ringgiesskannemuskul. A muscle arising from the upper border of the side of the cricoid cartilage and inserted into the external angle of the base of the arytænoïd cartilage. With its fellow of the opposite side, it closes the glottis by rotating the arytænoïd cartilages inward. Cruveilhier regarded it as a dilator of the glottis. [H. Meyer (A, 262).]—C. posticus. Fr., crico-arytænoïdien postérieur. Ger., hinterer Ringgiesskannemuskul. A muscle arising from the posterior surface of the cricoid cartilage and inserted into the external angle of the base of the arytænoïd cartilage. With its fellow of the opposite side, it separates the vocal bands. [L.]

CRICOCORNICULATUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri(kri²)²'ko(ko²)-ko²rn-i²k-u²l(u⁴l)-a(a²)²'tu²s(u⁴s). From κρικός, a ring, and cornu, a horn. Of Tourtoun, an anomalous flat muscular band situated beneath the crico-arytænoïd muscles, extending from the upper surface of the cricoid cartilage to the corniculum laryngis. [L, 31.]

CRICOCORNICULO-PHARYNGEUS (Lat.), adj. Kri(kri²)²'ko(ko²)-ko²rn-i²k-u²l(u⁴l)-a(a²)²'lo(lo²)-fa²r(fa²r)-i²n(u²n²)'je²(ge²)-u²s(u⁴s). Relating to or connected with the cricoid cartilage, the cartilages of Santorini, and the pharynx. [*'Arch. f. Anat. u. Phys.," 1869, p. 436 (L).]

CRICO-CRÉTI-ARYTÆNOÏDIEN (Fr.), n. Kre-ko-kra-te-a²r-e-ta-no-ed-e-a²n². See CRICO-ARYTÆNOÏDEUS posticus.

CRICODES (Lat.), adj. Kri²'k-od'(ez/as). See CRICOID.

CRICO-EPIGLOTTICUS (Lat.), adj. Kri(kri²)²'ko(ko²)-e²p-i²-glo²(g'lot)'ti²k-u²s(u⁴s). Relating to or connected with the cricoid cartilage and the epiglottis; as a n., the thyreo-epiglottic muscle when it arises from the cricoid cartilage. [L, 332.]

CRICO-HYOÏD, adj. Kri²'ko-hi'oid. Pertaining to the cricoid cartilage and the hyoid bone.

CRICO-HYOÏDEUS (Lat.), adj. Kri(kri²)²'ko(ko²)-hi(hu²)-o(o²)-i²d(ed)'e²-u²s(u⁴s). See CRICO-HYOÏD; as a n., of Zagorsky, an anomalous muscle extending from the hyoid bone to the cricoid cartilage. [L, 31.]

CRICOID, CRICOIDEAN, adj's. Kri²'koid, kri-ko-i²d'e²-a²n. Gr., κρικοειδής (from κρικός, a ring, and εἶδος, resemblance). Lat., cricoides, cricoides, cricoides. Fr., cricoidé, cricoidien. Ger., ringförmig. Ring-shaped. See C. CARTILAGE.

CRICO-LATÉRO-ARYTÆNOÏDIEN (Fr.), n. Kre-ko-la²-ta-ro-a²-re-ta-no-e-de-a²n². See CRICO-ARYTÆNOÏDEUS lateralis.

CRICO-MEMBRANOSUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri(kri²)²'ko(ko²)-me²m-bra²n(bra²n)-os'u²s(u⁴s). See CRICO-EPIGLOTTICUS.

CRICO-ŒSOPHAGEUS (Lat.), adj. Kri(kri²)²'ko(ko²)-e(o²-e²)-so²f-a(a²)²'je²(ge²)-u²s(u⁴s). Pertaining to the cricoid cartilage and to the œsophagus; as a n., a muscle in relation with those parts. [L, 31.]—C. anterior. Syn.: levator œsophagi. A bundle of longitudinal muscular fibres upon the upper and anterior surface of the œsophagus, united by the posterior aspect of the cricoid cartilage. [L, 332.]—C. œsophagei laterales. Bundles of the longitudinal muscular fibres of the œsophagus which unite with the crico-pharyngeus or thyreo-pharyngeus muscle. [L, 332.]—C. medius. See C. anterior.

CROTCHET, n. Kro²ch²e²t. Lat., uncinus attractorius [Philumenus, quoted by Aetius]. Fr., crochet aigu. Ger., spitzer Haken. It., uncino acuto. Sp., gancho agudo. An obstetrical instrument consisting of a long shank of steel terminating in a short, sharp hook to be engaged in the interior of the foetal skull, after perforation, for extracting the head.—Body c. A heavy guarded c. used for extracting the body of the foetus after the removal of the head. [A, 29.]—Guarded c. A c. to which a movable blunt guard is attached at the shank, capable of being closed over the sharp extremity and preventing the latter from injuring the maternal structures in case the instrument slips.

CROTON (Lat.), n. m. (as used by some botanical writers, n.). Kro²(kro²)t¹o²n(on). Gen., croton (-is). Gr., κρότων, κρότων. Fr., c. Ger., C. Krotton, Wunderbaum (2d def.). 1. Of Linnaeus, a genus of euphorbiaceous plants, containing, according to Bailon, the sections Andrichnia, Angelandra, Anisophyllum, Argyrodendron, Astræa, Astræopsis, Astrogome, Barhamia, Brachystachys, Brunsvia, Calyptriopetalum, Cascarilla, Cinogasum, Cleodora, Codonocalyx, Crotonanthus, Cyclostigma, Decarinium, Drepadenium, Eleuteria, Engelmannia, Eutropia, Furcaria, Geiseleira, Gynamblosis, Hendrecandra, Heptallion, Klotzschiphytum, Lasiogyne, Leucadenia, Medea, Micranthis, Microcroton, Monguia, Myriogomphus, Ocalia, Patanostigma, Petalostigma, Phlinophytum, Podocalyx, Podostachys, Ricinocarpus, Ricinoides, Stolidan- thus, Tigilium, Timandra, and Tridesmis. [B, 121 (a, 24).] 2. The Ricinus communis. [A, 322, 387; B, 121 (a, 24); L, 97.] 3. A variety of sputum containing purulent masses. [Hippocrates (A, 322).] 4. The dog-louse. [A, 387.] 5. See CROTONA.—Alcohol cum crotono cascarilla. See Tinctura CASCARILLE.—Capsule cum oleo crotonis [Dan. Ph.]. Gelatin capsules each containing 60 grammes of a mixture of 1 part of c.-oil and 39 parts of castor-oil. [B, 95 (a, 21).]—Cortex crotonis. Cascarilla; the bark of C. eleuteria. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—C. adenaster [Jimenez]. Sp., ni-coso [Mex. Ph.]. A species employed as an antiperiodic. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Feb., 1886, p. 72.]—C. adipatus [Kunth]. Fr., c. griseseur. Ger., fettglänzender Krotan. A species found on the Amazon, which furnishes a balsam used as incense. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. aencens (Fr.). See C. thurifer.—C. a feuilles de châtaigner (Fr.). See C. castaneifolius.—C. à feuilles de tilleul (Fr.). See C. tiliaefolius.—C. à feuilles d'hibiscus (Fr.). See C. hibiscifolius.—C. antisiphiliticus [Martius]. Fr., c. antisiphilitique. A Brazilian species. The leaves are employed in decoction against syphilis, and used externally in poultices. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. argenteus [Forskål]. See C. tinctorum.—C. argyranthemum [Michaux]. An American species indigenous to Georgia and Florida. The leaves are aromatic and pungent; the root is slightly aromatic and pleasantly bitter. An infusion of the plant is a reputed remedy for colic, diarrhoea, sore mouth, sore throat, etc., and its fresh juice is used as a vulnerary. [B, 34 (a, 24); J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Dec., 1885, p. 597 (a, 17).]—C. aromaticus [Linnaeus]. Fr., c. aromatique. A small tree found in the East Indies, Cochinchina, and the Moluccas. The exudation from the twigs (caused by the puncture of insects) is one of the varieties of gum lac, and is also used as a vulnerary. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. balsamifer [Linnaeus]. Fr., c. balsamique, bois du petit baume. Seaside balsam; a species found in the West Indies, where it is used as a vulnerary and to aromatize liqueurs, especially the eau de Mantes. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. benzoe, C. benzoin [Linnaeus]. The Terminalia argusifolia. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. bracteiferus [Roxburgh]. The Codiaeum silvestre. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. camaza [Perrotet]. A species indigenous to the Philippines; its fruit is astringent, and its seeds are purgative in small and poisonous in large doses. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. campestris [St.-Hilaire]. Fr., c. des champs. A species indigenous to Brazil. The root is purgative and is employed in syphilis. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. cascarilla [Bennett]. Fr., c. cascarille, fausse canelle, faux quinquina, quinquina gris aromatique. Ger., falscher Kaskarillkrotan. A species found in the West Indies. Though formerly a source of the cascarilla of commerce, it yields none now. Its bark is an aromatic bitter. [B, 5, 18, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. cascarilloides [Vahl]. A species indigenous to Hayti. Its bark was formerly known to commerce as cascarilla. [B, 121, 180 (a, 24).]—C. castaneifolius [Linnaeus]. Fr., c. à feuilles de châtaigner. A species indigenous to tropical America furnishing lac. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. chamaedryfolius [Lamarck]. A species indigenous to Colombia and the Antilles; used as a vulnerary and resolvent. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. chloral. See BUTYLCHLORAL.—C. coccinus [Vahl]. A species found in Malabar and Ceylon; used in snake-bites. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. coriaceus [Kunth]. Fr., c. coriacé. A species indigenous to tropical America; its bark yields a balsamic resin employed as an incense. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. corylifolius [Lamarck]. A West Indian shrub, used as an aromatic tonic and carminative and as a vulnerary. [B, 180.]—C. des champs (Fr.). See C. campestris.—C. des teinturiers (Fr.). See C. tinctorum.—C. digitatus. The Manihot digitata. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. dioicus [Cavanilles]. Sp., yerva del zorillo [Mex. Ph.]. A Mexican species. The root and the seeds are drastic, and the fixed oil of the latter has been recommended as a substitute for croton-oil. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Apr., 1886, p. 168.]—C. discolor [Reichenbach]. The C. pseudo-china. [a, 24.]—C. draco [Schlechtendahl]. A Mexican species. The sap resembles dragon's blood. [B, 19, 180 (a, 24).]—C. draconoides [Müll.]. A plant the juice of which possesses sudorific and depuratory properties. [L, 49 (a, 21).]—C. eleuteria. Fr., bois de musc. Ger., wahrer Kaskarille-Krotan, wohriehender Krotan. 1. The C. Sloanei. 2. Of Bennett, the Chuytia eleuteria, which furnishes the true cascarilla-bark (cortex cascarille) of commerce; a small tree indigenous to the West Indies, chiefly the Bahamas. [B, 5, 18, 88, 95, 173, 180 (a, 24).] See CASCARILLA.—C. faux-quina (Fr.). See C. pseudo-china.—C. flavens. Fr., petit baume. Yellow balsam; a species employed at Martinique as a vulnerary and to aromatize liqueurs. It is also used in baths and fomentations. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. fragrans [Kunth]. A species found along the Magdalena River, Colombia; its flowers furnish a perfume. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. fulvus [Martius]. A species the root of which is used in Brazil as a purgative in syphilis. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. glabellus. A species indigenous to Mexico and the West Indies. It furnishes an inferior cascarilla, which is official in the pharmacopœias of Austria, Belgium, Finland, Spain, and the Netherlands. [a, 24.]—C. gossypifolius [Vahl]. A plant which yields a concrete juice comparable to dragon's blood. [L, 49 (a, 21).]—C. gratissimus [Bruch]. A species indigenous to the Cape of Good Hope, used as a perfume. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. hastatum [Linnaeus]. The Tragia cannabina. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. hibiscifolius [Kunth]. Fr., c. à feuilles d'hibiscus. A species growing in New Granada; it yields a kind of dragon's blood. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. humilis [Linnaeus]. A species indigenous to Jamaica and Hayti. The leaves are aromatic, and are used in baths and fomentations. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Crotonis oleum [Gr. Ph.]. See Croton-oil.—C. jamaigota [Hamilton]. See C. tigilium.—C. lacciferus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. linearis. A species indigenous to the Antilles, often confounded with C. cascarilla. An infusion of the leaves is used in Jamaica in colic and to aromatize baths. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C. lobatum [Forskål]. An East Indian species. The oil of the seeds is used as an embrocation in rheumatism, and the leaves are applied to boils and abscesses. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. lucidus. A West Indian species. The bark is often substituted for that of C. eleuteria. It has not the bitter taste nor the aromatic properties of true cascarilla-bark. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. macrostachys [A. Richard]. A species used in Abyssinia as a vermifuge. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. malambo [Karsten]. A small tree indigenous to the coast of Venezuela and Colombia, yielding an aromatic bark, called in Colombia canella del páramo (cortex malambo), which has been used satisfactorily as a substitute for Peruvian bark. [B, 5, (a, 24).] See Malambo-BARK.—C. micans [Swartz]. A species found in the West Indies; used as an aromatic embrocation. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. moluccanum. See ALBERTITES moluccana.—C. montanus. The Echinus philippinensis. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. nitens [Swartz]. A species found in the West Indies; its bark resembles that of cascarilla in taste. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. niveum, C. niveus [Jacquin]. A South American species of which the aromatic juice is used as a vulnerary. [L, 105 (a, 21).]—C. obliquifolium. The Tournefortia tinctoria. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. oblongifolium. A species the root-bark of which is used in India, in infusion and decoction, as a cholagogue, purgative, and resolvent, and externally as an application to sprains, bruises, and rheumatic swellings. [A, 479; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxviii, p. 193.]—C.-oil. Lat., oleum tigilii [U. S. Ph., Swiss Ph.] (see crotonis [Br. Ph., Ger. Ph., Dan. Ph., Norweg. Ph., Swedish Ph., Russ. Ph., Netherl. Ph., Finn. Ph., Ger. Ph. 1st ed.], see crotonis tigilii [Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph.], crotonis oleum [Gr. Ph.]), oleum crotonis [Br. Ph., Ger. Ph.], oleum crotonis tigilii, oleum a semine crotonis [Fr. Cod.], Fr., huile dectigilium [Fr. Cod.], Ger., Crotonöl, Krotonöl. It, olio di crotoniglio. Sp., acete de croton tiglio. A pale or yellowish-brown viscid fixed oil expressed from the seeds of C. tigilium, of faint odor and hot and acrid taste, with a sp. gr. of from 0.940 to 0.955, soluble in alcohol, in ether, in chloroform, and in carbon disulphide. It contains tiglic acid, isomeric with angelic acid, but differing in its melting point. It is a powerful drastic purgative, and is chiefly used in coma and in obstinate constipation. Applied externally, it acts as an irritant, causing a pustular eruption. [B, 5, 18 (a, 24).]—C.-oil Liniment. See Linimentum crotonis.—C. originifolius [Lamarck]. A West Indian species. The sap is used like copaliba balsam, also as a vulnerary, and from the twigs and leaves a beverage is distilled. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. pavana [Hamilton]. A species indigenous to Ava and Camrup. The seeds probably furnish some of the c.-oil of commerce, and the wood is said to be purgative and diaphoretic. [B, 5, 19, 180 (a, 24).]—C. pellicus [Kunth]. See C. fulvus.—C. perdiceps, C. perdiceps [St.-Hilaire]. Fr., c. pied de perdrix. An herbaceous Brazilian species. A decoction of the leaves is used for wounds, snake-bites, etc., as a diuretic, and in syphilis. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. philippinensis. The Echinus philippinensis. CROTONA (Lat.), n. f. Kro't-on'a³. Gr., κρότων. Fr., Crotone. An ancient Greek city, now Crotone, on the coast of Italy, where there was a medical school. [A. 301.]

CROTONAL, n. Kro't-on'a². Ger., C. A bivalent radicle consisting of crotonic aldehyde deprived of its oxygen, C₄H₄=CH₂.CH=CH.CH₂. [B. 9, 158 (a, 24).]—C. dichloride. Ger., C. dichlorür. An oily liquid, C₄H₄Cl₂=CH₂-CH=CH.CHCl₂, boiling at 125° to 127° C. [B. 4, 158 (a, 24).]

CROTONATE, n. Kro't-on'a¹. Fr., e. Ger., krotonsaures Salz. A salt of crotonic acid. [L. 41.]

CROTONE (Lat.), n. Kro't-on'e(a). Gen., croton'es. Fr., κροτωνή. Fr., c. 1. A fungus parasitic on trees. 2. A fungous outgrowth. [A. 322, 325; L. 41.]

CROTONEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kro't-on'e²-e(a²-e²). Fr., crotonées. 1. Of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Euphorbiaceæ, embracing the subtribes Jatropeæ, Eucrotoneæ, Chrozophoreæ, Adrianeæ, Acalyphæ, Gelonieæ, Plunketieæ, and Hippomaneæ. 2. Of Blume, a section of the Euphorbiaceæ, comprising Trigostemon, Ryparosa, Croton, Baliospermum, Erythrocarpus, Codicium, Rottlera, Adisca, Trewia, Cleidione, Chilosia, Conceveibum, Erythrochilus, Janipha, Jatropha, Elæocoeca, Aleurtris, Ostodes, Elatropermum, Spathistemon, Ricinus, Mappa, Pachystemon, Omalanthus, Acalypha, Tragia, Cnesmosa, and Ercecaria. 3. Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Euphorbiaceæ, comprising the Micrantheæ, Argythamineæ, and Crozophoreæ. 4. Of Baillon, a series of the Euphorbiaceæ, comprising Croton, Julocroton, Crotonopsis, and Eremocarpus. [B. 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CROTONIC, adj. Kro't-on'i²ik. Fr., crotonique. Belonging to or resembling the genus Croton; also derived from a plant of that genus. [a, 24.]—C. acid. Fr., acide crotonique. Ger., Crotonsäure. It., acido crotonico. Sp., acido crotonico. A monobasic acid, C₄H₄O₂, of which three isomeric varieties are known: (a) α-c. acid (or simply c. acid), CH₂.CH=CHCO.OH, which occurs in tabular or acicular crystals, melting at 73° C.; (b) β-c. acid (isocrotonic or quarternylic acid), CH₂=CH-CH₂.CO.OH, a liquid boiling at 172° C.; and (c) methacrylic acid, a liquid (see METHACRYLIC ACID). [B. 4, 270 (a, 24).]—C. aldehyde. Fr., aldéhyde crotonique. Ger., Crotonaldehyd. An aldehyde, C₄H₄O=CH₂.CH.CH₂.CHO (or, according to Kekulé, CH₂=CH-CH₂.CHO), obtained from acetic aldehyde by long boiling at 100° C. with a concentrated solution of potassic acetate or with zinc chloride and a little water; it is a colorless, pungent liquid, boiling at 104° to 105° C., somewhat soluble in water. [B. 2, 4 (a, 24).]

CROTONINE, n. Kro't-on'i²n. Lat., crotonina. Fr., e. Ger., Crotonin. A supposed alkaloid obtained by Brandes from croton-seeds, subsequently found to be a magnesian soap with an alkaline reaction. [B. 5 (a, 24).]

CROTONINEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kro't-on'i²n²-i²n²-e(a²-e²). Fr., crotoninées. Of Brogniart, a class of hypogynous Dialypetalæ, comprising the families Antidesmeæ, Forestiereæ, and Euphorbiaceæ. [B. 170 (a, 24).]

CROTONODES (Lat.), adj. Kro't-on'od'ez(as). Gr., κροτωνώδης (from κρότων, the genus Croton, and εἶδος, resemblance). Ger., krotonähnlich. Resembling the genus Croton. [A. 322.]

CROTONOL, n. Kro't-on'ol. Fr., e. According to Schlippe, the vesicating principle of croton-oil, C₈H₁₄O₂; not found by other chemists. [B. 5 (a, 24).]

CROTONELEIC ACID, n. Kro't-on'ol-e'i²ik. Fr., acide crotonoléique. Ger., Crotonölensäure. An acid existing in croton-oil, both free and in combination as a glyceride. According to Kobert, it is the vesicant and purgative principle of the oil. It is freely soluble in alcohol. [“Am. Jour. of Pharm.,” July, 1887, p. 342; B. 5 (a, 24).]

CROTONYLENE, n. Kro't-on'i²l-en. Fr., crotonylène. Ger., Crotonylen. A colorless liquid, C₄H₄=CH₂.CH=C=CH₂, occurring in the gaseous state in coal-gas; it boils at 20° C. [B. 4, 5 (a, 24).]—“Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.,” xxi, p. 213.]—C. dibromide. Ger., Crotonylen dibromür. A liquid, C₄H₄Br₂=CH₂-CH=CBr-CH₂Br, which boils at 150° C. [B. 4 (a, 24).]—C. tetra- bromide. Ger., Crotonylen tetra bromür. A crystalline solid, C₄H₄Br₄=CH₂-CHBr-CBr₂-CH₂Br. [B. 4 (a, 24).]

CROTOPHAGINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kro't-o²-f-a²j(a²g)-(e²)ne-(na²-e²). Fr., crotophagines. Ger., Madenfresser. A subfamily of the Cuculidæ. [L. 221.]

CROTTLE, n. Kro't²l. The Parmelia omphalodes and various other lichens. [B. 19, 121, 275 (a, 24).]—Black c's. The Parmelia saxatilis. [A. 505.]—Hazel c's. The Sticta pulmonacea. [B. 275 (a, 24).]—Light c's. The Leonora pallescens. [A. 505.]—Stone-c's. The Parmelia saxatilis. [A. 505.]

CROUP, n. Krup. Lat., angina laryngea (see trachealis). Fr., c. Ger., C. häufige Bräune. It., c. Sp., crup. 1. A term (said to be of Scottish origin) formerly applied to an acute inflammation of the mucous membrane of the larynx or the larynx and trachea, characterized by the formation of a fibrinous exudation on the surface of the membrane which encroaches on the calibre of the larynx or trachea, and thus gives rise to a hoarse, ringing cough and sonorous, labored, and seriously or even fatally obstructed breathing. It occurs mostly in young children, and is distinguished from spasmodic and oedematous obstruction of the larynx by its gradual onset, by the fact that both inspiration and expiration are impeded, and by the continuance of the obstruction by day as well as by night. Those who use the word in this sense regard the disease as of rare occurrence, as purely a local inflammation, not specific and not infectious. 2. As now more and more accepted, a diseased state having the same symptoms, but constituting a laryngeal or laryngeal and tracheal manifestation of diphtheria; therefore characterized by an exudation into the substance of the mucous membrane instead of on its surface, giving rise to swelling and necrosis of the superjacent portion. 3. A popular term for any acute laryngeal affection accompanied by obstructed breathing or a hoarse, ringing cough, especially catarrh of the larynx, with oedema or spasm, or both.—Absteigender C. (Ger.). See Descending c.—Ascendant c., Ascending c. Ger., aufsteigender C. C. beginning in the bronchi or the trachea, and ascending to the larynx [B. Fraenkel (A. 319)].—Bronchial c. See Croupous BRONCHITIS.—Catarrhal c. See C. (3d def.).—Cerebral c., Cerebral spasmodic c. Of Clarke and other English writers, a form of c. which was supposed to be due to cerebral disorder. CRUENTURESIS (Lat.), n. f. Kru²(kru⁴)e²nt-u³r(ur)-e(a³)si²s. Gen., cruentures eos (-is). From cruentus, bloody, and οἶπος, urine. See HÆMATURIA.

CRUENTUS (Lat.), adj. Kru²(kru⁴)e²nt'u³s(u³s). Gr., αἰμαρώδης. Fr., sanglant. Ger., blutig. It., sanguinante. Sp., cruento, sangriento. 1. Bloody. 2. Used in abstracting blood (see CUCURBITULA cruenta). [A, 325.]

CRUMB, n. Kru²m. Gr., ψῆξ. Lat., mica. Fr., miette. A small fragment, especially of bread. See MICA panis.

CRUMEN (Lat.), n. n. Kru²(kru⁴)me²n(man). Gen., crum'inis. Fr., crumène. 1. See LACRYMAL SINUS. 2. The Lycopus europæus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRUMENA (Lat.), n. f. Kru²(kru⁴)me²(ma)'na³. Gr., βαλάντιον, μασόντιον. Fr., crumène. Ger., Beutel. A sac. [A, 322].—C. nuptialis. The scrotum. [A, 322].—C. urinaria. The urinary bladder. [A, 322.]

CRUMENIFERUS (Lat.), adj. Kru²(kru⁴)-men(man)-i²f'e²r-u³s(u³s). From crumena, a sac, and ferre, to bear. Fr., cruménifère. Having a pouch or a pouch-shaped organ. [L, 41.]

CRUMENOPHTHALMUS (Lat.), adj. Kru²(kru⁴)-me²n(man)-o²f-tha²(tha³)/mu³(mu⁴s). From crumena, a sac, and ὀφθαλμός, the eye. Fr., cruménophtalme. Ger., beutelaugig. Having the eyes surrounded by a sac. [L, 41.]

CRUMMOCK, n. Kru²m'o²k. The Sium sisarum. [A, 505.]

CRUMPLED, adj. Kru²m'p'ld. Folded transversely. [B, 77 (a, 24).]

CRUNION (Lat.), n. n. Kru²n(krun)ⁱ2-o²n. Gr., κρουνίον (from κρουνός, a fountain). Of Aetius, a certain compound that caused abundant diuresis. [Gorræus (A, 325).]

CRUOR (Lat.), n. m. Kru²(kru⁴)o²r. Ger., cruor'is. Blood, especially venous, or extravasated, or coagulated blood. [A, 525; L, 175.]

CRUORIC, adj. Kru²-o²r'i²k. Fr., cruorique. Pertaining to cruor. [A, 301.]

CRUORIEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kru²(kru⁴)-o²r-i(i²)e²-e(a³-e²). Of Agardh, a tribe of the Squamariææ, comprising Actinococcus, Petroclis, Cruoria, and Contarinia. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRUORIN, n. Kru²-o²r-i²n. Fr., cruorine. Ger., C. See HÆMOGLOBIN.

CRUPINEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kru²(kru⁴)-pi²n'e²-e(a³-e²). Fr., crupinées. A tribe of the Cynurocephalææ, comprising Crupina and Serratula. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CRUPPER, n. Kru²p'p'r. See CRUPE.

CRURA (Lat.), n. n., pl. of crurus (q. v.). Kru²(kru⁴)ra³.

CRURÆUS (Lat.), n. m. Kru²(kru⁴)-re²(ra³)e²-u³s(u³s). Fr., muscle crural. Ger., tiefer Unterschenkelstrecker. It., moscolo crurale. Sp., músculo crural. A muscle of the thigh, lying behind the rectus femoris. It arises from the upper two thirds of the anterior surface of the femur and from the anterior intertrochanteric line, and unites with the common tendon of the quadriceps extensor cruris. [L, 31, 142, 332.] Cf. Quadriceps extensor cruris and Vastus medius.

CRURAL, adj. Kru²ra². Lat., cruralis. Fr., Ger., c. It., crurale. Sp., c. Pertaining to the lower limb.

CRURALIS (Lat.), adj. Kru²(kru⁴)-ra²(ra³)li²s. Crural; as a n., see CRURÆUS.

CRURO-GÉNTAL (Fr.), adj. Kru²-ro-zha-ne-ta². Pertaining to the thighs and to the genitals. [L, 41.]

CRURO-INGUINAL, adj. Kru²-ro-i²n-gwi²-n-a². From crurus, the lower limb, and inguen, the groin. Fr., c.-i. Pertaining to the thigh and to the groin. [L, 88.]

CRUS (Lat.), n. n. Kru²s(krus). Gen., cru'ris. Gr., σκέλος (1st def.), κνήμη (2d def.). Fr., jambe. Ger., Schenkel (1st def.), Unterschenkel (2d def.). It., gamba. Sp., pierna. 1. The lower limb. 2. That part of the lower limb that extends from the knee to the ankle. 3. Any leg-like structure. [A, 322; B, 121 (a, 24); L, 343].—Anterior c. of the stapes. The anterior and straighter of the two processes which connect the neck of the stapes with the base. [L, 31, 142, 332].—Crura ad medullam oblongatam. See MIDDLE PEDUNCLES OF THE CEREBELLUM.—Crura ascendentes cerebelli. See SUPERIOR PEDUNCLES OF THE CEREBELLUM.—C. ampullare (canalis semicircularis). Fr., extrémité ampullaire. The enlarged or ampullary extremity of each semicircular canal of the internal ear, in contradistinction to c. simplex. [A, 18].—C. annuli inguinalis anterioris anterioris. Fr., péduncules du cerveau. Ger., Hirnschenkel. Two thick bundles of white substance which extend from the upper border of the pons Varolii, diverging to enter the cerebral hemispheres. Between them is situated the posterior perforated space. In structure each c. is composed of superficial and deep bundles of fibres, separated from each other by a mass of gray matter, called the locus niger. The superficial layers are distinguished as the crusta, and are a prolongation of the anterior pyramids; the deep layers are prolonged from the olivary fasciculi and the lateral and posterior columns of the medulla oblongata. One bundle is known as the tegmentum. [L. 15; K.]—Crura clitoridis. Fr., racines du clitoris. Ger., Kitzlerschenkel. The deep-seated roots of the clitoris, one on each side, attached to the borders of the ascending rami of the ischia and the descending rami of the ossa pubis. They unite anteriorly to form the body of the organ.—Crura corporum cavernosorum penis. See Crura penis.—C. curvilineum. [L. 7.]—Crura ventriculi [Günther]. The cornua of the lateral ventricle of the brain. [I. 3; K.]—Posterior c. of the stapes. Lat., c. curvilineum. The posterior and most curved of the two processes of the stapes which unite the neck with the base. [L. 31, 142, 332.]

CRUSHER, n. Kru'sh'u^{sr}. Gr., πυρρίπ, πυρρίπιον. Lat., instrumentum contusorium. Fr., écraseur. Ger., Zerquetscher. It., sciacciatore. Sp., magullador. See ÉCRASEUR and LITHO-TRITE.

CRUSOCREATININE, n. Kru's-o-kre-a^{2t}/i²ⁿ-en. Fr., crusocreatinine. Ger., Crusokreatin. An alkaloid, C₂H₂N₂O, discovered by Gautier in the animal body. It forms orange-yellow crystals, and has been classed among the leucomaines. [B. 270 (a. 24); E. D. Ferguson, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 4, 1888, p. 113.]

CRUST, n. Kru'st. Lat., crusta. Fr., croûte (O. Fr., croute). Ger., Kruste, Borke. It., crosta. Sp., costra. An outer coating, especially one formed by desiccation; ordinarily, a scab, a dry accumulation on the surface of the skin or a mucous membrane or that of a sore, consisting of the products of desquamation, secretion, or exudation, singly or combined. [G.]—French c. Syphilis. [G. 16.]—Lamellated c. Lat., crusta lamellosa. Fr., croûte lamelleuse. Ger., Schuppengerind. A c. that is formed in layers one above another.—Milk-c., Milky c. See CRUSTA lactea.—C. of the peduncle. Lat., pes pedunculi. Fr., étege inférieure du pédoncule cérébral. Ger., Hirnschenkelfuss. The anterior or ventral portion of the crus cerebri. It is separated from the posterior or dorsal portion by the locus niger, and consists of white nerve-fibres which have been divided into five groups, according to their probable function and destination. [a. 18.]

CRUSTA (Lat.), n. f. Kru'st(kru'st)^a. 1. See CRUST. 2. The external cover or shell in the Mollusca, Crustacea, and certain of the Insecta. 3. Of Nylander, the crustaceous thallus of a lichen. [B. 121 (a. 24); L. 116.]—C. adamantina. The dental enamel. [L.]—C. carnosa [Bartholin]. Fr., croûte charnue. The muscular layer of the stomach and intestines. [L. 116.]—C. cruris cerebri. The c. of the cerebral peduncle. [a. 18.]—C. fibrosa. See CEMENT (2d def.).—C. genu equini. Syn.: hippogonyloepileps. The crust found upon the knees of horses in the disease known as "knee scab," "horse crust." It was recommended by J. S. Mettauer in the treatment of epilepsy and other nervous diseases. [L. 50, 325.]—C. inflammatoria. See BUFFY COAT.—C. lactea. Fr., croûte laiteuse (ou de lait), gourme. Ger., Milchborke, Milchschorf. It., crosta lactea. Sp., costra de leche. Milk-crust; an eczematous or seborrhœal eruption on the face or scalp, or both, in infants, in which incrustation is a predominant feature. [A. 326; G.]—C. lamellosa. See Lamellated crust.—C. ollæ [Rumphius]. Fr., crusta olle. A name for different Indian plants, among others a Gratiola and an Oldenlandia. [B. 121 (a. 24).]—C. osteoides (radicis), C. petrosa [Blake]. See CEMENT (2d def.).—C. phlogistica, C. pleuritica. See BUFFY COAT.—C. pruriginosa. See GUTTA rosea.—C. serpiginosa. Ger., Flechtengrind. A serpigino crust disease of the skin in children, described by Schönlein, the true nature of which is not clearly apparent. According to Schönlein, it often proved fatal. [G. 10.]—C. ulceris. A scab formed on an ulcer. [L. 135.]—C. vermicularis. Fr., croûte vermiculaire. Of Graaf, the mucous coat of the stomach or of the intestines. [L. 325.]—C. villosa. The gastro-intestinal mucous membrane. [Willis (A. 325).]—C. villosa ventriculi. The mucous coat of the stomach. [L. 50, 325.]

CRUSTACEA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kru'st(kru'st)-a(a³)se²(ke²)-a³. Fr., crustacés. Ger., Crustaceen, Krebs, Krustenthier. 1. Of Linnaeus, a class of Aptera. [L. 43.] 2. Of Cuvier and Owen, a class of the Articulata (of Lankester, of the Acerata), animals characterized by "a chitinous or subcalcareous exoskeleton," the division of the body into a variable number of somites—usually 21—some or all of which are provided with a pair of articulated appendages, and, as a rule, a respiratory apparatus adapted to an aquatic life. The sexes are distinct except in the Cirripedia, but the young usually undergo a metamorphosis after leaving the ovum. They are generally divided into the subclasses Entomostraca and Malacostraca. [L. 11, 121, 147, 168.]

CRUSTACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kru'st(kru'st)-a(a³)se²(ke²)-e-(a²-e²). Of Agardh, an order of lichens, divided into the series Leproseæ, Rimatæ, Pyrenulatæ, Calicioideæ, and Scutellatæ. [B. 121 (a. 24).]

CRUSTACEAN, adj. Kru's-ta'se-a²ⁿ. Pertaining to the Crustacea, as a n., an individual of the Crustacea. [L. 121.]—Suctorian c's. Those of the Copepoda which are parasitic. [L. 11.]

CRUSTACEOUS, adj. Kru'st-a'sh'n^s. Lat., crustaceus. Fr., crustacé. Ger., Krustig. It., crustaceo. Sp., crustaceo. 1. Belonging to the Crustacea. 2. Scabby. 3. Firm, indurated, and fragile (said of plants, and of fruits, nuts, teguments, etc.). [B. 19, 121 (a. 24).]

CRUSTAOLLE (Fr.), n. Kru's-ta³-ol. See CRUSTA ollæ.

CRUSTATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kru'st(kru'st)-a(a³)ta³. See CRUSTACEA.

CRUSTATE, CRUSTATED, adj's. Kru'st-at-, at-e²-d. Lat., crustatus. Ger., bekrustet. Provided with a crust. [A. 322.]

CRUSTATION, n. Kru'st-a'shuⁿ. See INCRUSTATION.

CRUSTODÉ (Fr.), adj. Kru's-to-da. Surrounded by a crust. [L. 41.]

CRUSTODEA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kru's(kru's)-to-de²-a³. Fr., crustodés [Bory]. An order of the Microscopica. [L. 180.]

CRUSTODERMATUS (Lat.), adj. Kru'st(kru'st)-to-de²-a³-m-(de²m)-a(a³)tu^s(tu^s). From crusta, a crust, and δέρμα, the skin. Fr., crustoderme. Ger., Krusthäutig. Having a hard, crusty skin; as a n., in the m. pl., Crustodermati, a tribe of the Branchiostegi. [L. 41.]

CRUSTOLLE (Fr.), n. Kru's-tol. The Ruellia tuberosa. [B. 121, 173 (a. 24).]

CRUSTOSE, adj. Kru'st-os. Lat., crustosus. Fr., croûteux. Ger., rindenartig. Crusted; characterized by or attended with the formation of crusts. [G.]

CRUSTULA (Lat.), n. f., dim. of crusta. Krust(krust)u^l(u^l)-a³. Gr., κλακίδιον (1st def.). 1. A small, thin crust. [A, 322.] 2. An old name for an effusion of blood beneath the conjunctiva. [A, 323.]

CRUSTULIFORM, adj. Krust-u^l/i²-fo²rm. Lat., crustuliformis (from crustula [g. v.] and forma, form). Fr., crustuliforme. Cake-shaped. [L, 41.]

CRUSTUMINATUM (Lat.), n. n. Krust(krust)-u^m(um)-i²n-a(a³)tu^m(tu^m). Gr., κρουστομινάτων. Of Aetius, a certain potion prepared from Crustumian pearls; so called from Crustumia, a town of the Sabines. [A, 318, 325.]

CRUTCH, n. Kru^{ch}. Gr., βακρίς. Lat., baculus. Fr., bequille. Ger., Krücke. It., gruccia. Sp., muleta. 1. A staff long enough to reach from the axilla to the ground, having a crescentic cross-piece at the upper end for supporting the weight of the body in walking. 2. Any instrument having a crescentic cross-piece at the end, used for guiding thread, the fillet, etc.—ISCHIADIC c. An instrument resembling a c. (1st def.), taking its bearing in the ischiadic region, and being secured to the lower limb. [A. B. Judson, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," June 25, 1887, p. 721.]—Wheel-c. A go-cart.

CRUX (Lat.), n. f. Kru^x(kru^x). Gen., crucis. Gr., σταυρός. A cross.—C. cervi. Syn.: ossiculum de corde cervi. An old name for a cross-shaped ossicle found in the heart of the deer, formerly thought to be remedial in heart diseases. [A, 325.]

CRUZEIRO (Port.), n. Kru-za-e'ro. An undetermined Brazilian plant. The bark is said to be more bitter than quinine. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRUZETA (Sp.), n. Kru-th²a'ta². At Martinique, the Musænda spinosa. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRY, n. Kri. Gr., βοή. Lat., clamor. Fr., cri. Ger., Schrei. It., grido. Sp., grito. 1. The characteristic sound produced in crying (g. v.). [J.] 2. Any vocal sound other than that of articulate speech or of laughing, coughing, etc., especially a sudden, shriek-like sound.—Epileptic c. Fr., cri épileptique. Ger., epileptischer Schrei. A sharp, sudden cry, "shrill and terrifying to man and beast," uttered by epileptics at the beginning of an attack of epilepsy gravior. It is believed to be involuntary, occurring as it does when the patient is partially or wholly unconscious, and is caused by the spasmodic action of expiratory and laryngeal muscles. [V. Ziemssen's "Cyclop." (Eng. trans.), xiv, p. 226 (a, 18).]—Hydrocephalic c. Fr., cri hydrocéphalique, cri hydrocéphalique, cri méningitique, cri cérébral. Ger., hydrocephalischer Schrei. A single violent cry, resembling that uttered by a person surprised by a great danger [Trousseau]; heard in cerebral diseases of children especially, such as tuberculous meningitis and acute hydrocephalus. It occurs during sleep or coma often at periods of five, ten, or fifteen minutes, sometimes every hour, during several days. As the disease progresses, the cries become less frequent, although they have been observed at the ultimate period of the disease. [a, 18.]

CRYÆSTHESIA (Lat.), n. f. Kri(kru^o)-e^s(a³-e^s)-thez(thas)-i²-a³. From κρύος, cold, and αἴσθησις, sensation. Fr., cryæsthesie. Abnormal sensibility to cold, either spontaneous or produced by contact with cold objects. [Dieulafoy, "Gaz. hebdom. de méd. et de chir.," June 25, 1886, p. 426 (a, 18).]

CRYEROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri(kru^o)-e^r-o'si²s. Gen., cryerosios (-is). From κρυερός, chilling. Fr., cryérose. The sensation felt on touching a cold object, especially a reptile. [L, 41.]

CRYING, n. Kri²n²g. Fr., cri. Ger., Weinen. A peculiar manifestation (chiefly vocal) of some emotion, commonly grief, or of hysteria. It is usually accompanied by the shedding of tears and a modification of the respiratory rhythm, due to a reflex stimulus from the cerebral hemispheres to the respiratory centre. The inspirations are usually deep and long, and the expirations considerably shorter, sometimes intermittent, as in laughing. In crying, there is often produced a characteristic intermittent sound; it is also often accompanied by sobbing. [J.]

CRYMOTES (Lat.), adj. Kri²m(kru^m)-od'ez(as). Gr., κρυμώδης (from κρυμός, frost, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., crymote. Ger., eiskalt. Icy cold; as a n. f. (febris understood), algid fever (Lat., febris algida; Fr., fièvre algide; Ger., Eisfieber). Of Aetius, a form of fever with pulmonary inflammation and coldness of the surface. [A, 322, 325; L, 325.]

CRYMODYNIA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²m(kru^m)-o(o²)-di²n(duⁿ)/i²-a³. From κρυμός, coldness, and δύνη, pain. Fr., crymodynie. Ger., kalter Gliederfluss. Syn.: rheumatismus chronicus frigidus. An old term variously interpreted as having meant rheumatoid pain with coldness of the affected parts, the same resulting from exposure to cold, or any form of chronic (non-febrile) rheumatism. [Baunès (A, 301); A, 322; L, 41, 44, 325.]

CRYMOPHILE (Fr.), adj. Kre-mo-fel. From κρυμός, icy cold, and φιλεῖν, to love. Suited to cold climates (said of birds). [L, 109.]

CRYMOSIS (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²m(kru^m)-os'ez(e^s). From κρυμός, icy cold. Diseases attributed to the action of cold. [L, 41, 325.]

CRYOHYDRATE, n. Kri-o-hid'rat. From κρύος, frost, and ὑδρα, water. A crystalline body formed by the union of a salt (ordinarily anhydrous) with a definite proportion of water of combination, under the influence of a very low temperature. [B, 6.]

CRYOLITE, n. Kri^o-lit. From κρύος, frost, and λίθος, a stone. Fluoride of aluminum and sodium, occurring native in snow-white masses. It fuses easily in the flame of a candle. [Dana (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xvi, p. 209.]

CRYOMÈTRE (Fr.), n. Kre-o-me²r. From κρύος, cold, and μέτρον, a measure. An instrument for ascertaining the intensity of cold. [L, 42.] Cf. THERMOMETER.

CRYOPHORUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri(kru^o)-o²f'o²r-u²s(u⁴s). From κρύος, cold, and φορέω, to bear. Fr., cryophore. Ger., Kryophor. An instrument invented by Wollaston for the purpose of freezing liquids by reason of the heat absorbed in their own evaporation. It consists of two glass bulbs connected by a curved glass tube. The liquid is introduced into one bulb, partially filling it, the air is driven out, and the tube hermetically sealed. The vapor given off by the liquid is condensed in the second bulb by means of a freezing mixture, into which this latter is plunged. The evaporation is so rapid that the freezing-point of the liquid is quickly attained. [a, 27.]

CRYOPSORÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri(kru^o)-o²p-so're(ra³-e²). Of Rabenhorst, an order of lichens consisting of the Verrucariaceæ, Graphidæ, and Limboriæ. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYSOS (Lat.), n. n. Kri(kru^o)o²s. Gen., cryeos (-is). Gr., κρύος. Coldness; hardness, as if from freezing. [A, 325.]

CRYPHEACEÆ (Lat.), CRYPHEÆÆ [Schimper] (Lat.), n^s f. pl. Kri²f(kru^f-e(a²-e²)-a(a²)/se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²), e(a²-e²)-e-e²(a²-e²). Fr., cryphéacées, cryphées. Of Hampe, a family (of Rabenhorst, a subdivision of the Clonocarp of Spruce, a tribe of the Plurocarpi), consisting of the genus Cryphaea. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPHALUM (Lat.), n. n. Kri²f(kru^f/a²(a²))-u³m(u⁴m). From κεφάλαιον, a bonnet. Ger., netzformiger Mogen (3d def.). 1. A network (see RETICULUM). 2. The second (reticular) stomach of the Ruminantia. [A, 322.]

CRYPHIMA (Lat.), CRYPHINA (Lat.), n^s f. Kri²f(kru^f/i²m-a²)-i²n-a². Gr., κρύφιμα, κρύφίνα (from κρύφιος, secret). Of Hippocrates, a certain occult mental sense. [A, 325.]

CRYPHTHELMINTHES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kri²f(kru^f)-the²mi²nth'ez(e²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ἐλμινς, a worm. Fr., c. Ger., Krypthelminthen. The entoparasitic Infusoria. [A, 322; L, 81.]

CRYPHTHORISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri²f(kru^f)-tho²r-i²z(i²z)²mu²s(mu⁴s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ἄρχειν, to establish. Fr., méthode cryphthoristique. Ger., kryphthorische Methode. Syn.: methodus cryphthoristica. Of Ampère, H. Pidoux, and others, the system of inferring unseen natural processes from actual observation of analogous visible processes. [A, 322.]

CRYPsANTHA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²ps(kru^{ps})-a²n(a²n)/tha². The Hedwigia ciliata. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRYPsORCHIS (Lat.), n. m. Kri²ps(kru^{ps})-o²rk(o²rch²)²is. See CRYPsORCHIS, and for other words in Cryps, not here given, see the corresponding words in Crypt.

CRYPT, n. Kri²pt. Gr., κρύπτω (from κρυπτός, hidden). Lat., crypta. Fr., crypte. Ger., Krypte. It., critta. Sp., cripta. A small cavity, either entirely closed or opening on a free surface.—C's of Lieberkühn. Lat., cryptæ mucosæ (see Lieberkühnianæ). Fr., glandes de Lieberkühn. Ger., Lieberkühnsche Drüsen (oder Krypten). It., glandole di Lieberkühn. Sp., cripta de Lieberkühn. The minute, caecal glandular tubes of the mucosa of the small and large intestine. They are lined with columnar cells like those covering the villi and general surface of the intestine; they extend to the muscularis mucosæ and open singly, or two or three together, into the lumen of the intestine. [J, 30, 35].—C's of the tongue. Ger., Balgdrüsen der Zungenwurzel. Small depressions in the mucous membrane of the tongue whose walls are studded with spherical projections each of which contains a vascular loop and is provided with lymph follicles. [L, 332].—Multilocular c's. 1. Of Sharpey, simple glands with pouched or loculated walls. 2. The lobules of an acinous or racemose gland. [J, 30, 129, 155].—Sebaceous c's. See SEBACEOUS GLANDS.—Synovial c's. See SEBACEOUS GLANDS.—Synovial c's. Small follicle-like extensions of the synovial membranes which occasionally perforate the capsule of the joints, and sometimes become shut off from the main sac. [L, 34.]

CRYPTA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²p(kru^p)/ta². 1. See CRYPT. 2. One of the small, round excrescences (glomeruli) terminating the minute branches of the arteries in the cortical portion of the kidney. 3. One of the round receptacles (sunken cysts) with which the leaves of many plants are studded. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. gonorrhœæ. Of J. H. Salisbury, a cryptogam considered by him to be the essential element in the virus of gonorrhœa.—Cryptæ Iridis. Small crypts on the anterior surface of the iris, near the pupillary margin. [L, 332].—Cryptæ Littrii. See PREPUTIAL GLANDS.—Cryptæ minimæ (see mucosæ). See CRYPTS OF LIEBERKÜHN.—Cryptæ odoriferae (see preputiales). See PREPUTIAL GLANDS.—Cryptæ sebaceæ. See SEBACEOUS GLANDS.—C. syphilitica. 1. A crater-shaped depression formed by the development of a syphilitic follicular ulcer on a mucous surface, as of the tonsils. [a, 25.] 2. Of Salisbury, a cryptogam regarded by him as the cause of syphilis. [B, 30.]—Cryptæ tysonianæ. See PREPUTIAL GLANDS.

CRYPTANDROUS, adj. Kri²pt-a²nd'ru²s. Lat., cryptandrus (from κρυπτός, to conceal, and ἀνήρ, a male). Fr., cryptandre. Having no distinct male organs of generation (said of animals and plants). [L, 41.]

CRYPTANGEIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru^{pt})-a²n(a²n²)-ji²(ge²-e²)-e²-e(a²-e²). From κρυπτός, concealed, and αγγείον, a vessel. Of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Cyperaceæ, comprising Lagenocarpus, Cryptangium, Fintelmannia, Cephalocarpus, Pteroscleria, Calyptrocarya, Becquerelia, and Hoppia. [B, 42 (a, 24).]

CRYPTANTHÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru^{pt})-a²n(a²n)/the²(tha²-e²). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ἄθος, a flower. Of Wachen-dorff, see CRYPTOGAMIA.

Musci. 2. Of Bernhardi, a class comprising the orders Periodelatae, Filices, and Musci. 3. Of Willdenow, a class comprising the orders Stachyopterides, Filices, Hydropterides, Musci, Hepaticae, Algae, Fungi, and Gasteromyci. 4. Of Mass, a class including the divisions Salviniae and Equisetaceae. [B, 170 (a, 24).]—C. cellulares. See under CRYPTOGAM.—C. vascularis (seu vascularia). See Vascular CRYPTOGAMS.

CRYPTOGAME (Fr.), n. Krep-to-ga²m. See CRYPTOGAM.—C's aphylles. See THALLOPHYTES.

CRYPTOGAMIA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-ga²m(ga³m)/i².a². Fr., cryptogamie. 1. See CRYPTOGAMY. 2. See CRYPTOGAM. 3. The 24th class of Linnaeus, comprising the orders Filices, Musci, Algae, and Fungi. 4. Of Wiggers, a class comprising the Filices, Epiphytosperrae, Rhizosperrae, Julosperrae, Metaxillares, Musci, Coleofissae, Sphaerosperrae, Aspidiferae, Asperrae, Appendix, and Fungoideae. 5. Of Schreber, a class comprising the orders of Linnaeus, and in addition Miscellanea and Hepaticae. 6. Of Richard, a class comprising the Filices, Hepaticae, Equisetaceae, and Lycopodaceae. [B, 170, 270 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOGAMIAN, CRYPTOGRAMIC, adj's. Kri²pt-o-ga²m/i².a²n, -i²k. See CRYPTOGRAMOUS.

CRYPTOGAMOLGY, n. Kri²pt-o-ga²m-o²l'o-jii. From κρυπτός, concealed, γάμος, marriage, and λόγος, understanding. Fr., cryptogamologie. The botany of the cryptogams. [a, 24.]

CRYPTOGAMOUS, adj. Kri²pt-o-g²a²m-u²s. Lat., cryptogamus, cryptogamicus. Fr., cryptogamique. Ger., kryptogamisch. Of the nature of a cryptogam or belonging to the Cryptogamia.

CRYPTOGAMY, n. Kri²pt-o-g²a²m-i². Lat., cryptogamia (from κρυπτός, concealed, and γάμος, marriage). Fr., cryptogamie. 1. The state of being cryptogamous. 2. Concealed fructification. [B, 116 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOGASTER (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-ga²st-(ga³st)/u²r(ar). From κρυπτός, concealed, and γαστήρ, the belly. Fr., cryptogastre. Ger., verborgenbauchig. Having the abdomen concealed; as a n., in the m. pl., Cryptogasteres, a section of the Muscidae. [L, 41.]

CRYPTOGENUS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²j(o²g²e²n-u²s-(u²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and γεννᾶν, to beget. Fr., cryptogène. Parasitic from the outset within the body of another living being; as an., in the n. pl., Cryptogena, a class of the Acephala. [L, 41.]

CRYPTOGENOUS, adj. Kri²pt-o²j²i²n-u²s. From κρυπτός, concealed, and γεννᾶν, a woman. Fr., cryptogène. In botany, having the female organs concealed. [A, 385.]

CRYPTIMPETIGINES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)/o(o²)-i²m-pe²t-i²j(eg²)/i²n-ez(as). From κρυπτός, concealed, and impe-tigo (q. v.). Of Schönlein, a group of skin diseases in which only a pericaricium is present, without any "fruit-products," such as papules, vesicles, etc., or with only slight indications of them; equivalent to the maculae and squamae of Plenck and Willan and the acarpae of Fuchs. [G, 10.]

CRYPTOLEPIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²l'e²p-i²s. Gen., cryptolep'idōs (-is). From κρυπτός, concealed, and λεπίς, a scale. Fr., cryptolépide. Of R. Brown, a genus of the Asclepiadeae, tribe Periploceae. [B, 42 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOLITH, n. Kri²pt/o-li²th. From κρυπτός, concealed, and λίθος, a stone. Fr., cryptolithé. A calculus lodged in a crypt. [A, 301.]

CRYPTOLOGY, n. Kri²pt-o²l'o-jii. Lat., cryptologia (from κρυπτός, concealed, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., cryptologie. Ger., Lehre vom Verborgenen. The science, doctrine, or study of occult things. [A, 322.] Cf. Cryptanthosulus.

CRYPTOMONADINA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-mo²n-a²d(a²d)-i(e)/na². From κρυπτός, concealed, and μονάς, a unit. Fr., cryptomonadins. A family of the Isomastigoda or of the Infusoria. [L, 121.]

CRYPTOMYCETES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-mi-(mu²)-set(kat)/ez(e²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and μύκης, a fungus. Of Bonorden, an order of Fungi, including the Æcidiaecae, Nemasporei, and Ascosporei. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOMYCETERES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-mi²k(mu²k)-te(ta)/rez(re²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and μυκτήρ, the snout. A section of apodal fishes. [L, 281.]

CRYPTONEMATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-ne²m-(nam)/a²t(a²t)-a². From κρυπτός, concealed, and νήμα, a thread. Small cellular threads produced by cryptostomata. [B, 19 (a, 24).]

CRYPTONEMEA (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-nem-(nam)-e²-e(a²-e²). 1. Of Agardh, a tribe of the Floridaceae, comprising the subtribes Gloiocladaceae, Themostomaceae, Spongiocarpeae, Gastrocarpeae, and Coccoscarpeae. 2. Of Decaisne, an order of the Chlorisporaceae comprising Crouania, Dudresnaya, and Gloiocladia. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPTONEMIAEAE (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-ne²m(nam)-i²-a²/se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²). 1. Of Harvey, an order of Gonyolosperrae, consisting of the suborders Gigartineae and Cryptoneae. 2. Of Agardh, a family of Algae, divided into the tribes Nemastomeae, Gastrocarpeae, Grateloupieae, and Cryptone-miae. [B, 19, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPTONEMIAEAE (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-ne²m-(nam)-i²(e²)-e(a²-e²). Of Agardh, a tribe of the Cryptone-miaeae. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRYPTONEURUS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-nu²r'u²s-(u²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and νεῦρον, a nerve. Fr., cryptoneure. Having no visible nerves; as a n., in the f., Cryptoneura, of Agardh, a division of the genus Deslesseria; as a n., in the n. pl., Cryptoneura. See ACRITA. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 41.]

CRYPTONÉVRAXIES [Piorry] (Fr.), n. pl. Krep-to-na-vra²x-e. Affections of the central nervous system due to obscure causes. [L, 82.]

CRYPTOPENTAMERUS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-pe²nt-a²-me(ma)/ru²s(ru²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, πέντε, five, and μυρός, the thigh. Ger., undeutlichfünfgliedrig. Having five joints one of which is obscure; as a n., in the n. pl., Cryptopentamera, a tribe or division of the Coleoptera. [L, 81, 121, 353.]

CRYPTOPHAGIDÆ [Kirby] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-fa²j(fa²g²)/i²d-e(a²-e²). Fr., cryptophagiens. A family of the Curculionidæ or of the Coleoptera. [L, 196, 267.]

CRYPTOPHANIC ACID, n. Kri²pt-o-fa²n/i²k. Fr., acide cryptophanique. Ger., Kryptophansäure. An acid, H₂C₆H₇NO₅, to which Thudichum ascribes the acidity of the urine. Some authors consider it a mixture of different bodies. [B, 8, 270 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOPHTHALMIA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²f-tha²l-(tha²l)/mi²-a². From κρυπτός, concealed, and ὀφθαλμός. A congenital defect in which the globe of the eye is hidden by the skin, which stretches across the orbit without any aperture. In some cases so called the eyes and the orbits have been absent. [F.]

CRYPTOPHTHALMUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²f-tha²l-(tha²l)/mu²s(mu²s). An individual affected with cryptophthalmia.

CRYPTOPHYCEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-fi²s-(fi²k)/e²-e(a²-e²). From κρυπτός, concealed, and φύκος, sea-weed. The protophytes; in Thuret's classification of Algae, those individuals in which distinct reproductive organs are not apparent, including the Palmetellæ and the Nostochineæ. [B, 62.]

CRYPTOPHYTES, n. pl. Kri²pt-o-fits. Lat., cryptophyta (from κρυπτός, concealed, and φύτον, a plant). Fr., c. Plants having no true roots. [A, 301.] Of Link, a class of Cryptogamæ, embracing Algae, Fungi, and Lichenes (corresponding to the Thallophyta of Endlicher). [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOPIANINE, CRYPTOPINE, n's. Kri²pt-o-pi²a²n-en, kri²pt/o-pen. Lat., cryptopina, cryptopia (from κρυπτός, concealed, and πιον, opium). Fr., c. Ger., Cryptopin. An alkaloid, C₂₁H₂₃NO₄, existing in small amount in opium, first obtained from weak alcoholic washings of crude morphine. It is colorless and odorless. Its salts are bitter, but cause a subsequent cessation of coolness in the mouth. [B, 5, 18, 270 (a, 24).]—C. hydrochlorate, C. hydrochloride. A compound, C₂₁H₂₃NO₄HCl + 6H₂O, of c. with hydrochloric acid, forming delicate prismatic crystals. If dissolved in about 30 parts of hot water and set aside, it forms a jelly much like pure gelatin. [B, 5, 270 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOPODA [Cuvier] (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²p/-o²d-a². From κρυπτός, concealed, and πους, the foot. Fr., cryptopodes. Ger., Schildkrabbe. 1. A tribe of the Crustacea capable of concealing the last 4 pairs of feet beneath the shell. 2. Of Meyer, a family of ophiurians. 3. Of Latreille, a family of the Chelonia. [L, 90, 180.]

CRYPTOPORUS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²p/o²r-u²s(u²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and πῶρος, a pore. Fr., cryptopore. Ger., verdecktlochig. Having obscure or concealed pores. [L, 42.]

CRYPTOPROCTIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-pro²k(prok)/ti²d-e(a²-e²). From κρυπτός, concealed, and πρωκτός, the anus. A family of the Carnivora. [L, 277.]

CRYPTOPROCTINA (Lat.), CRYPTOPROCTINÆ (Lat.), n's n. pl. and f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-pro²k(prok)-ti(e)/na², -ne(a²-e²). A subfamily of the Viverridæ. [L, 121.]

CRYPTOPYIC, adj. Kri²pt-o-pi²i²k. Lat., cryptopyicus (from κρυπτός, hidden, and πιον, pus). Fr., cryptopyique. Due to hidden suppuration (said of a state of disease caused or kept up by an occult abscess). [L, 41, 43.]

CRYPTORCHID, n. Kri²pt-o²rk/i²d. See CRYPTORCHIS.

CRYPTORCHIDISM, n. Kri²pt-o²rk/i²d-i²zm. Lat., cryptorchidismus, cryptorchidia. Fr., cryptorchidie. Ger., Kryptorchidismus. The state of being a cryptorchis.

CRYPTORCHIS (Lat.), n. m. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²rk(o²rch²)/i²s. Gen., cryptorch'eos (-is). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ὄρχις, the testicle. Fr., cryptorchide. A male whose testicles are concealed (retained within the abdomen). The condition is normal in some of the lower animals. [A, 301, 322.]

CRYPTORCHISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²rk(o²rch²)-i²z(i²s)/mu²s(mu²s). See CRYPTORCHIDISM.

CRYPTORISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²r-i²z(i²s)/mu²s(mu²s). See CRYPTORISMUS.

CRYPTORRHINUS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²r-ri(re)/nu²s-(nu²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ῥίς, the nose. Fr., cryptorrhiniens. Ger., verdecktnasig. Having the nostrils hardly perceptible; as a n., in the m. pl., Cryptorrhini, a family of the Natatores. [L, 180.]

CRYPTORRHYNCHIDES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o²r-i²z(i²s)(ru²ch²)/i²d-ez(e²s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ῥύγχος, the snout. Fr., cryptorrhynques, c. a family (or subfamily) of the Curculionidæ. [L, 41, 262.]

CRYPTOS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)/o²s. Gr., κρυπτός. Occult, latent, concealed. [A, 325.]

CRYPTOSIPHONIEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-si²f-o²n(on)/i²-i²z(i²s)/e²-e(a²-e²). From κρυπτός, concealed, and σίφων, a tube. Of Agardh, a family of the Dumontiaceae. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOSPERMEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-spu²r(m)(spe²rm)/e²-e(a²-e²). From κρυπτός, concealed, and σπέρμα, a seed. Fr., cryptospermées. Of Kützing, an order of Gymnospermeae, comprising the families Lemnaceae, Chaetophoraceae, Batrachospermeae, Liagoreae, and Mesoglyceae. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOSPOREÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o²)-spor-(spo²r)/e²-e(a²-e²). Of Trevisan, a group of Algae. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOSTEGIA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-stej(ste²g)/i²-a². From κρυπτός, concealed, and στέγη, a chamber. A genus of asclepiadaceous shrubs. The species yield a milky juice, which, when exposed to the sun, is changed into caoutchouc. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. grandiflora [R. Brown]. The India-rubber vine; a species common on the coast of India, yielding a caoutchouc called Falay rubber. [B, 77, 173 (a, 24).]—C. madagascariensis. The Madagascar caoutchouc-plant. [B, 77, 275 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOSTEGIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-stej(ste²g)/e²-e(a³-e²). Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Periploceæ, consisting of the genus Cryptostegia. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOSTEMMÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-ste²m²me²e(a³-e²). Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Ursiniæ, comprising Arctotheca, Cryptostemma, and Microstephium. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOSTEMIDES [Westwood] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-ste²m²m²i²d-ez(e²s). A family of the Phalangidea. [L, 121.]

CRYPTOSTEMONES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-ste²m²(stam)/o²n-ez(e²s). Of Gleditsch, a division of plants comprising the classes Filicinæ, Muscoseæ, Algaceæ, and Fungosæ. [B, 270 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOSTEMONOUS, adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o-ste²m²/o²n-u²s. From κρυπτός, concealed, and στήμων, a filament. Fr., cryptostémone. Having the stamens concealed. [Gleditsch and Mönch (A, 301).]

CRYPTOSTOMATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-sto²m²/a³ ta³. From κρυπτός, concealed, and στόμα, the mouth. Fr., cryptostomes. Little circular nuclei found on the surface of some algae. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOTETRAMERA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-te²tr-²ra²m(ra³m)/e²r-a³. From κρυπτός, concealed, τέσσαρες, four, and μέρος, a part. See TETRAMERA.

CRYPTOTHECI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-thes(thak)/i²(e). From κρυπτός, concealed, and θήκη, a receptacle. A group of mosses, including Spiridines. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CRYPTOTRIMERA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-tri²m(trem)/e²r-a³. From κρυπτός, concealed, τρεις, three, and μέρος, a part. See TRIMERA.

CRYPTOUS, adj. Kri²pt/u²s. Gr., κρυπτός. Lat., cryptos, cryptus. Fr., caché. Ger., verborgen. Concealed. [A, 322.]

CRYPTOZOUS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-o(o³)-zo²u²s(u⁴s). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ζωή, life. Fr., cryptozoé. Apparently dead, possessed of latent life. [A, 322.]

CRYPTOZYGOUS, adj. Kri²pt-o-zig²/u²s. From κρυπτός, concealed, and ζυγόν, an arch. Fr., cryptozygus. Ger., cryptozygig. Having the dental arches not sufficiently prominent to be visible when the skull, resting on a horizontal plane, is viewed from above. [A, 301.]

CRYPTURIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-u²(u²)/ri²d-e(a²-e²). From κρυπτός, concealed, and ουρά, the tail. Fr., crypturides. A family of the Gallinacea. [L.]

CRYPTURINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-u²(u²)-ri(re)/ne(na³-e²). A subfamily of the Tetraonidæ. [L.]

CRYPTURUS (Lat.), adj. Kri²pt(kru⁶pt)-u²(u²)/ru²s(ru⁴s). Fr., crypturé. Ger., verdecktschwanzig. Having an inconspicuous tail; as a n., in the m. pl., Crypturi, of Sclater, a family of the Carinatae. [L, 121.]

CRYSORCHIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri²s(kru⁶s)-o²rk(o²rch²/i²s(es). Gr., κρυσόρχεις from κρύπτειν, to conceal, and ὄρχις, the testicle. Retraction of one or both of the testicles. [A, 325; L, 94.]

CRYSTAL, n. Kri²s/ta². Lat., crystallum. Gr., κρύσταλλος. Fr., crystal. Ger., Krystal. It., crystallo. Sp., crystal. A substance occurring in a definite geometrical form which is essentially constant for that substance, and which the latter always assumes when the conditions for its production are present. [B.]—Acicular c. A needle-shaped c. [a, 24.]—Arborescent c's. C's arranged in slender, spreading branches, somewhat plant-like, as in the frost on windows, and in the delineations on rocks, called dendrites. [a, 24.]—Asthma c's. See under ASTHMA.—Blood c's. Blood-red, transparent, doubly refractive, microscopic c's, usually rhomboidal, consisting of oxyhæmoglobin. [a, 27.]—Complex c. A c. bounded by dissimilar faces. [B, 3 (a, 21).]—C²feuchtigkeit (Ger.). The vitreous body of the eye. [L, 80.]—C²hautchen, C²leinhaut (Ger.). The capsule of the crystalline lens. [L, 80.]—C²linse (Ger.). See CRYSTALLINE LENS.—C² mineral. Fr., c. minérale. Potassium nitrate (see SAL prunelle). [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C's of tartar. Lat., crystalli tartari. Fr., crystaux de tartre. C's of potassium bitartrate. [B, 5, 270 (a, 24).]—C's of Venus. Lat., crystalli Veneris. Fr., crystaux de Venus. C's of copper sulphate. [B, 5, 180 (a, 24).]—Ear-c. See OROLITH.—Hæmin c's. See TEICHMANN'S c's.—Lead-chamber c's. C's of the composition HSO₃ (NO₂), formed in the lead chambers in which sulphuric acid is manufactured. [B, 5.]—Simple c. A c. the faces of which are similar and occupy similar relative positions. [a, 27.]—Teichmann's c's. Narrow rhombic plates of a nut-brown color, which consist of hæmatin hydrochloride. [L, 351.]

CRYSTALBAN, n. Kri²st-a²/ba²n. According to Payer, a resin that is a constituent of gutta-percha. [B, 270 (a, 24).]

CRYSTALHYDRATION, n. Kri²st-a²/hid-ra²/shu²n. The absorption of a definite number of molecules of water by salts on crystallizing. [a, 27.]

CRYSTALLI (Lat.), n. m., pl. of crystallus. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li(le). 1. Crystals (see CRYSTALLUS). 2. An old name for the pocks of varicella. [G.]

CRYSTALLIFEROUS, CRYSTALLIGEROUS, adj's. Kri²st-a²-i²f(e²r-u²s, -i²j(e²r-u²s). From crystallum, a crystal, and ferre, or gerere, to bear. Fr., crystallifère. Containing crystals. [L, 121.]

CRYSTALLINA (Lat.), n. f. of adj. crystallinus(tunica understood). Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li²n-a². The arachnoid membrane. [A, 322.]

CRYSTALLINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li²n-e(a³-e²). See CRYSTALLI (2d def.).

CRYSTALLINE, n. Kri²st/a²-en. 1. Of Unverdorben (1826), the substance now called aniline. 2. The Mesembryanthemum crystallinum. [B, 77, 121 (a, 24).] 3. The c. lens.

CRYSTALLINE, adj. Kri²st/a²-i²n. Gr., κρυσταλλοειδής. Lat., crystallinus. Fr., crystallin. Ger., krystallisch, krystallinisch. It., cristallino. Sp., crystalino. Resembling or belonging to a crystal; occurring under the form of crystals. [B, 81.]

CRYSTALLINOCAPSULITIS (Lat.), n. f. From crystallinum, the crystalline lens, capsula, a capsule, and -itis.* Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li²n-o(o³)-ka²(ka³p)-su²(su¹)-i(e)/ti²s. Gen., crystallinocapsulitidos (-is). For deriv., see CRYSTALLINE, CAPSULE, and -itis.* See PHAKITIS.—C. anterior. Inflammation of the anterior capsule of the crystalline lens. It is extremely doubtful if this ever occurs except as a consequence of perforating wound of the eyeball and capsule, with or without accompanying iritis. [F.]

CRYSTALLINOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li²n-o(o³)-se(ka²)/le(la); in Eng., Kri²st-a²-li²n'-o-sel. From κρυστάλλινος, the crystalline lens, and κύημα, a tumor. Hernia of the crystalline lens. [L, 290.]

CRYSTALLION (Lat.), n. n. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li²-o²n. Gr., κρυστάλλιον. Of Dioscorides, the Plantago psyllium. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CRYSTALLISATIO (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li²-z(li²s)-a(a³)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., crystallisatio'nis. See CRYSTALLIZATION.

CRYSTALLISCH (Ger.), adj. Kri²st-a²/li²sh. See CRYSTALLINE (adj.).

CRYSTALLISIRUNG (Ger.), n. Kri²st-a²-lez-er²/un²g. See CRYSTALLIZATION.

CRYSTALLITIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/li²(le)/ti²s. Gen., crystallitidos (-is). From κρυστάλλος, the crystalline lens (see also *-itis). Inflammation of the crystalline lens, or more properly of its capsule. [F.] See PHAKITIS.

CRYSTALLIZATION, n. Kri²st-a²-i²-z-a²/shu²n. Lat., crystallisatio. Fr., crystallisation, krystallisation. Ger., Krystallisierung, Krystallbildung, Krystallisation, Krystallisierung. It., crystalizzazione. Sp., crystalización. 1. The act of assuming the crystalline form. 2. The body thus formed. 3. The process of rendering crystalline. [B, 116 (a, 24).]—Alternate c. The successive c. of several different salts in solution. [a, 27.]

CRYSTALLOCATAPIESIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/lo²(lo²)-ka²(ka³)-a³-pi²(pi²)/e²s-i²s. Gen., crystallocatapiesis (-pi²/e²s). From κρυστάλλος, the crystalline lens, and καταπίεσις, a keeping down. See CRYSTALLOCATATHESIS.

CRYSTALLOCATARACTA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/lo²(lo²)-ka²(ka³)-a³-ra²(ra³)/ka². From κρυστάλλος, the crystalline lens, and καταράκτης, a cataract. Fr., crystalloctaracte. A lenticular cataract. [A, 322.]

CRYSTALLOCATATHESIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/lo²(lo²)-ka²(ka³)-a³-th(a³)/e²s-i²s. Gen., crystallocatathesis (-ath/esis). From κρυστάλλος, the crystalline lens, and κάθεσις, a laying down. Fr., crystalloctathèse. Reclination (couching) of the crystalline lens. [A, 322.]

CRYSTALLOCLAST, n. Kri²st-a²/o-klā²st. From κρυστάλλος, a crystal, and κλάω, to break. Fr., briscristal. One who studies crystals by means of cleavage. [L, 121.]

CRYSTALLODES (Lat.), adj. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/lod(ez)/as. Gr., κρυσταλλώδης. See CRYSTALLOID.

CRYSTALLOGENOUS, adj. Kri²st-a²-o²j(e²n-u²s). From κρυστάλλος, a crystal, and γεννάω, to produce. Producing or capable of producing crystals. [a, 24.]

CRYSTALLOGENY, n. Kri²st-a²-o²j(e²n-i²). Lat., crystallogenesi, crystallogenia (from κρυστάλλος, a crystal, and γεννάω, to engender). Fr., crystallogenie. Ger., Krystallbildung (1st def.). 1. See CRYSTALLIZATION (1st def.). 2. See CRYSTALLOGRAPHY.

CRYSTALLOGRAPHY, n. Kri²st-a²-o²g²/ra²f-i². Lat., crystallographia (from κρυστάλλος, a crystal, and γράφειν, to write). Fr., crystallographie. Ger., Krystallographie. The science of the formation and forms of crystals.

CRYSTALLOID, adj. Kri²st/a²-oid. Gr., κρυσταλλοειδής (from κρυστάλλος, a crystal, and εἶδος, resemblance). Lat., crystalloides, crystalloides, crystalloïdes. Fr., crystalloïde. Ger., krystallähnlich. It., crystalloide. Sp., crystalloïde. Resembling a crystal in structure or appearance; as a n., of Graham, one of a class of substances distinguished by the rapidity with which their solutions diffuse through a neighboring liquid. They are usually delivered from the mineral kingdom, and are of simple chemical constitution, but there are also crystal-like protein bodies of this class found in the cells of various plants (sometimes associated with inorganic matter). They are so called because their typical representatives are crystallizable bodies or are of a crystalline form. [B, 77, 121, 229, 291 (a, 24).] See COLLOIDS.

CRYSTALLOIDITIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru⁶st)-a²(a³)/lo²(lo²)-i²d(ed)-i(e)/ti²s. Gen., crystalloiditidos (-is). See CRYSTALLITIS.

CRYSTALLOMAGNETIC, adj. Kri²st/a²-o-ma²g²-ne²t/i²g. Relating to or connected with crystallo-magnetism. [L, 121.]

CRYSTALLO-MAGNETISM, n. Kri²st-a²-o-ma²g²-ne²t-i²zm. The property by virtue of which certain crystals, when suspended horizontally, point to the north, the line of direction being that of the optical axis of the crystal. [L, 121.]

CRYSTALLOMETRY, n. Kri²st-a¹-o²m²e²t-ri². Lat., crystallogometria (from κρυσταλλος, a crystal, and μέτρον, a measure). Fr., crystallogométrie. Ger., Krystallogometrie, Krystallmesskunst. The science of the measurement of the angles of crystals. [A, 322.]

CRYSTALLONOMIA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru²st)-a¹(a¹)-lo-(lo²)-nom(no²m)¹/i²-a³. From κρυσταλλος, a crystal, and νόμος, a law. See CRYSTALLOGRAPHY.

CRYSTALLOPARATOPIA (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru²st)-a¹(a¹)-lo-(lo²)-pa²ti(pa²r)-a³-top(o²p)/i²-a³. From κρυσταλλος, the crystalline lens, πάρα, aside, and τόπος, a place. Displacement of the crystalline lens. [A, 322.]

CRYSTALLOPHOROUS, adj. Kri²st-a¹-o²f²o²r-u³s. From κρυσταλλος, a crystal, and φορεῖν, to bear. See CRYSTALLIFEROUS.

CRYSTALLOTECHNY, n. Kri²st-a¹/o-te²k-ni². From κρυσταλλος, a crystal, and τεχνή, art. The art or process of preparing crystals. [a, 27.]

CRYSTALLUM (Lat.), n. n. Kri²st(kru²st)-a¹(a¹)/lu³m(lu³m). See CRYSTAL.—C. Diane. Nitrate of silver prepared by precipitation; Sala's magisterium argenti. [B, 70.]—C. minérale. See CRYSTAL mineral.

CRYSTALLURIDROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru²st)-a¹(a¹)-u²-(u)-ri²d-ros¹/i²s. Gen., crystaluridros¹ eos¹ (-is). From κρυσταλλος, a crystal, ὀφρον, urine, and ἰδρῶς, sweat. Fr., crystaluridrose. Ger., Harnschwätzen mit Krystalbildung auf der Haut. A condition in which urinary elements are excreted in the sweat, with the formation of crystals on the skin. [A, 322.]

CRYSTALLUS (Lat.), n. m. Kri²st(kru²st)-a¹(a¹)/lu³s(lu³s). Gr., κρυσταλλος. See CRYSTAL.—Crystalli argenti. Crystals of silver nitrate. [L, 105.]—Crystalli cordis. See CARDIOCRYSTALLI.—Crystalli cupri. Crystals of copper sulphate. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Crystalli Diane, Crystalli Iunæ. Crystals of silver nitrate. [B, L, 135.]—C. mineralis. See CRYSTAL mineral.—Crystalli sodæ. Crystals of sodium carbonate. [L, 135.]—Crystalli tartari. Crystals of potassium bitartrate. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—Crystalli Veneris. Crystals of copper sulphate. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CRYSTALS, n. Kri²st²a¹z. The fruit of Prunus insititia. [A, 505.]

CRYSTALWORTS, n. pl. Kri²st²a¹-wu³rts. The Ricciaceæ. [B, 19 (a, 24).]

CRYSTANE (Lat.), n. f. Kri²st(kru²st)/a²n(a³n)-e(a). Gen., crystanes. Of Dioscorides, the Chelidonium majus. [B, 88, 121 (a, 24).]

CSICORGOFA [Malay], n. The Gratiola officinalis. [B, 88; L, 105.]

CTEDON (Lat.), n. f. Te(kta)/do²n(don). Gen., ctedonos (-is). Gr., κτεδών. A fibre; in the pl., ctedones, the fibrous layers of wood. [A, 325, 387; L, 94.]

CTEIS (Lat.), n. m. Tis(kte²/i²s). Gen., cten¹os (-is). Gr., κρείς. 1. A comb. 2. A row of incisor teeth. 3. The pubic hair. 4. The ulnar border of the hand. [A, 325, 387.]

CTENES (Lat.), n., pl. of cteis (q. v.). Ten(kte²n)/ez(e²s). The incisors. [L.]

CTENIDIOBRANCHIA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-i²d-i²o-(o²)-bra²n²k(bra²n²ch²/i²-a³). From κτενίδιον, a little comb, and βράγχια, gills. A suborder of the Palliatia.

CTENIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Te²n(kte²n)-i²d-i²-u³m(u³m). Gr., κτενίδιον (dim. of cteis, a comb). A gill-comb; in the Mollusca, a process of the body wall upon each side, having a number of comb-like processes, usually respiratory in function. [L, 121.]

CTENIUM (Lat.), n. n. Te²n(kte²n)-i²/u³m(u³m). From κτενίον, a small comb, from the appearance of the spikes. A genus of gramineous plants. [B, 19, 245.]—C. americanum, C. aromaticum. Toothache-grass, a pungent-tasting species growing in the southern United States. [B, 19, 34.]

CTENOBANCHIA (Lat.), CTENOBANCHIATA [Gray] (Lat.), n's n. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-bra²n²k(bra²n²ch²/i²-a. -bra²n²k(bra²n²ch²)-i²-a(a³)/ta³. Fr., cténobranches. An order of the Gasteropoda, having pectinated branchiæ. [L, 180.]

CTENOCERA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o²s(o²k)/e²r-a³. From κρείς, a comb, and κέρας, a horn. Fr., cténoécères. See ALCVONARIA.

CTENOCYST (Lat.), n. Te²n'o-si²st. From κρείς, a comb, and κύστις, a bladder. Fr., cténocyste. A spherical vesicle lined with ciliated epithelium and filled with a clear fluid containing mineral particles, which is situated within the apical pole of the Ctenophora, and is believed to possess auditory functions. [L, 147.]

CTENODACTYLINA (Lat.), CTENODACTYLINÆ (Lat.), n's n. pl. and f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-da²k(da²k)-ti²(tu²)-i(e)/na²-ne(na²-e²). From κρείς, a comb, and δάκτυλος, a digit. A subfamily of the Octodontidae. [L, 121.]

CTENODODIPTERIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o²-o(o²)-di²p-te²r²/i²d-e(a³-e²). From κρείς, a comb, εἶδος, resemblance, and διπτερος, double-winged. A family of the Ganoidei. [L, 207.]

CTENODONT, adj. Te²n'o-do²nt. From κρείς, a comb, and ὀδών, a tooth. Fr., cténodonte. Having comb-like teeth. [L, 41, 42.]

CTENODONTEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-do²nt²-e²-e(a³-e²). Fr., cténodontées. Of Montagne, a tribe of the Floridææ, consisting of the genus Ctenodus. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CTENODONTIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-do²nt²-i²d-e(a³-e²). Of Lindley, a tribe of the Cryptonemææ, consisting of the genus Ctenodus. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CTENOID, adj. Te²n'o²id. From κρείς, a comb, and εἶδος, resemblance. Comb-like, pectinate (said of the free border of scales and of teeth). [L, 14.]

CTENOIDEI [Agassiz] (Lat.), n. m. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-i²d-(ed)/e²-i(e). An order of fishes having ctenoid scales. [L, 147.]

CTENOIDES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-i(e)/dez(de²s). Fr., cténoïdes. See PLEURONECTIDÆ.

CTENOLABRIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-la²b-(la²b)/ri²d-e(a³-e²). A family of the Pharyngognathi. [L, 14.]

CTENOPHOR, n. Te²n'o-for. An individual of the Ctenophora. [L.]

CTENOPHORA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o²f²o²r-a³. From κρείς, a comb, and φορεῖν, to bear. Fr., cténohores. Ger., Kamquaden. 1. Of Lankester, a class of the Nematophora. 2. Of Hæckel, a class of the Cnidaria. 3. Of von Siebold and Stannius, an order of the Aculephæ. [L, 121, 228, 231.]

CTENOPHORAL, adj. Te²n-o²f²o²r-a³. Pertaining to or resembling a ctenophore, belonging to the Ctenophora. [L, 147.]

CTENOPHORAN, n. Te²n-o²f²o²r-a³n. An individual of the Ctenophora. [B, 100.]

CTENOPHORE, n. Te²n'o-for. In the Ctenophora, one of the longitudinal bands of transverse rows of cilia, which serve as locomotive organs. [L, 11, 147.]

CTENOPHORIC, adj. Te²n-o-f²o²r²i²k. Pertaining to or resembling the Ctenophora or a ctenophore. [L.]

CTENOPHORIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o(o²)-fo²r²i²d-e(a³-e²). See CTENOPHORA.

CTÉNOPTÈRE (Fr.), adj. Kta-no²p-tar. From κρείς, a comb, and πτερόν, a wing. Having the wings divided like a comb. [L, 41.]

CTENOSTOMA (Lat.), CTENOSTOMATA (Lat.), n's n. and pl. Te²n(kte²n)-o²st²o²m-a³, -o²st²-o²m²/a²(a³e)-a³. From κρείς, a comb, and στόμα, an aperture. A suborder of marine Gymnolemta. [L, 147.]

CTENUCHIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Te²n(kte²n)-u²k(uch²/i²d-e-a³-e²). A family of the Lepidoptera heterocera. [L, 248.]

CUA (Malay), n. The Amomum zedoaria. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUAJA-LECHE (Sp.), n. Kwa³/ha³-la'cha. The Galium verum. [B.]

CUAJILOTE [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. Kwa³-he-lo'ta. The Parmentaria edulis. [A, 447.]

CUAJIOTE [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. Kwa³-he-o-ta. The Rhus perniciosa. [A, 447.]

CUAMARA, n. In Guiana, the Coumarouna odorata. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUAPINOLE (Mex.), n. The resin of Hymenæa courbaril. [A, 447.]

CUARUBATINGA, n. In Brazil, the genus Centrolobium. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUASIA [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. Kwa³/se-a³. See QUASSIA.—C. amarga de Surinam [Sp. Ph.]. See QUASSIA amara.—C. de Jamaica [Mex. Ph.]. Quassia derived from the Picræna (Simaruba) excelsa. [A, 447.]

CUASTECOMATE (Sp.), n. Kwa³-sa-ta-ko-ma³/ta. See CUAU-TECOMATE.

CUATE (Sp.), n. Kwa³/ta. The Varennea polystachya. [A, 447.]

CUAUCHALALÁ [Mex. Ph.], CUAUCHALALATE, n's. The Rajania subsamarata. [A, 447.]

CUAUTECOMATE [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. Kwa³-u-ta-ko-ma³/ta. The Crescentaria alata. [A, 447.]

CUBAB CHINIE (Hind.), n. The Piper cubeba. [B, 88.]

CUBALSANT, n. The Actinia equina. [B, 88.]

CUBARIS (Lat.), n. f. Ku²(ku²)/ba²r(ba²r)-i²s. Gr., κυβαρίς. An old name for a kind of insect. [A, 325.]

CUBATIO (Lat.), n. f. Ku²(ku²)-ba(ba³)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., cubation¹is. From cubare, to lie down. Fr., couchée. Ger., Liegen. 1. See DECURTUS. 2. A generic term for anteversion and retroversion of the uterus. [A, 59.]

CUBEB, n. Ku²/be²b. Ar., kab'abah. Lat., cubeba [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], cubebæ [Ger. Ph.]. Fr., cubèbe [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Kubebé. It., cubèbe. Sp., cubeba. The unripe fruit of Cubeba officinalis [Miquel] (Piper cubeba [Linnaeus]), consisting, as found in commerce, of the dried globose fruits of the plant, of about the size of a small pea, of a grayish-brown color, and covered with an ashy-gray bloom. They are strongly wrinkled by the shrinking of the fleshy pericarp, and are furnished with a short stalk. The shell is hard and smooth, and contains a single seed with a whitish, oily albumen. C's have a strong taste with some bitterness and acidity, and a highly aromatic odor, and chemically consist chiefly of a volatile oil, cubebin, and cubebic acid (q. v.). Gum, a fatty oil, and malates of magnesium and calcium are also said to have been found in them. C's are generally stimulant, and are much employed in gonorrhœa. They have been given also in leucorrhœa, cystorrhœa, the urethritis of women and female children, abscess of the prostate gland, hæmorrhoids, chronic bronchial inflammation and diphtheritic affections of the throat. [B, 5, 18 (a, 24).]—African c's. 1. Ashantee pepper, Guinea pepper, African black pepper; the fruit of Piper Afzeli. They are smaller than the official c's, and have a taste more like that of black pepper (which they resemble in containing piperine and not cubebin). 2. The fruit of an African plant of the Xanthoxylacææ; said to be simply aromatic and stimulant, without any of the virtues of the genuine c's. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Camphor of c's, C-camphor. A hydrate, $C_{15}H_{24} + H_2O = C_{15}H_{26}O$, of that fraction of the oil of c's which boils at about 263° C. It crystallizes in inodorous octahedra, which melt at about 60° C. CUMARAMARA, n. In Guiana, the Lucuma mammosa. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUMARIC ACID, n. $Ku^2ma^2r^2ik$. See COUMARIC ACID.

CUMARIN, n. $Ku^2ma^2r^2in$. See COUMARIN.

CUMARU, n. In Brazil, the Coumarouna odorata. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUMARY, n. In Brazil, the Aydenndron cujumary. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUMARYL, n. $Ku^2ma^2r^2il$. See COUMARYL.

CUMATE, n. Ku^2m^2at . A salt of cumic acid. [B.]

CUMBANG-SORE, n. In Java, the Sida hirta. [B, 88.]

CUMBERFIELD, n. $Ku^2m^2bu^2r^2feld$. The Polygonum aviculare. [A, 505.]

CUMBOO (Tamil), n. The Penicillaria spicata. [A, 22.]

CUMBULAM [Rheede], n. The Benincasa cerifera. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUMBULU (Malay), n. The Gmelina arborea. [B, 172 (a, 24).]

CUMDUMBA (Tarasco), n. The Sambucus mexicana. [A, 447.]

CUMENAMIC ACID, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2a^2m^2ik$. See CUMINAMIC ACID.

CUMENE, n. Ku^2men . Fr., cumène. Ger., Cumol. It., c. A liquid, $C_6H_5CH_2CH_3 = C_9H_{12}$, boiling at about 152° C., existing ready formed in Roman cumin oil, and obtained artificially by the distillation of cumic acid. It is isomeric with propylbenzene, ethylmethylbenzene, mesitylene, and pseudocumene. [B, 4, 158, 270 (a, 24).]—C sulphonic acid. See SULPHOCUMINIC ACID.

CUMENOL, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2ol$. See CUMIC ALDEHYDE.

CUMENURIC ACID, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2u^2ri^2k$. A homologue of hippuric acid, $C_{12}H_{14}NO_2$, produced by the action of the silver compound of glycolcol on chloride of cumyl. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMENYL, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2il$. The hypothetical univalent radicle, $C_6H_4(C_3H_7)$, of cumene, or isopropylphenyl. [a, 24.]—C cyanide. See CUMONITRIL.—C sulphurous acid. A product, $C_9H_{12}SO_2$, formed by the action of sulphuric acid on cumene. [B, 2 (a, 24).]—C sulphurate. A substance, $C_9H_{12}S_2$, formed by the action of sulphuric acid and zinc on cumenesulphuric chloride. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMENYLACRYLIC ACID, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2il^2a^2k^2ri^2ik$. Fr., acide cuményl-acrylique. An acid, $C_{12}H_{14}O_2 = C_6H_4(C_3H_7)C_2H_3CO.OH$, homologous with cinnamic acid. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

CUMENYLAMINE, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2il^2a^2m^2en$. See CUMDENE.

CUMENYLANGELIC ACID, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2il^2a^2n^2je^2l^2ik$. Fr., acide cuményl-angélique. A homologue of cinnamic acid, $C_{14}H_{18}O_2 = C_6H_4(C_3H_7)C_4H_6CO.OH$. [B, 4, 158 (a, 24).]

CUMENYLCHROTONIC ACID, n. $Ku^2me^2n^2il^2kro^2to^2n^2ik$. Fr., acide cuményl-crotonique. A compound, $C_{13}H_{16}O_2 = C_6H_4(C_3H_7)C_3H_4CO.OH$, homologous with cinnamic acid. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

CUMÈTE (Fr.), n. Ku^2ma^2t . The genus Eugenia. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 41.]

CUMFIRIE, n. $Ku^2m^2fr^2ie$. The Bellis perennis. [A, 505.]

CUMFREY, n. $Ku^2m^2fr^2e$. See COMFREY.

CUMIC, adj. Ku^2mi^2k . Containing or resembling cumin. [B.]—C acid. Fr., acide cuminique. Ger., Cuminsäure. It., acido cuminico. Sp., ácido cumínico. Cumyl oxide, cuminic acid; a paraproxybenzoic acid, $C_6H_4(C_3H_7)CO.OH = C_{10}H_{12}O_2$, obtained by the oxidation of cuminol. [B, 2, 4, 14, 158, 270 (a, 24).]—C alcohol. See CUMIN ALCOHOL.—C aldehyde. Fr., aldéhyde cuminique. Ger., Cuminaldehyd. Cuminol, cuminic aldehyde, hydride of cumyl; an aromatic aldehyde, $C_6H_4(C_3H_7)CHO = C_{10}H_{12}O$, derived from the seeds of Cuminum cyminum. It also exists in the oil of Cicuta virosa. It is a colorless liquid, of agreeable odor and acid taste, boiling at 220° C. [B, 4, 158, 270 (a, 24).]

CUMICYL, n. $Ku^2mi^2si^2l$. Fr., cumicycle. See CUMYL.

CUMIDIC ACID, n. $Ku^2mi^2d^2ik$. Fr., acide cumidique. Ger., Cumidinsäure. A compound, $C_6H_2(CH_3)_2(CO.OH)_2 = C_{10}H_{10}O_4$, obtained by the oxidation of durenne. [B, 4, 158 (a, 24).]

CUMIDINE, n. $Ku^2mi^2d^2en$. Fr., cumidin. Syn.: amidocumene, cumenylamine. An amidogen substitution product of cumene, $C_6H_4(NH_2)C_3H_7 = C_9H_{12}N$. [B, 2, 158 (a, 24).]

CUMIDINSÄURE (Ger.), n. $Ku^2med^2en^2zoir^2e^2$. See CUMIDIC ACID.

CUMIN, n. Ku^2mi^2n . Lat., cuminum, cyminum. Fr., c. Ger., Mutterkümmel, Kreuzkümmel. It., cumino. Sp., comino. 1. The genus Cuminum. 2. See C. fruit. 3. The Cuminum cyminum. [A, 510 (a, 24); B, 19, 121, 275 (a, 24).]—Armenian c. Fr., c. arménien. The Carum carvi. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—Black c. Lat., cuminum nigrum. Fr., c. noir. Ger., Schwarzkümmel. The seeds of Nigella sativa. [B, 19, 275 (a, 24).]—C alcohol. Fr., alcool cuminique. Ger., Cumilalkohol. An aromatic alcohol, $C_{10}H_{12}O = (CH_2)_2CHC_6H_4CH_2OH$, derived from cuminic aldehyde. It is a colorless, oily liquid, boiling at 243° C. [B, 4, 270 (a, 24).]—C aldehyde. See CUMIC ALDEHYDE.—C cornu (Fr.). The Hypococum proboscens. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C des prunes (Fr.). See Carum carvi.—C fruit. Lat., fructus (seu semen) cumini (seu cymini). Fr., fruit de c. [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Mutterkümmel, Kreuzkümmel, römischer Kümmel. The fruit (seeds) of Cuminum cyminum; they occur in commerce in an elliptical form, flat on one side and convex and rough on the other, of a strong aromatic, not very agreeable, taste and odor. Chemically they consist of a fatty oil (cuminic aldehyde), resin, gum, mucilage, albumin, and a large percentage of malates. Medicinally they resemble the other aromatic fruits of umbelliferous plants, but are more stimulating. They are chiefly used in veterinary medicine. [B, 5, 18 (a, 24).]—C noir. See Black c.—C officinal (Fr.). See Cuminum cyminum.—C oil. Ger., Cuminöl. An essential oil, composed chiefly of cymene and cuminol, found in the fruits of c., of Cicuta virosa, and of Thymus vulgaris. [B, 2, 8 (a, 24).]—C plaster. See Emplastrum cumini.—C saumén (Ger.). See C. fruit.—C saure (Ger.). See Cumic acid.—C sauvage (Fr.). See Wild c.—C seed. See C. fruit.—Emplâtre de c. (Fr.). CUMINURIC ACID. $Ku^2mi^2n^2u^2ri^2k$. See CUMENURIC ACID.

CUMINYL, n. $Ku^2mi^2n^2il$. Fr., cuminyle. A monatomic radicle, $C_{10}H_{11}$, of cuminol, which may be regarded as its hydrate. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMIN, CUMMINE, n's. Ku^2mi^2n . See CUMIN.

CUMOGLYCOL, n. $Ku^2mo^2gli^2k^2ol$. Hydrate of cumylene, $C_{10}H_{14}O_2$; a hypothetical body. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMOL (Ger.), n. Kum^2ol . See CUMENE.

CUMONITRIL, n. $Ku^2mo^2ni^2tri^2l$. Cumenyl cyanide, a transparent, colorless oil, $C_{10}H_{11}N$, of strong, agreeable odor and burning taste, formed from thiocumamide by boiling with potash or soda. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMONITRILAMINE, n. $Ku^2mo^2ni^2tri^2a^2m^2en$. An oily, aromatic liquid, $C_{10}H_{12}N_2$, formed by adding cumonitril to nitric and sulphuric acids. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMOPHENAMIDE, n. $Ku^2mo^2fe^2n^2a^2m^2id$ (id). Fr., cumophénamide. A product, $C_{10}H_{17}NO$, of the action of chloride of cumyl on phenylamine. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMOPHENOL, n. $Ku^2m-o-fe^2n^c2l$. Fr., cuminat de phényle. Phenyl cuminate, $C_{10}H_{10}O_2 = C_{10}H_{11}OOC_6H_5$. [B, 244 (a, 27).]

CUMOSALICYLAMIDE, n. $Ku^2-mo-sa^2l-i^2-si^2l'a^2m-i^2d(id)$. A product, $C_{17}H_{17}NO_3$, of the action of chloride of cumyl on salicylamide. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMOXYL, n. $Ku^2m-o^2x^i2l$. See CUMYL.

CUMULATE, n. $Ku^2m^2u^2at$. The final product resulting from cumulative resolution. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMULATIVE, adj. Fr., cumulatif. Ger., cumulativ. 1. Operating somewhat suddenly and excessively after repeated small doses have been taken, as if by having accumulated in the system before producing any effect (said of drugs). [A, 335.] 2. See C. RESOLUTION.

CUMULUS (Lat.), n. m. $Ku^2m(ku^4m)^2(u^4)^2-lu^2s(lu^4s)$. A heap or pile; an agglomeration.—C. proligerus. See DISCUS proligerus.

CUMUNA [Pliny] (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku^4)^2-mu^2(mu)^2na^2$. A variety of cabbage. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUMURUNGA (Beng.), n. The Averrhoa carambola. [B, 172.]

CUMYL, n. Ku^2mi^2l . Fr., cumyle. Ger., C. An acid organic radicle, $C_{10}H_{11}O$, of cumin-oil homologous with benzoyl; an oily liquid, heavier than water, rendered odorous by heat, boiling at $300^\circ C$, inflammable, and dissolving sparingly in cold, but readily in hot alcohol. [B, 2, 270 (a, 24).]—C. alcohol. See CUMIN alcohol.—C. hydride. See CUMIC aldehyde.—C. oxide. See CUMIC acid.—C. sulfure (Ger.). See CUMYLIC acid.

CUMYLENE, n. Ku^2mi^2l-en . Fr., cumylène. Ger., Cumylen. A hypothetical diatomic radicle $C_{10}H_{12}$, homologous with benzylene. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CUMYLIC, adj. $Ku^2mi^2l^i2k$. Of or pertaining to cumyl. [B.]—C. acid. Fr., Cumylsäure. An acid, $C_{10}H_{13}O_2$, isomeric with cuminic acid, forming acicular crystals. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—C. alcohol. See CUMIN alcohol.

CUMYS, n. Ku^2mi^2s . See KUMYSS.

CUNA (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku)^2na^2$. Gr., κούνα. An infant's bed. [A, 325.]

CUNANE, n. In India, a certain fruit used for the relief of headache. [L, 94, 105.]

LICES vomitorii (under CALIX).—Favus c. 1. A depression in a favus crust circumscribing a hair. 2. A depression in the scalp or skin left after a favus crust has been removed. [a, 27.]—Germ c. See GASTRULA.—Glaucomatous c. The so-called "pressure excavation," which refers to the condition of the optic disc in glaucoma. The cupping extends quite across the optic disc to the edge, the lamina cribrosa being stretched and pushed backward. The edge is always abrupt and precipitous, and often overhangs the c. which has undermined the margin of the disc. This cupping is done by a sudden bending of the vessels just within the border of the disc, where they look darker because they are foreshortened. If the c. is deep they may disappear beneath its edge, and not reappear until they reach the bottom of the c. [F.]—Montgomery's c's. Small dilatations, filled with a milky fluid, of the canals of the decidua, into which the uterine gland-tubes penetrate. [A, 80.]—Ocular c., Optic c. Ger., secundäre Augenblase, Augenblasengrube. Of Foster and Balfour, the secondary optic vesicle of the embryo. [Kölliker (H).]—Optic c's. In comparative anatomy, c-shaped or bell-shaped depressions lined with epithelial cells, usually also provided with pigment cells and connected with a nervous filament; they subserve vision. [L, 121.]—Wet c. A c. for drawing the blood to the surface and then removing it through incisions made by a scarificator. [B.]

CUPAHY, n. In Brazil, the Copaifera guianensis. [B, 121 (a, 24.)]

CUPAIBA, n. Ku-pa³-e'ba³. See COPAIBA.

CUPANDA (Tarasco), n. The Persea gratissima. [A, 447.]

CUPANIA (Lat.), n. f. Ku²(ku)-pa(pa³)ni²-a³. Fr., cupani. The lobolly-wood of Jamaica; of Linnaeus, a genus of trees or shrubs of the Sapindaceae. [B, 19, 42, 173, 275 (a, 24).]—C. americana [Linnaeus]. Fr., cupani d'Amérique, bois de Jamone, châtignier d'Amérique (ou de Saint Domingue). The chestnut of the Antilles, a species found in the West Indies and South America. The leaves and fruit are astringent, and are used in catarrh. On the Orinoco River a drink is prepared from the kernels of the fruit. The seeds are edible and, roasted, are employed in hæmoptysis and dysentery. [B, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—C. edulis. See BLIGHIA sapida.—C. glabra [Swartz]. See C. americana.—C. petala [Labillardière]. Fr., cupani sans pétale. An Australian species yielding a fine white gum, used as a substitute for gum arabic. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. sapida. See BLIGHIA sapida.—C. tomentosa [Swartz]. See C. americana.

CUPANIEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²(ku)-pa²n(pa³n)-i(i)²/e²-e(a³-e²). Fr., cupaniées. A group of Sapindaceae, having as a type the genus Cupania. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CUPAROSA (Lat.), n. f. Ku²(ku)/pa²r(pa³r)-o'sa³. From cuprum, copper, and rosa, a rose. Fr., couperose (1st and 2d def's). 1. Copperas. 2. Gutta rosacea. [G.]

CUPAYBA, n. Ku-pa³-e'ba³. See COPAIBA.

CUPA-VEELA, n. In Malabar, the Vinca pusilla. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUFEL, n. Ku²/pe²l. Lat., cupella, copella, capulla. Fr., couppelle. Ger., Cupelliren (2d def.), Kupelle, Probrütigel (1st def.). It., cupella. Sp., copela. A flat crucible or disc usually made of bone-ash, occasionally of clay, in which the process of cupellation is carried on. [L.]

with or without scarification. 2. The formation of a cup-shaped depression.—C-glass. See under GLASS.—Dry c. C. (1st def.) without scarification.—Wet c. C. (1st def.) with scarification.

CUPRALUM, n. Ku²p-ra²l¹u³m. Fr., cupralum. 1. Hydrated sulphate of aluminium and copper. 2. See CUPRUM aluminatum.

CUPRAMMONIC, adj. Ku²p-ra²m-o²n¹i²k. Containing copper and ammonium.—C. chloride. Copper ammoniochloride.—C. sulphate. Copper ammoniosulphate. [B.]

CUPRAMMONIUM (Lat.), n. n. Ku²p(kup)-ra²m¹(ra³m)-mon¹-i²-u³m(u⁴m). See COPPER ammoniosulphate.

CUPRATE, n. Ku²p^urat. Fr., c. A double salt containing a cupric compound. [A, 385; L, 41 (a, 14).]

CUPRATUS (Lat.), adj. Ku²p(kup)-ra²(ra³)/tu³s(tu⁴s). Containing or made with copper. [B.]

CUPREA, n. Ku²/pre²-a³. See C-BARK.

CUPREINE, n. Ku²/pre²-en. Homoquinine; so called because obtained from cuprea-bark. [Ann. di chim. med.-farm. e di farmacol., July, 1885, p. 54 (B); B, 5, 8 (a, 24).]

CUPREOL, n. Ku²/pre²-o²l. A substance, C₂₀H₃₄O, discovered by Hesse in Cinchona calisaya, giving the chemical reactions of cholesterol. [Ann. di chim. med.-farm. e di farmacol., Aug., 1886, p. 112 (B).]

CUPREOUS, adj. Ku²/pre²-u³s. Fr., cuvireux. Ger., kupferhaltig, kupferig. Containing, derived from, or related to copper. [B.]

CUPRESCENT, adj. Ku²/pre²-re²s(e²nt. Coppery in appearance. [Proc. of the Zool. Soc., 1882, p. 255 (L).]

CUPRESS, n. Ku²/pre²s. See CYPRESS.—C. powder. The pulverized rhizome of Arisœma triphyllum. [B, 270 (a, 24).]

CUPRESSACEÆ [Walters] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²(ku)-pre²s-sa(sa³)/se²(ke²)-e(a³-e²). An order of the Monochlamydeæ, comprising the genera of Endlicher's Cupressineæ. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CUPRESSEÆ (Lat.), n. f. Ku²(ku)-pre²s-se²-e(a³-e²). Of Lindley, a suborder of the Pinaceæ, comprising Juniperus, Thuja, Cryptomeria, Thujopsis, Cupressus, Retinospora, Callitris, Carolinia, Taxodium, and Chamaepeuce. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CUPRESSIDEE (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²(ku)-pre²s-si²d⁴/e²-e(a³-e²). Of Gray, a family of the Monochlamydeæ, consisting of the genus Juniperus. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CUPRESSINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²(ku)-pre²s-si(se)/ne(na³-e²). 1. Of Richard, a section (of Agardh, a tribe) of the Conifereæ, comprising Juniperus, Thuja, Cupressus, and Taxodium. 2. Of Reichenbach, a division of the Strobilaceæ, comprising Juniperus, Thuja, Callitris, Cupressus, and Schubertia. [B, 170 (a, 24).] 3. Of Eichler, a subtribe of the Cupressineæ, comprising Cupressus and Chamaecyparis. [B, 245.]

CUPRESSINÆE (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²(ku)-pre²s-si²n¹/e²-e(a³-e²). Fr., cupressinées. 1. Of A. Richard, a division of the Conifereæ, comprising Juniperus, Thuja, Callitris, Cupressus, and Taxodium, to which Reichenbach added Carolinia and Cryptomeria. 2. Of Koch, an order of the Conifereæ, consisting of Juniperus and Cupressus. 3. Of Endlicher, a division comprising Juniperus, Thuja, Cryptomeria, Thujopsis, and Chamaepeuce. 4. Of Wood, a suborder of the Conifereæ, comprising Thuja, Cupressus, Taxodium, and Juniperus. 5. Of Bentham and Hooker and of Eichler, a tribe of the Conifereæ, including Callitris, Actinostrobus, Fitzroya, Libocedrus, Thuja, Cupressus, and Juniperus. [B, 34, 42, 121, 170, 291 (a, 24).] By Eichler it is divided into the subtribes Thujopsidineæ, Actinostrobinæ, Cupressinæ, and Juniperinæ. [B, 245.]

CUPRESSINUS (Lat.), adj. Ku²(ku)-pre²s-si²n¹-u³s(u⁴s). Pertaining to, made from, or containing cypress. [A, 318.]

CUPRESSUS (Lat.), n. f. Ku²(ku)-pre²s-su³s(su⁴s). Gr., κνράρισος. Fr., cyprès. Ger., Cypresse. It., cipresso. Sp., ciprés. Of Linnaeus, the typical genus of the Cupressineæ. [B, 19, 42, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. arbor vite. Fr., arbre de vie. The Thuja occidentalis. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. disticha. The Taxodium disticha. [B, 180, 245, 275 (a, 24).]—C. fastigiata. A variety of C. sempervirens. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. glauca, C. lusitanica. Fr., cyprès pendant, cèdre de bousaco, cèdre de Goa, cyprès de Goa. A species indigenous to the East Indies, cultivated in Portugal and elsewhere. The cones are stomachic and vulnerary. The powder is said to be a tonic and febrifuge. The branches and twigs are used to preserve cloths, woollens, etc., from worms. [B, 19, 173 (a, 24).]—C. pyramidalis, C. sempervirens [Linnaeus]. Fr., cyprès, cyprès pyramidal. Ger., gemeine (oder immergrüne) Cypresse. The common cypress, a species indigenous to Persia and the Levant. The wood was formerly used as an astringent, sudorific, and diuretic, and the cones and the oil obtained from them were employed in fevers, hæmorrhage, and catarrh. [B, 19, 178, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—C. thuja. The Thuja orientalis. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. thujoides, C. thuyoides. Ger., weisse Ceder. Of Linnaeus, the Chamaecyparis spheroides. [B, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—Fructus cupressi. The cones of C. sempervirens. [A, 319.]—Herba cupressi. The herb of Santolina chamaecyparissus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Lignum cupressi. The wood of C. sempervirens. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Nuces cupressi. See FRUCTUS cupressi.—Oleum cupressi. The oil obtained from the nuts of C. sempervirens. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Trochisci cupressi [Sp. Ph., 1798]. Fr., trochisques de cyprès. Cypress troches; made by boiling 128 parts of quince-juice, 12 of verjuice, 24 of cypress-cones, 16 of myrtle-leaves, and 8 of red roses, straining, and adding 12 of gum arabic, 10 of lignum santali citrini, 8 each of sumac and red roses, 12 of allspice, and a sufficient quantity of rose-water, and forming into troches. [B, 119 (a, 21).]—Vinum cupressi [Sp. Ph., 1798]. Fr., vin de cyprès. Cypress wine; made by macerating for 24 hours with a gentle heat 3 parts of green cypress-cones, 1 part each of pomegranate-bark, Rosmarinus officinalis, myrtle, red roses, and pomegranate-flowers, and 24 parts of red wine and expressing. [B, 119 (a, 21).]

CUPREUS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^2(ku)/pre^2-u^2s(u^4s)$. See CUPREOUS.
CUPREUX (Fr.), adj. Ku^2-pru^2 . See CUPROUS.
CUPRIC, adj. Ku^2-pri^2k . Lat., cupricus. Fr., cuprique, cuprique. Containing copper as a bivalent element. [B.]
CUPRICOLLIS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^2(ku)-pri^2-ko^2l'i^2s$. From cuprum, copper, and collum, the neck. Fr., cupricolle. Having a copper-colored neck. [L., 41.]
CUPRICUM (Lat.), n. n. $Ku^2(ku)-pri^2k-u^2m(u^4m)$. An allotropic form of copper imagined to exist in the cupric compounds. [B.]—C. aceticum. Copper acetate. [B., 270 (a, 24).]—C. sulphuricum, C. vitriolatum. Copper sulphate. [L., 77 (a, 21).]
CUPRIFEROUS, adj. $Ku^2-pri^2f'e^2r-u^2s$. Lat., cupriferus (from cuprum, copper, and ferre, to bear). Fr., cuprifière. Ger., kupferhaltig, kupferführend. Containing or yielding copper. [L., 56.]
CUPRINE, n. Ku^2-pren . A weak base, $C_{11}H_7NO_3$, derived from cotarine. It has a coppery lustre, is insoluble in ether, but dissolves in water and in alcohol, forming a green solution. [B., 270 (a, 24).]
CUPRITE, n. Ku^2-prit . Red oxide of copper. [Dana (a, 24).]
CUPRO-AMMONIACAL, adj. $Ku^2-pr'o-a^2m-on-i^2a^2k-a^2l$. Lat., cupro-ammoniacus. Fr., cupro-ammonique. Containing or pertaining to a compound of copper and ammonium. [B.]
CUPROCYANIDE, n. $Ku^2-pro-si^2a^2n-i^2d(id)$. A salt of hydrocuprocyanic acid, a double cyanide of copper and some other metal. [B.]
CUPROCYANOGEN, n. $Ku^2-pro-si-a^2n'o-je^2n$. Copper cyanide. [a, 27.]
CUPROCYANWASSERSTOFFSÄURE (Ger.), n. $Ku^2-pro-tse-a^2n-va^2s-se^2r-sto^2f-zoir-e^2$. Hydrocuprocyanic acid. [B.]
CUPROIDE (Fr.), adj. $Ku^2-pro-ed$. From cuprum, copper, and éidos, resemblance. Resembling copper; as a n., in the pl., c's, a family of metals, comprising copper, lead, cadmium, and bismuth. [L., 41.]
CUPROINE, n. $Ku^2-pro-en$. A derivative of cotarine, $C_{20}H_{16}N_2O_3$. [B., 270 (a, 24).]
CUPRO-POTASSIC, adj. $Ku^2-pro-po^2t-a^2s-i^2k$. Fr., cupropotassique. Containing or pertaining to a compound of copper and potassium. [B.]
CUPROSO-POTASSIC, adj. $Ku^2-pro^2-so-po^2t-a^2s-i^2k$. Lat., cuproso-potassicus. Fr., cuproso-potassique, cuproso-potassique. Containing or pertaining to a compound of a cuprous salt and potassium. [L., 109.]
CUPROSULPHATE, n. $Ku^2-pro-su^2lf'at$. A double sulphate containing copper. [B.]
CUPROSUM (Lat.), n. n. $Ku^2(ku)-pro^2su^2m(su^4m)$. 1. An allotropic modification of copper imagined to exist in the cuprous salts. [B.] 2. See Squama æris (under Æs).
CUPROTARTRATE, n. $Ku^2-pro-ta^2r'trat$. Fr., cupro-tartrate. A compound containing copper and tartaric acid. [A., 385.]
CUPROXIDE, n. $Ku^2-p-ro^2x-i^2d(id)$. Native cuprous oxide, Cu_2O . [B., 244 (a, 27).]
CUPROXYDUM (Lat.), n. $Ku^2p(ku^2p)-ro^2x-i^2d-u^2m(u^4m)$. Cuprous oxide. [B.]
CUPROUS, adj. Ku^2-pru^2s . Lat., cuprosus. Fr., cupreux. Ger., kupfrig. Containing copper as a univalent element. Thus, c. chloride is Cu_2Cl_2 . In such compounds, however, as in the corresponding mercurous compounds, copper is probably in reality a bivalent radicle, the graphic formula of c. chloride being $Cl-Cu-Cu-Cl$, where the molecule $-Cu-Cu-$, although made up of two bivalent atoms, has itself only a combining power of two. [B.]
CUPRUM [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.] (Lat.), n. n. $Ku^2(ku)/pru^2m(pru^4m)$. From æs cuprium, Cyprian brass. See COPPER.—Acetas cupri [Belg. Ph.]. See COPPER acetate.—Acetas cupri crudus. A substance obtained by dissolving copper carbonate in ammonia-water and evaporating the solution. [B., 10.]—C. chloratum, Cupros chloride. [B.]—C. chloratum ammoniacale. Fr., chlorure cuproso-ammonique. A compound of ammonia and cuprous chloride. Dry ammonia gas forms three compounds with cuprous chloride, variable with the temperature. A black amorphous substance results on heating slightly $Cu_2Cl_2NH_3 = (NH_3)(Cu_2Cl_2)$, which, dissolved in hydrochloric acid, gives $Cu_2Cl_2 \cdot NH_3HCl = NH_4Cl \cdot Cu_2Cl_2$. Treated in the cold by ammonia, there results $Cu_2Cl_2 \cdot 2NH_3 = (NH_3)_2(Cu_2Cl_2) = cuproso diammonium chloride$, which, acted upon by hydrochloric acid, produces $Cu_2Cl_2 \cdot 2NH_3 \cdot 2HCl = 2NH_4Cl \cdot Cu_2Cl_2$, beautiful white crystals, easily decomposed. If ammonium chloride be boiled with the oxide of copper and an excess of copper, there result colorless laminae, $Cu_2Cl_2 \cdot 2NH_3 \cdot 2H_2O$, which becomes $Cu_2Cl_2 \cdot 2NH_3 \cdot 2HCl$ when treated with HCl. In the same reaction violet laminae are deposited, $Cu_2Cl_2 \cdot CuCl_2 \cdot 2NH_3 + 2H_2O$. [a, 27.] See COPPER chloride.—C. gummatosum. See Kesina cupri.—C. hydrocarbonicum. Fr., eau céleste pour les yeux, eau ophthalmique bleue. Solution of copper and ammonia; made by dissolving 1 part of ammonium chloride in 96 parts of lime-water, in the open air, in a copper vessel, and decanting the liquor when it has become blue. [Ferr. Ph., 1832, Frankf. Ph., 1791]; or made from 1 part of copper filings, 6 parts of ammonium chloride, and 48 parts of lime-water [Aust. Ph., 1820]; or by mixing 1 part each of ammonium chloride and potassium carbonate and 8 parts of distilled water in a copper basin, in the open air, and, when the solution has become blue, filtering [Brunsw. Dispensat., 1777, Sp. Ph., 1798, Würtemb. Ph., 1798]; or by digesting for 24 hours 960 parts of lime-water, 10 parts of ammonium chloride, and 1 part of copper acetate [U. S. Ph., 1820, Amsterd. Ph., 1792, Brunsw. Disp., 1777, Genev. a, spring catch; b, articulation of the stem with the handle.

A CUTTING CURETTE.

A FLEXIBLE CURETTE.

A PHARYNGEAL CURETTE.

BOWMAN AND CRITCHETT'S CURETTE.

CRITCHETT'S CURETTE.

uterine c. devised by E. Noeggerath. The shaft is tubular for antiseptic irrigation during the use of the instrument. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," June 27, 1885, p. 733].—Articulated c. Fr., c. articulée. Of Pajot, a uterine c. with a hinge-like joint near the end capable of being worked at the handle; used for extracting portions of the ovum retained within the uterus in cases of abortion. [A, 15].—Cutting c. Fr., c. tranchante. A c. with a sharp edge, intended to cut or scrape away vegetations, neoplastic deposits, etc.—Dull wire c. See Wire c.—Fenestrated c. Fr., c. fenêtrée. Ger., gefensterte C. A c. with the blade fenestrated or consisting simply of a ring, instead of being solid like the bowl of a spoon. [F.]—Irrigations-C. (Ger.). A uterine c. with a hollow shank, to which an injecting apparatus may be attached, for the purpose of combining irrigation with the operation of curetting. [Freund, "Ctbl. f. Gynäk.," Sept. 2, 1882, p. 545].—Vesical c. Ger., Blasenlöffel. See Lithotomy scoop.—Wire c. A c. made of wire, having no cutting edge.

CURETTING, n. Ku²r-e²t-i²n²g. Fr., curettage, curettement. Ger., Auskatzung. The operation of removing vegetations, etc., by means of a curette.

CURIMATINA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Ku²(ku⁴)-ri²-ma²-ti(te)²na². A subfamily or group of the Characinae. [L, 207.]

CURINE, n. Ku²r'en. Fr., c. Ger., Curin. A substance obtained by Böhm, along with curarin, from curare. Unlike curarine, it is physiologically inactive. It dissolves sparingly in cold water, is more soluble in hot water, and, with alcohol, chloroform, and dilute acids, forms very bitter solutions. It is a weak base, forming amorphous salts. It melts at 100° C. [B, 270 (a, 24).]

CURITIS (Lat.), n. f. Ku²r(ku⁴)-ri-(e)²ti²s. An ancient name for the genus Verbena. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CURL, n. Ku²r'l. Dan., Krille (1st def.). Lat., cirrus (1st def.). Fr., boucle (1st def.). Ger., Locke (1st def.). 1. Anything (like a lock of hair) of a spiral form; in botany, a cirrus or other organ rolled on itself. 2. A disease of the potato-plant attacking the leaves and stems and causing a failure of the tubers. [B, 19, 77 (a, 24).]

CURL-DODDY, n. Ku²r'l-do²d-i². The Scabiosa succisa, the Plantago lanceolata, and the Plantago major. [A, 505.]

CURLED, adj. Ku²r'ld. Lat., cirratius. Fr., cirrhé. Ger., gekriüsel. Having the form of a curl. [a, 24.]

CURLICK, n. Ku²r'l'ik. The Sinapis arvensis. [A, 505.]

CURLUNS, n. Ku²r'l'u²n²z. The Carum bulbocastanum. [A, 505.]

CURLY-DODDY, n. Ku²r'l'i²-do²d-i². See CURL-DODDY.

CURMASI, n. The Prunus laurocerasus. [B, 88.]

CURMI (Lat.), n. n. Gr., κοῦμι. An ancient sort of beer made from barley. [Gorræus (A, 325).]

CURNBERRY, n. Ku²r'n'be²r-i². See CRANBERRY.

CURRADAPALA (Malay), n. The Nerium antidysentericum. [B, 88.]

CURRALEIRA, n. The Croton antisiphiliticum. [B, 88.]

CURRANBERRY, n. Ku²r'a²n-be²r-i². See CRANBERRY.

CURRANBINE, n. Ku²r'a²n-bin. The Aquilegia vulgaris. [A, 505.]

CURRENT, n. Ku²r'ant. 1. Probably a corruption of Corinth, whence a small seedless grape was formerly obtained which much resembled c's. Fr., groseille (1st def.) [Fr. Cod.], gradelle (1st def.). Ger., Johannisbeere (1st def.). It., ribes. Sp., grosella. The fruit and plant of various species of Ribes. [a, 24.] 2. See Corinthian c's.—American black c. The Ribes floridum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Australian c. The Leucopogon Richei and the Leptomeria acerba. [B, 19, 275 (a, 24).]—Black c. Fr., groseille noire. Ger., schwarze Johannisbeere, Gichtbeere. The Ribes nigrum. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—Buffalo c. The Ribes aureum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Californian black c. The Ribes bracteosum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Common black c. The Ribes nigrum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Common white c. The Ribes rubrum, var. album. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Common red c. The Ribes rubrum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Corinthian c's. Corinthian raisins, the wax passuum minores of the old pharmacopœias. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C-wine. Wine made from c's, containing about 20 per cent. of alcohol. [B, 5 (a, 21).]—Indian c. The Symphoricarpos vulgaris. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Indian c-bush. The genera Miconia and Clidemia. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Missouri c. See Buffalo c.—Mountain c. The Ribes alpinum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Native c. (of New South Wales). The Leucopogon Richei. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—Native Tasmanian c. Some species of Coprosma. [B, 19, 275 (a, 24).]—Native Victoria c. The Leptomeria Billardieri. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Nepal black c. The Ribes glaciale. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—New Zealand c. The Aristolelia fruticosa. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Pennsylvania black c. The Ribes floridum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Red Alpine c. The Ribes alpinum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Red c. The Ribes rubrum. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—Red-flowered c. The Ribes sanguineum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—West Indian c. The Jacquinea armillaris, the Beureria havanensis, and the Bowreria succulenta. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—White c. See White-fruited c.—White-flowered c. The Ribes sanguineum, var. album. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—White-fruited c. The Ribes rubrum, var. album. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—White-ribbed-leaved red c. The Ribes albinervium. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Yellow-flowered black c. The Ribes flavum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Yellow-flowered c. The Ribes aureum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Yellow-flowered red c. The Ribes tenellum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

CURRENTWORTS, n. pl. Ku²r'a²nt-wu²rts. The Grossulariaceae. [B, 19 (a, 24).]

CURRENT, n. Ku²r'e²nt. From currere, to run. It., corriente. Fr., courant. Ger., Strom. Sp., corriente. A flowing, as of the blood in the vessels, of electricity, etc.—Abterminal c. Ger., Abterminal-Strom. Of Hermann, the secondary, lesser c. developed at any point in a nerve or muscle after the passage of a single induction shock. [A, 383 (K)].—Action c. Ger., Wirkungsstrom. The electro-motive force resident in an isolated frog's muscle during the state of tetanus, induced by the application of a proper stimulus to its nerve. [A, 429 (K)].—Adterminal c. Ger., Adterminal-Strom. Of Hermann, the negative c. observed at any point in a nerve or muscle on the passage of a single induction shock through it. [A, 383 (K)].—Alternate c. Alternating c. A c. the direction of which is periodically changed; especially a c. the direction of which in a magneto-electric machine is reversed by the revolution of a magnet before an armature, or vice versa. [Hayne (B)].—Anelectrotonic c. Ger., anelectrotonischer Strom. Of Du Bois-Reymond, the c. observed at the anode on passing a constant c. through a nerve. [A, 383 (K)].—Angular c's. C's which are inclined to each other at any angle. [L].—Ascending c. An electric c. which passes from the periphery to the centre, as from the peripheral portion of a nerve toward the nerve-centre. [B.].—Battery c. Ger., Batteriestrom. The direct c. from a galvanic battery.—Branch c. See Derived c.—Catelectrotonic c. Ger., katelectrotonischer Strom. A c. observed at the cathode on passing a constant c. through a nerve. [A, 383 (K)].—Centrifugal c. See Descending c.—Centripetal c. See Ascending c.—Combined c. The resultant of the combined action of the galvanic and faradaic c's. [a, 27.] See GALVANOFARADISATION.—Constant c. Fr., courant constant. 1. A galvanic c. produced by a constant (two-fluid) battery. 2. A galvanic c. in general as distinguished from a faradaic c. [Hayne, Beard, and Rockwell (B)].—Constant galvanic c. An uninterrupted galvanic c. [B.].—Continuous c. 1. A c. which flows always in the same direction; especially an uninterrupted galvanic c. 2. As sometimes used, the galvanic c. [Hayne, Beard, and Rockwell (B)].—C-breaker. See RHEOTOME.—C-changer. See RHEOTROPE.—C-condenser. Fr., condensatur de Fizeau. An apparatus for collecting the extra c's generated in the operation of an induction machine, which it combines to form a c. of reverse direction to that of the battery c., and which, transmitted to the core, demagnetizes it instantly, thus increasing the rapidity of the interruptions and the intensity of the induced c. It consists of numerous layers of tin, separated by paper impregnated with resin, the alternate layers of the tin being connected to form one armature, and the intervening layers to form the other. The whole is introduced beneath the stand supporting the bobbin. [B, 21 (a, 27)].—C. electricity. Galvanism. [Guthrie (B)].—C-increaser. A variety of rheostat by which the strength of a galvanic c. can be increased without breaking the circuit. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—C-interrupter. See RHEOTOME.—C. of the pile. See Galvanic c.—C-regulator. See RHEOSTAT.—C-reverser. Ger., Strom-wechsler. See RHEOTROPE.—C-selector. An arrangement by which any desired number of galvanic elements can be brought into or excluded from the circuit. [B.].—Cutaneous c. Ger., Haut-Strom. A natural electric c. supposed by Hermann to be present in the skin, apparently distinguished from the c's which are proper to the muscles. [A, 383 (K)].—Demarcation c. Of Hermann, the new electrical c. developed in a muscle or nerve at a point of injury. This is negative with respect to the previous c. in the intact muscle. [A, 429 (K)].—Derived c. That portion of an electric c. which is abstracted from the main c. passing through a circuit by connecting two points of the circuit with an additional conductor, called a derivation-wire. [Hayne (B)].—Descending c. An electric c. which passes from the nerve-centres toward the periphery. [B.].—Deviation c. Ger., abweichender Strom. Of Du Bois-Reymond, the electrical c. in a muscle-rhombus. [A, 429 (K)].—Diaphragm c. 1. The passage of fluids through the membranous partition of a dialyzer. 2. A diffusion of gases through a porous substance. [L.].—Diffusion c. The extension of the effect of a galvanic c. beyond the points of application of the electrodes. [Hayne (B)].—Direct c. 1. See Descending c. 2. See Galvanic c.—Downward c. See Descending c.—Electric c. Fr., courant électrique. Ger., elektrischer Strom. The transfer of electrical energy from one part of a body to another along a determinate path called the circuit, and through a body or series of bodies constituting the conductor. [Hayne (B)]. See Galvanic c., Faradaic c., and Static c.—Electro-magnetic c. See Faradaic c.—Electrotonic c. A c. that exists at the surface of that part of a nerve not directly acted upon by a galvanic c. Its strength varies with the size of the nerve and the force, direction, and duration of the galvanic electrization. [a, 27.].—Exciting c. A c. used for magnetizing the magnet in certain dynamo-electric machines. [L.].—Extra c. Fr., extra-courant. A faradaic c. induced in portions of a coil of wire by the action of the c. passing through other portions of the same coil. [B.].—Eye c. Ger., Augenstrom. An appreciable electric c. which may be observed in a freshly removed eye, if it is placed in a suitable galvanometer-circuit. Its direction is from the cornea to the cut section of the optic nerve. It is temporarily increased by the action of light. [A, 429 (K)].—Faradaic c. Faradic c. Fr., courant faradaïque. Ger., faradischer Strom. An electric c. (induced c., secondary c.) induced in a conducting coil by the opening or closure of an electric c. (primary c.) in a neighboring conducting coil. Its direction is always opposite to that of the inducing c. A faradaic c. is distinguished from a galvanic c. by being always an interrupted c., so as to exhibit constant reversal of direction. [B.].—Frog-c. Ger., Frosch-Strom. It., corrente propria della rana [Nobili]. Of Du Bois-Reymond, the total electrical c. in the body of a frog, which represents the sum of the natural c's in the muscles and nerves. Its direction is from the tips of the toes to the head. [A, 429 (K)].—Galvanic c. Fr., courant galvanique. Ger., galvanischer Strom. An electric c. produced by the chemical interaction of two or more substances, which latter constitute a galvanic element. [B.].—Gland c. Glandular c. Ger., Drüsen-Strom. A natural electric c. which is situated in glands. On stimulating the nerves which supply a gland, a negative variation is observed in its current, the same as in muscles. [K, 35.].—Imbibition c. Ger., Einsaugungsstrom. An electrical c. at the cut surface of a nerve or muscle due to the imbibition of fluid by that surface. Its direction is the same as that of the fluid current. [A, 429 (K)].—Increasing c. An electric c. the strength of which is gradually increased without breaking the circuit. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Individual c. See Animal MAGNETISM.—Induced c. See Faradaic c.—Inducing c. The primary c. A c. (faradaic or galvanic) which by its closure or opening generates a faradaic c. in an adjoining circuit. [B.].—Induction c.,

Inductive c. See Induced c.—Interrupted c. Fr., courant interrompu. A c. which is broken and closed again at short intervals; as sometimes employed, a faradaic (as distinguished from a galvanic) c. [B.].—Labile c. [Remak]. Fr., courant labile. Ger., labiler Strom. An electric c. applied by moving one or both of the electrodes over the surface to which the application is made. [B.].—Local c. A c. in which the action of the electric current is limited approximately to the point of application, mediate or immediate, of one electrode to a part preserving its normal relations. [a, 27.].—Magneto-electric c. A faradaic c. generated by the action of a magnet. [B.].—Muscular c. Fr., courant musculaire. The electrical c. which exists in a muscle, and is demonstrated by placing the poles of a galvanometer upon two distinct parts of it. When the points are upon the surface the c. is electro-positive; when they are upon a transverse section, it is electro-negative. The tension of the c. decreases according as the points are remote from the centre of the transverse section or from an imaginary circle (the equator) which divides the muscle into two halves; when the contact is made between either extremity of the longitudinal axis of the muscle and any point of the equator, it is termed "contact fort," but when it is made between two points upon the same surface (transverse or longitudinal) unequally distant from the equator or centre, it is termed "contact faible." [L, 87.].—Nerve-muscle c. [Benedikt]. An electric c. applied by placing one electrode over a nerve and the other over a muscle. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Partial c. See Derived c.—Phasic c's. Ger., phasische Ströme. Of Hermann, the two opposite c's which are observed at any point in an uninjured nerve or muscle on the application to it of a single induction shock. [A, 383 (K)].—Plexus-nerve c. [Benedikt]. An electric c. applied by placing one electrode over a nerve-plexus and the other over a nerve. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Polarizing after-c. A secondary current induced in living nerves and muscles during the opening of a constant c.; to depend upon "internal polarization." [A, 429 (K)].—Primary c. 1. See Inducing c. 2. An incorrect term for a galvanic c. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Primitive c. An electric c. from which a derived c. has not been abstracted. [Hayne (B)].—Reverse c. See Ascending c.—Secondary c. See Faradaic c.—Secretion c. Ger., Ausscheidungsstrom. An electrical c. observed by Hermann in the skin of the frog, the direction of which is from without inward. It appears simultaneously with the formation of secretion in the sweat-glands. [A, 429 (K)].—Sinuuous c. A c. which is transmitted in a curved line. [a, 27.].—Spinal-cord c. [Benedikt]. An electric c. in which both electrodes are placed on the spine. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Spinal-cord-muscle c. An electric c. applied by placing one electrode over the spine and the other over a muscle. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Spinal-cord-nerve c. [Benedikt]. An electric c. applied by placing one electrode over the spine and the other over a nerve. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Spinal-cord-plexus c. [Benedikt]. An electric c. applied by placing one electrode upon the spine and the other over a nerve-plexus. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Spinal-cord-root c. [Benedikt]. An electric c. applied by placing one electrode upon the spine and passing the other upon and down along the sides of the vertebrae. [Beard and Rockwell (B)].—Stabile c. [Remak]. Fr., courant stable. Ger., stabiler Strom. An electric c. applied with the electrodes both fixed in one position. [B.]. Cf. Labile c.—Static c. An electric c. constituted by the constant abstraction and renewal of a change of frictional electricity. [Hayne (B)].—Swelling c. See Increasing c.—Terrestrial c's. Thermo-electric c's caused, according to Ampère, by the atmospheric variations due to the position of the sun. They circulate from east to west, and are perpendicular to the magnetic meridian of each place. [a, 27.].—To-and-fro c. See Faradaic c.—Uniform c. [Beard and Rockwell]. An electric c. the strength of which remains the same during its application. [B.].—Uninterrupted c. An electric c. which is not broken during its application; a continuous c. [B.].—Unit of c. See AMPÈRE.—Upward c. See Ascending c.—Voltaic c. See Galvanic c.

CURRIE, CURRY, n's. Ku^r-i². From Pers., khârdi, broth, juicy meats (from khârdan, to eat, to drink). Fr., cary. Ger., Gerbepulver. A sauce or other culinary preparation flavored with c.-powder.—Bengal c., C.-powder. A coarse, yellowish-brown powder, having a strong aromatic odor and taste, made by mixing black pepper, capsicum, coriander, fenugreek, white pepper, and caraway, with curcuma and ginger. ("Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxviii (a, 21)).—C-leaf tree. The Murraya Kœnigii (Bergera Kœnigii). [B, 19, 275.]

CURSORES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku^rs(ku^rs)-o^rez(ras). From currere, to run. Fr., coureurs. Ger., Laufvögel. 1. As most commonly used, an order of birds which rarely use their wings. 2. Of De Blainville, a family of the Rodentia. 3. Of Cuvier and Latreille, a family of the Orthoptera. 4. Of Haworth, a family of the Crustacea. 5. Of Sundevall, a cohort of the Humilinares. [L, 41, 121, 180.]

CURSORIA [Latreille] (Lat.), n. n. pl. Ku^r(ku^r)-so^ri-a². A section of the Dermaptera. [L, 266.]

CURSORIAL, adj. Ku^rs-o^ri-a². Lat., cursorius. Fr., c., coureur. Belonging to or resembling the Cursores. [L, 14.]

CURSORIIDEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku^rs(ku^rs)-o^ri-i(i)²d-e(a³-e³). See CURSORES.

CURSORINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku^rs(ku^rs)-o^r-i(e)²(ne)(na³-e³). A subfamily of the Charadriidæ. [L, 73.]

CURSORIPES (Lat.), adj. Ku^r(ku^r)-sor-i²-pez(pas). From currere, to run, and pes, the foot. Fr., cursoripède. (Ger., fluchfüssig). Having feet adapted to running (said of birds); as a n., in the m. pl., Cursoripedes, a family of the Cursores. [L, 41.]

CURSUMA (Lat.), n. f. Ku^r(ku^r)-su²(su)²ma³. The Ficaria ranunculoides. [B, 88.].—C. hæmorrhoidalis. See C.

CURSUMA (Lat.), n. m. Ku^r(ku^r)-su²(su²s). Gr., ῥόμος. Ger., Lauf (1st def.), Abfluss (2d def.). 1. A course, also the act of running. 2. A flow. [A, 325.]—C. menstruus. The menstrual flow. [A, 325.]—C. urinæ. A flow of urine. [A, 325.]

CURSUTA (Lat.), n. f. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-su²(su)/ta². Fr., cursute. The Gentiana purpurea. [B, 88.]

CURTAIN, n. Ku²r^ti²n. From cortina, the c. of a theatre. Fr., courtine. 1. A screen-like structure. 2. In botany, see Volva.—Valvular c. See Valvular PLATE.

CURTATIO (Lat.), n. f. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-ta(ta²)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., curtationis. From curtare, to shorten. Ger., Verkürzen. A shortening, curtailment. [L, 81.]

CURTIDOE, n. At Caracas the Weinmannia glabra. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CURTIPE (Lat.), adj. Ku²r^ti(ku⁴t)²-i²-pez(pas). From curtus, short, and pes, the foot. Fr., curtipède. Ger., kurzfüssig. Having short feet. [L, 41.]

CURTIROSTRIS (Lat.), adj. Ku²r^ti(ku⁴t)²-i²-ro²s²-tris. From curtus, short, and rostrum, the beak. Fr., curtirostre. Ger., kurzschnebelig. Having a short beak. [L, 41.]

CURTUM (Lat.), n. n. Ku²r(ku⁴r)/tu²m(tu⁴m). See COLOBOMA.

CURTUS (Lat.), adj. Ku²r^ti(ku⁴t²)/u²s(u⁴s). Short (a species name). [L.]

CURUCUCU, n. A disease caused by the sting of a South American serpent. [L, 41.]

CURUPA, n. A little known South American herb, employed as an intoxicant by the Flathead Indians, especially the Omaguas of the upper Amazon, in Peru, and the Enaguas of the upper Guaviare, in Colombia. The powdered plant is insufflated through the nostrils by means of a forked reed, and produces an intoxication like that of hashesh, which lasts sometimes for twenty-four hours, accompanied, it is said, by delicious visions. [a, 14.]

CURUQNA (Tarasco), n. The Cesalpinia echinata. [A, 447.]

CURUQUIÈRES (Fr.), n. Ku²-ru²-ke-e²r. See ARACHIS hypogæa.

CURURA, n. Of Plumier, the genus Paullinia. [B, 121 (a, 24); L, 97.]—C. ape. In Brazil, the Paullinia pinnata. [B, 88.]

CURUTUPALA (Malay), n. The Tabernaemontana crispata. [B, 172 (a, 24).]

CURVAMEN (Lat.), n. n. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-va(wa²)/me²n. Gen., curvaminis. A protuberant curve, especially of the spinal column. [A, 322, 325.]

CURVATE, adj. Ku²r^vat. Lat., curvus. Fr., courbé. Ger., gekrümmt. It., curvato. Sp., curvado. Bent, bowed. [a, 24.]

CURVATIO (Lat.), n. f. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-va(wa²)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., curvationis. Fr., courbure. Ger., Krümmung. A bending or bowing. [A, 318.]

CURVATIVE, adj. Ku²r^va²t-i²v. Fr., curvatif. Very slightly curved (said of leaves). [A, 301.]

CURVATOR (Lat.), n. m. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-va(wa²)/to²r. Gen., curvatoris. From curvare, to bend. Fr., curvateur. Ger., Beuger, Krümmacher. A muscle the action of which is to bend a part. [A, 322.]—C. coccygis. Fr., muscle curvateur du coccyx. Ger., Steissbeinkrümmmer. 1. An occasional muscle in man, arising from the anterior surface of the sacrum and inserted into the bodies of the second, third, and fourth coccygeal vertebrae. 2. Of Sömmering, a fasciculus of the levator ani muscle. 3. Of von Bähr, a fasciculus of the coccygeus muscle. [A, 5, 262; L, 332.] 4. See Sacro-coccygeus lateralis.—C. coccygis accessorius. Syn.: sacro-coccygeus anticus externus. A rare accessory muscle arising from the lower part of the anterior surface of the transverse process of the fourth sacral vertebra and from the upper half of the transverse process of the fifth sacral vertebra, and inserted into the border of the third and fourth coccygeal vertebrae; the homologue of certain constant muscles in the lower Mammalia. [W, Gruber, "Arch. f. path. Anat. u. Physiol. u. f. klin. Med.," cix, 1, 1837, p. 1.]

CURVATURA (Lat.), n. f. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-va²t(wa²t)-u²/ra². See CURVATURE.—C. postpubica [Hyrtl]. The curvature of the urethra behind the pubes. [L, 31.]—C. prostatica. The forward curvature of the lower end of the rectum. [A, 500.]—C. sacralis. The sacral curvature of the rectum. [A, 500.]—C. sigmoidea. 1. The curve of the oviduct. 2. The curvature of the internal carotid artery as it passes through the carotid canal. [L, 349.] 3. See Sigmoid FLEXURÆ of the colon.—C. subpubica [Hyrtl]. The curve formed by the urethra beneath the pubes. [L, 31.]—C. ungulum. See ONYCHOGRYPHOSIS.

CURVATURE, n. Ku²r^va²-tu²r. Gr., κύρτωμα. Lat., curvatura flexura. Fr., courbure. Ger., Einbiegung, Krümmung. It., curvatura. Sp., curvadura. A bending, a bend.—Angular c. of the spine. Fr., flexion angulaire de la colonne vertébrale. Ger., winkelförmige Knickung der Wirbelsäule. It., curvatura angolare della colonna vertebrale. Sp., curvadura angular de la columna vertebral. A sharp, angular bend of the spinal column, causing a posterior projection, due to carious destruction of the body of a vertebra. [E.]—Compensatory c. Fr., courbure compensatrice. A secondary spinal c. that takes place as the result of efforts to maintain the general upright state of the trunk when it has been vitiated by a c. of the spine.—Cotylo-sacral c. The curved surface of the sacrum and ilium shown in a section of the pelvis made through the cotylo-sacral arch. [L, 14.]—C. of concussion. In botany, the sudden c. which internodes take when sharply struck, the concavity of the c. lying toward the direction of the blow. [B, 229 (a, 24).]—C. of the spine. Fr., inflexion de la colonne vertébrale. Ger., Biegung der Wirbelsäule. It., curvadura della colonna vertebrale. Sp., curvadura de la columna na vertebral. A permanent deviation of some portion of the spinal column from its normal form.—Greater c. of the stomach. Lat., curvatura ventriculi major. Fr., grande courbure de l'estomac. The lower convex border of the stomach. [L, 7.]—Lateral c. of the spine. Fr., flexion latérale de la colonne vertébrale. Ger., seitliche Verbiegung der Wirbelsäule, Rückgratsverbiegung. It., curvadura laterale della colonna vertebrale. Sp., curvadura lateral de la columna vertebral. See SCOLIOSIS.—Lesser c. of the stomach. Lat., curvatura ventriculi minor. Fr., petite courbure de l'estomac. The upper concave border of the stomach. [L, 7.]—Pott's c. See Angular c. of the spine.—Rotaro-lateral c. of the spine. See SCOLIOSIS.—Secondary c's of the dental tubules. The numerous fine, spiral curves made by the dental tubules in their passage through the dentine. [L.]—Spinal c. See C. of the spine.

CURVATURED, adj. Ku²r^va²t-u²r^d. See CURVATIVE.

CURVATUS (Lat.), adj. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-va(wa²)/tu²s(tu⁴s). See CURVATE.

CURVE, n. Ku²r^v. (From Lat., curvus.) A bend, a flexure. Gr., κύρτωμα. Lat., curvatura. Fr., courbe. Ger., C. Krümmung. It., curvadura. Sp., curvadura. A bend; in graphic delineations, the general course of a line formed by a number of straight lines extending between adjacent registry points.—Aortic c. Fr., courbe aortique. See ARCH of the aorta.—Bauché' (Ger.). A graphic c. exhibiting the respiratory movements of the abdomen. ["Arch. f. Anat. u. Phys.," 1878, p. 441 (L).]—Brusté' (Ger.). A graphic c. exhibiting the movements of the chest in respiration. ["Arch. f. Anat. u. Phys.," 1878, p. 447 (L).]—Carus's c. See C. of Carus.—Caudal c. Of the embryo, see CAUDAL FLEXURE.—Cephalic c. Fr., courbe céphalique. Ger., Kopfkrümmung. 1. Of the embryo, see CEPHALIC FLEXURE. 2. Of an obstetrical forceps, the c. of that portion of each blade that is applied to the fetal head.—Compensatory c. See Compensatory CURVATURE.—C.-basis. In a sphymographic tracing, the common level from which the ascending lines spring. [D, 1.]—C. of Carus. The arc of an imaginary circle having its centre at the symphysis pubis and extending in the median line of the pelvis in women, from the plane of the inlet to that of the outlet; corresponding roughly with the pelvic axis.—C. of the false promontory. Fr., courbe du faux promontoire. A term proposed by R. Barnes for c. which the fetal head has to describe in order to enter the pelvis in cases in which the sacro-vertebral angle is unusually prominent. [A, 40.]—C'nzelchnung (Ger.). See Graphic c.—Ermüdungs-c. (Ger.). The graphic c. registered during the contraction of a muscle when in a state of exhaustion; as the exhaustion becomes extreme this c. approaches a straight line. [K, 16.]—Front c. See Skull c.—Graphic c. Fr., courbe graphique. Ger., graphische c. C'nzelchnung. The course formed on a graphic chart by a line made up of a number of straight lines passing between the contiguous points registered; also the undulating line registered by the needle of the sphymograph or other like instrument on a moving plate.—Hind c. Ger., hintere Kopfkrümmung, Nackenkrümmung. A curvature of the body of the embryo between about the fourth and eighth weeks of development, opposite the beginning of the spinal cord. [L, 146.]—Pelvic c. Fr., courbe pelvienne (ou novelle). Ger., Beckenkrümmung. Of an obstetrical forceps, the c. formed by the anterior deviation of the blades from the axis of the shank, the instrument being in position with the blades corresponding to the mother's right and left side.—Perineal c. Fr., courbe périméale. Ger., Dammkrümmung. Of an obstetrical forceps, a c. formed by the backward deviation of the handles from the axis of the shank.—Skull c. See Principal cephalic FLEXURE.—Tail c. Ger., Schwanzkrümmung. The curvature of the caudal extremity of the embryo between the fourth and seventh weeks of development. [L, 146.]—Temperature c. A graphic c. exhibiting the variations of the temperature during a given period. [L.]

CURVEMBRYÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²r(ku⁴r)-ve²m(wa²m)/bri²(bru²)-e(a²-e²). For deriv., see CURVE and EMBRYO. Fr., curvembryées. 1. Of Brongniart, a suborder of leguminous plants, comprising the tribes Sophoreæ, Dalbergiæ, and Intricæ. 2. Of Lindley, a cohort of the Incompleteæ, comprising the alliances Chenopodales, Polygonales, Petivales, Sclerates, and Coccolates. 3. Of Miers, the Solanaceæ, and of Lindley a division of that order. Subsequently he classified the C. as a division of the Solanaceæ, comprising Micrembergia, Petunia, etc. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CURVEMBRYÉ (Fr.), adj. Ku²r-va²n²-bre-a. Having a curved embryo (said of plants where the cotyledons are applied against the radicle). [a, 24.]

CURVEMBRYÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²r^v(ku⁴r)-e²m-bri²(bru²)-e(e²)-e(a²-e²), Ku²r(ku⁴r)-ve²m(wa²m)-bri²(bru²)-e(e²-e(a²-e²)). Fr., curvembryées. Of Bentham and Hooker, a series of monochlamydeous dicotyledons, comprising the Nyctaginæ, Illecebraceæ, Amarantaceæ, Chenopodiaceæ, Phytolaccaceæ, Batideæ, and Polygonaceæ. [B, 42, 170 (a, 24).]

CURVICAUDATE, adj. Ku²r^v-i²-ka²'dat. From curvus, bent, and cauda, the tail. Fr., curvicaude. Ger., krummschwanzig. Having a curved or crooked tail. [L.]

CURVICAULE (Fr.), adj. Ku²r-ve-kol. From curvus, bent, and caulis, a stem. Having a recurved stem. [L, 41.]

CURVICOLLE (Fr.), adj. Ku²r-ve-kol^l. From curvus, bent, and collum, the neck. Having a curved neck; in botany, having the apex or top bent. [L, 41.]

CURVICOSTATE, adj. Ku²r^v-i²-ko²s'tat. From curvus, bent, and costa, a rib. See CURVINERVE.

CURVIDENTATE, adj. Ku²r^v-i²-de²n'tat. From curvus, bent, and dens, a tooth. Fr., curvidenté. Having curved teeth. [L, 56.]

CURVIFLORE (Fr.), adj. Ku²r-ve-flor. From curvus, bent, and flos, a flower. Having curved flowers. [L, 41.]

CURVIFOLIATE, adj. Ku²rv-i²-fo²/i²-at. Lat., curvifoliatus (from curvus, bent, and folium, a leaf). Fr., curvifolié. Having the leaves bent back. [a, 24.]

CURVIFORM, adj. Ku²rv-i²-fo²-rm. From curvus, bent, and forma, form. Curved.

CURVILINEAL, CURVILINEAR, adj's. Ku²rv-i²-li²n/e²-a²l, -a²r. From curvus, bent, and linea, a line. Fr., curviligne. Forming a curve (said of contours).

CURVINERVATE, CURVINERVED, CURVINERVOUS, adj's. Ku²rv-i²-nu²rv/at, -nu²rvd/, -nu²rv/u²s. Lat., curvinervis (from curvus, bent, and nervus, a nerve). Fr., curvinervie, curvinervé. Ger., krummnervig. Having the nervures running parallel to the border and converging to the point (said of leaves). [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CURVIPÈDE (Fr.), adj. Ku²rv-ve-pad. From curvus, bent, and pes, the foot. Having curved limbs. [L, 41.]

CURVIROSTRAL, CURVIROSTRATE, adj's. Ku²rv-i²-ro²s/tra²l, -trat. From curvus, bent, and rostrum, the beak. Fr., curvirostre. Having a crooked beak; in botany, having the opercula of the urn curved. [L, 41, 56.]

CURVIROSTRES [Slater] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²rv(ku²rv)-i²-ros-/trez(tre²s), ku²rv(ku²rv)-vi²(wi²)-ro²st/rez(ras). Ger., Krummschnübler. A family of the Laminipiantares. [L, 121.]

CURVISERIAL, adj. Ku²rv-i²-se²/ri²-a²l. From curvus, bent, and series, a series. Fr., curvisériaté, curvisérié. In a curved series (said of leaves when arranged in a spiral around the axis). [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CURVITY, n. Ku²rv-i²-ti². Lat., curvitas. Fr., curvité, curbure. Ger., Krümmung. The state of being curved. [L, 41, 56.]

CURVUS (Lat.), adj. Ku²rv(ku²rv)/vu²s(vu²ts). Gr., κυρρός, ὄβός, κυρῶς. Fr., courbé. Ger., krumm. It., curvato. Sp., corvo. Curved. [A, 322, 325.]

CUSCA, n. See Brazilian CHICLE.

CUSCAMIDINE, n. Ku²sk-a²m/i²d-en. An amorphous substance discovered by Hesse in Cinchona succirubra. [B, 81 (a, 27).]

CUSCAMINE, n. Ku²sk/a²m-en. A crystalline substance discovered by Hesse in Cinchona succirubra. [B, 81 (a, 27).]

CUSCOCINCHONINE, n. Ku²sk-o-si²n²k/on-en. See CUSCONINE.

CUSCONIDINE, n. Ku²s-kon/i²d-en. Lat., cusconidina, cusconidia. Fr., c. Ger., Cusconidin. A pale-yellow, amorphous, resinoid alkaloid found in cusco-bark together with cusconine. Its formula has not yet been ascertained. [B, 5, 23, 270 (a, 24).]

CUSCONINE, n. Ku²s/kon-en. Fr., c. Ger., Cusconin. An alkaloid, C₂₃H₃₃N₃O₄ + 2H₂O, discovered by Leverkus in cusco-bark. It is almost insoluble in water, soluble in 35 parts of ether, easily soluble in alcohol and in chloroform. It may be distinguished from other cinchona alkaloids by the character of its sulphate. It crystallizes in faintly lustrous white laminae which lose water on heating and melt at 110° C. [B, 5, 270 (a, 24).]—C. sulphate. Fr., sulfate de c. Ger., Cusconinsulfat. A neutral, amorphous, yellow gelatinous substance insoluble in an excess of the acid compounded of c. and sulphuric acid. [B, 5, 270 (a, 24).]

CUSCUS, n. In some West Indian islands (San Domingo) the seed of Penicillaria spicata (Holcus spicatus) and some other edible grains. In India the root of Andropogon muricatus and the poppy. [a, 22.]

CUSCUTA (Lat.), n. f. Ku²s(ku²s)/ku²(ku²)-ta². Fr., cuscute. Ger., Flachsselde. 1. A genus of slender twining, leafless parasites belonging to the Convolvulaceæ. [B, 19, 34, 42 (a, 24).] 2. Of Paracelsus, an exostosis. [A, 325.]—C. americana [Jacquin]. A species said to be cholagogue and laxative; used in the West Indies as a diuretic. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. baccifera barbadensis [Plukenet]. The Cassipouia americana (alfiformis). [B, 214.]—C. chlorocarpa. A species growing in the United States, from Wisconsin to Arkansas, on species of Polygonum. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—C. decora. A species, found in southern Illinois and southward to Florida and Texas, with the capsule enveloped by the dead corolla. It attacks the Leguminosæ, Compositæ, etc. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—C. densiflora. C. epilinum. The flax-dodder; 2 species known throughout Europe as a great impediment to the cultivation of flax. It has the same uses medicinally as C. europæa (1st def.). [B, 19, 180 (a, 24).]—C. epilinum. 1. Of Smith, a species somewhat smaller than C. europæa, growing on heath, thyme, etc. It has the medicinal properties of C. europæa, but is said to be stronger, and was formerly official as herba epithymi (see cuscuta minoris). 2. Of Thunberg, see C. europæa (1st def.).—C. europæa. Fr., cuscute d'Europe (ou commune), agourre, angourre, angure, angure de tin, barbe de méline, bourreau de tin, cheveux de Vénus, cheveux du diable, crémaillère, goutte de tin, lin de lèvre, lin maudit, rache, raisin barbu, rogne, rubie, teigne. Ger., gemeine Flachsselde, Nesselselde, Teufelszwirn, Veigelselde. Sp., cuscuta. 1. Of Linnaeus, a species growing on thistles, nettles, oats, and other soft plants. It is a mild purgative and was formerly used in hepatic diseases, melancholia, etc. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).] 2. Of Lamarck, see C. epilinum (1st def.).—C. filiformis. See C. europæa (1st def.).—C. glomerata [Choisy]. A species abundant in Missouri, Illinois, and Iowa, found chiefly on the Compositæ. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—C. graveolens [Kunth]. A poisonous species found in South America, having a strong, disagreeable odor. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. major [De Candolle]. See C. europæa (1st def.).—C. minor. See C. epilinum (1st def.).—C. nivalata. A species the powdered herb of which is used as a vulnerary; the freshly expressed juice as a styptic and astringent in sore throat, abscesses, etc. [a, 22.]—C. racemosa [Martius]. A Brazilian species, used like C. umbellata. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. reflexa [Roxburgh]. An East Indian species, used by the natives as a blood-purifier and considered especially useful in bilious disorders. It is also used in skin diseases and sometimes in dyeing. [B, 172 (a, 24).]—C. rombuta putra [Rumphius]. The Cassia filiformis. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. surinamensis [Schilling]. See C. americana.—C. tenuiflora. A pale, much-branched species, growing in Illinois and other Western States, on Cephalanthus, Aster, and other plants. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—C. tetrandra, C. tubulosa. See C. europæa (1st def.).—C. thymi. See C. epilinum.—C. umbellata [Kunth]. A South American species, used in slight inflammation, sore throat, hoarseness, etc. A powder made from it is used in wounds. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. verrucosa. See C. reflexa.—C. vulgaris. 1. Of Persoon, see C. europæa (1st def.). 2. Of Presl, see C. epilinum.—Herba cuscutæ, Herba cuscutæ majoris. The herb of C. europæa of Linnaeus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Herba cuscutæ minoris, Herba cuscutæ thymi. The herb of C. epilinum (1st def.).

CUSCUTACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²s(ku²s)-ku²(ku²)-ta²(ta²)/-se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²). 1. Of Lindley, an order of the Solanææ, comprising Cuscuta and Lepidanche. 2. Of Pfeiffer, an order of plants consisting of Cuscuta, Epilinnella, and Engelmannia. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CUSCUTACEOUS, adj. Ku²s-ku²-ta²/shu²s. Fr., cuscutacé. Resembling the genus Cuscuta or belonging to the Cuscutaceæ. [a, 24.]

CUSCUTÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²s(ku²s)/ku²(ku²)-te(ta²-e²). Of Gray, a section of the Convolvulaceæ, comprising Cuscuta and Cassytha. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CUSCUTÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²s(ku²s)-ku²(ku²)/te²-e(a²-e²). Fr., cuscutées. 1. Of Presl and Bartling, an order of the Tubifloræ. 2. Of Lindley, an order of the Volvulææ. 3. Of Choisy, a section (of A. Gray, a tribe) of the Convolvulaceæ. 4. Of Desmoulins, a tribe of the Cuscutææ. They all consist of the single genus Cuscuta, except that of Desmoulins, who includes besides Cuscuta, the Epilinnella and Monogynella. [B, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CUSCUTIFORMIS (Lat.), adj. Ku²s(ku²s)-ku²(ku²)-ti²-fo²-rm/²is. From cuscuta (q. v.), and forma, form. Having the form of a plant of the genus Cuscuta. [B.]

CUSCUTINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²s(ku²s)-ku²(ku²)-ti²(te)/ne-(na²-e²). Of Link, a suborder (of Koch, a tribe) of the Convolvulaceæ, consisting of Cuscuta. Of Garcke, a division of the Convolvulaceæ, consisting of Cuscuta and Cuscutina. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CUSCUTINÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Ku²s(ku²s)-ku²(ku²)-ti²n²/e²-e(a²-e²). 1. Of Engelmann, the Cuscutaceæ of Lindley. 2. Of Desmoulins, a tribe of the Cuscutaceæ, consisting of Cassutha and Cuscuta. 3. Of Wood, a tribe of the Convolvulaceæ, consisting of Cuscuta. [B, 34, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CUSHAG, n. Ku²sh/a²g. The Senecio jacobæa. [A, 505.]

CUSHIA, n. Ku²sh/i²-a². The Heracleum sphondylium. [A, 505.]

CUSHION, n. Ku²sh/u²n. Lat., culcita. Fr., coussinet. Ger., Kissen (1st and 2d def.), Polster (3d def.). It., cuscinetto. Sp., cojínete. 1. A soft, pillow-like structure. 2. In botany, an enlargement at the base of the petiole in certain plants; in the Mimosæ it is the seat of irritable cells. [B, 1, 123, 229, 291 (a, 24).] 3. In anatomy, a collection of adipose or elastic tissue which relieves pressure upon subjacent tissues. [L.]—Adipose c. of the external ear. A deposit of fat which envelops the base of the concha of the ear of solipeds in front, inwardly, and posteriorly. [L, 13.]—Coronary c. In the solipeds, a dermal structure beneath the upper edge of the hoof, of which it is the matrix. [L, 13.]—C. of the epiglottis. The tubercle of the epiglottis. [C.]—C.-pink. See Sea-c.—Eve's c. The Saxifraga hypnoides. [A, 505.]—Ladies' c., Lady's c., Our Lady's c. The Saxifraga hypnoides, the Chrysosplenium oppositifolium, and the Lotus corniculatus. [A, 505.]—Plantar c. In the solipeds, a fibrous, somewhat wedge-shaped structure between the perforans tendon and the plantar portion of the hoof. [L, 13.]—Sea-c. The Armeria maritima. [A, 505.]—Stromeyer's c. A triangular and wedge-shaped c. 4 in. thick at the thickest end, from which point it gradually thins down for a length of 14 or 15 in. It is used for treating compound fractures of the arm, the elbow resting on the thick end, while the thin end rests upon the side of the chest. It is fastened in place by a tape around the neck and body, and when applied it supports the arm and keeps it in position. It may be further fitted with straps for holding the arm and forearm in position. [E.]

CUSHY-COWS, n. Ku²sh/i²-ku²-u²z. The Rumex obtusifolius. [A, 505.]

CUSICH, n. Of the Samucos Indians, the Orbignia phalerata. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUSO, n. Ku²so. See Koussou.

CUSP, n. Ku²sp. Gr., ἄκρον. Lat., cuspis. 1. A pointed projection, as of the crown of a tooth. 2. A segment of a valve of the heart.

CUSPABAUM (Ger.), n. Kus²pa²-ba²-u²m. The Galipea cusparia. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CUSPAIRE (Fr.). Ku²s-par. See CUSPARIA.

CUSPARÉ, CUSPAREE (Fr.), n's. Ku²s-pa²-ra. Old names for angustura-bark. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

CUSPARIA (Lat.), n. f. Ku²s(ku²s)-pa²(pa²)/ri²-a². Fr., cusparie, Bonplandie. Ger., Cusparabaum. The genus Galipea of Aublet. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C.-bark. Lat., cusparia cortex [Br. Ph.], angustura [U. S. Ph., 1870]. Fr., angustura vraie [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Angusturarinde. Sp., corteza de angostura. The bark of Galipea officinalis [Hancock] (Galipea c. [St.-Hilaire]). It occurs in flatfish or channeled pieces, rarely in quills, generally less than 6 in. long, coated on the outer side with a yellowish-gray, corky layer. When broken, it displays on its transverse edge sharply defined white points, due to deposits of calcium oxalate. It has a bitter, pungent taste and a disagreeable musty odor, especially when fresh. It contains a volatile oil, bitter extractive, a hard and bitter resin, a soft resin, a caoutchouc-like substance, lignin, gum, and various salts. It is a stimulant tonic and in large doses purgative. It is said that the native practitioners of South America find it efficacious in malignant bilious intermittent fever, dysentery, and dropsy. [B, 5, 18 (a, 24).]—C. febrifuga, C. trifoliata. The Galipea c. [B, 5, 18, 180 (a, 24).]—Infusum cuspariæ [Br. Ph.]. Fr., tisane d'angusture. Ger., Angustura-Infusion. Syn.: infusum angusture [U. S. Ph., 1870]. Infusion of c.; made by infusing in a covered vessel for 2 hours $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. of coarsely powdered c.-bark in 10 fl. oz. of distilled water and straining. [B, 81 (a, 21).]

CUSPARIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ku^3(ku^4s)\text{-}pa^2r(pa^3r)\text{-}i(i^2)^2e^2\text{-}(a^2e^2)$. Fr., cuspariées. Of De Candolle (1822), a tribe of the Rutaceæ, consisting of Cusparia, Picorea, Galipea, Erythrochiton, and Diglossis. 2. Of Reichenbach, a section of the Diosmeæ, comprising the genera of De Candolle, also Spiranthera and Ameidea. 3. Of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Rutaceæ, comprising Spiranthera, Ameidea, Leptothyrsa, Erythrochiton, Naudinia, Galipea, Ticorea, Ravenia, and Monnieria. [B, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CUSPARIN, n. $Ku^2s\text{-}pa^2r\text{-}i^2n$. Fr., cusparine. Ger., C. A crystalline neutral substance obtained from angustura-bark. It melts at 45° C., is soluble in alcohol, soluble with difficulty in water, insoluble in ether. [B, 5, 18, 270 (a, 24).]

CUSPATED, CUSPED, CUSPID, CUSPIDAL, adj.'s. $Ku^3s\text{-}at\text{-}e^2d$, ku^3sp , $ku^3sp\text{-}i^2d$, $i^2d\text{-}a^2r$. See CUSPIDATE.

CUSPIDARIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}pi^2d\text{-}a^2r(a^3r)\text{-}i(i^2)^2e^2\text{-}(a^2e^2)$. Of Jussieu, the Tricuspidariæ of Endlicher. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CUSPIDATE, adj. $Ku^3sp\text{-}i^2d\text{-}at$. Lat., cuspidatus (from cuspis, a point). Fr., cuspidé. Ger., feingespitzt, langespitzt. Having a pointed extremity. [B, 19, 123, 273 (a, 24).]

CUSPIDE (Fr.), n. $Ku^6s\text{-}ped$. See CUSP.

CUSPIDIFEROUS, adj. $Ku^3sp\text{-}i^2d\text{-}i^2e^2r\text{-}u^2s$. Lat., cuspidiferus (from cuspis, a point, and ferre, to bear). Fr., cuspidifère. Ger., spitztragend. See CUSPIDATE.

CUSPIDIFOLIUS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}pi^2d\text{-}i^2\text{-}fol\text{-}(fo^2i)^2i^2\text{-}u^2s(u^4s)$. From cuspis, a point, and folium, a leaf. Fr., cuspidifolié. Ger., spitzblättrig. Having cuspidate leaves. [L, 41.]

CUSPIDIFORMIS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}pi^2d\text{-}i^2\text{-}fo^2r\text{-}m\text{-}i^2s$. From cuspis, a point, and forma, form. Fr., cuspidiforme. Ger., spitzförmig. Having the form of a point. [L, 41.]

CUSPID (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}pi^2s$. Gen., cuspidis. 1. See CUSP. 2. An old name for a certain bandage. 3. The glans penis. [A, 325.]

CUSSAMBIUM (Lat.), n. n. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}sa^2m(sa^2m)\text{-}bi^2u^2\text{-}m\text{-}(u^4m)$. The Pistacia oleosa and the genus Schleichera. [B, 88, 121 (a, 24); L, 105.]—C. pubescens. The Schleichera trifuga. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. spinosum. The Schleichera aculeata. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CUSSAMBO, n. See CUSSAMBIUM.

CUSSET (Fr.), n. $Ku^6s\text{-}a$. A place in the department of Allier, France, near Vichy, where there are alkaline springs. [A, 319.]

CUSSO, n. Ku^6so . See Kouso.—Infusum c. [Br. Ph.]. See Infusum BRAYERÆ.

CUSSU, CUSSU-CUSSU, n's. At Ternate, the Saccharum spicatum and the Panicum colonum. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUSSUTA [Rumphius] (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}su^2(su)\text{-}ta^2$. The genus Cassytha. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUSSUTHA (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}su^2(su^4)\text{-}tha^2$. The genus Cuscutha. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CUSTARD, n. $Ku^3st\text{-}a^2rd$. A sweetened and flavored mixture of milk and eggs, either boiled or baked or prepared to be frozen into ice-cream.—C.-apple. A popular name for many species of the genus Anona. [B, 19, 94, 172, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—C.-cheeses. The Malva silvestris. [A, 505.]—C.-cups. The Epilobium hirustum. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Long-leaved c.-apple. The Anona hexapetala. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Netted c.-apple. The Anona reticulata. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Peruvian c.-apple. The Anona cherimola. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Prickly c.-apple. The Anona muricata. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Scaly c.-apple. The Anona squamosa. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Shining-leaved c.-apple. The Anona palustris. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

CUSTODIA (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}tod\text{-}i^2\text{-}a^2$. See CUSTOS.

CUSTOS (Lat.), n. com. $Ku^3s(ku^4s)\text{-}to^2s$. Gen., custodis. Fr., custodien. Ger., Wächter. A shield, a protector.—C. cerebri. The dura mater. [L, 3; K.]—C. horticorum minor. See ACHILLEA ageratum.—C. membranæ. See MENINGOPHYLLAX.—C. meningis. See MENINGOPHYLLAX.—C. oculi. An old name for an instrument for protecting the eye in certain operations. [A, 322.]—Custodes pororum. The muscles. [Galen (A, 325).]—Custodes virginittatis. An old name for the adductor muscles of the thigh, from their action in resisting attempts at rape. [L.]

CUT, n. Ku^3t . See INCISION and Incised WOUND.

CUT, adj. Ku^3t . 1. Incised. 2. Affected with an incised wound or subjected to a cutting operation (especially circumcision, lithotomy, or castration).

CUTACEUS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ta\text{-}(ta^3)^2se^2(ke^2)\text{-}u^2s(u^4s)$. See CORIACEOUS.

CUTAMBULUS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ta^2m\text{-}(ta^2m)\text{-}bu^2(bu^4)\text{-}lu^2s(lu^4s)$. From cutis, the skin, and ambulare, to promenade. Fr., cutambule. CUTANEUS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ta\text{-}(ta^3)^2ne\text{-}u^2s(u^4s)$. See CUTANEOUS; as a n., a cutaneous muscle or nerve.—C. maximus. Ger., Brusthautmuskel. See PLATYSMA myoides.

CUTBERDILL, CUTBERDOLE, n's. $Ku^2\text{-}bu^2r\text{-}di^2l$, $\text{-}dol$. The Acanthus mollis. [A, 505.]

CUTCH, n. Ku^2ch . 1. See CATECHU. 2. The spawn of the oyster. [L, 56.]

CUTCHAY-CUTTAY (Tamil), n. The Lagerstrœmia microcarpa. [B, 172 (a, 24).]

CUTEERA, n. A gum that exudes from the Cochlospermum gossypium. [B, 172 (a, 24).]

CUTEREBRA (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}te^2r\text{-}e^2b\text{-}ra^2$. From cutis, the skin, and terebra, a boring instrument. Fr., cutèrèbre. See DERMATOBIÆ.—C. noxiæ. Fr., cutèrèbre nuisible. See DERMATOBIÆ noxialis.

CUT-FINGER, n. $Ku^2\text{-}fi^2n^2\text{-}gu^2r$. The Valeriana pyrenaica and the Vinca major. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

CUT-GRASS, n. $Ku^2\text{-}gra^2s$. The Leersia oryzoides. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

CUT-HEAL, n. $Ku^2\text{-}hel$. The Valeriana officinalis. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

CUTICLE, n. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2k\text{-}l$. Lat., cuticula. Fr., cuticule. Ger., Häutchen. It., cuticola. Sp., cuticula. A thin, transparent, dry membrane devoid of nerves and vessels which covers all the surface of the body, except the parts which correspond to the nails and corresponding parts; the scarf-skin, epidermis. [C.] See EPIDERMIS, AMPHIDERM, and CUTICULA.—C. of Nasmyth. See MEMBRANE of Nasmyth.—Enamel-c. See CUTICULA dentis.—Hair-c. Fr., cuticule du poil. The outer scaly covering of a hair. [C.]—Lignineous c. The outer covering of a vegetable cell. [B, 52 (a, 27).]—Liquid c. See COLLOIDON.

CUTICOLEOUS, adj. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2k\text{-}o\text{-}lu^2s$. Lat., cuticolosus (from cutis, the skin, and colere, to inhabit). Fr., cuticole. Ger., hautbewohnend. Living under the skin of animals (said of the larvae of the Éstridæ). [L, 41, 88.]

CUTICULA (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ti^2k\text{-}u^2(u^4)\text{-}la^2$. Dim. of cutis, skin. See CUTICLE.—Chitin-C. (Ger.). The chitinous layer of the alimentary canal of the Crustacea. [“Arch. f. Anat. u. Phys.,” 1857, p. 522 (L).]—C. adamantina. See C. dentis.—C. cerebri et cerebelli. Of Fleisch, a layer of flat cells supposed to cover the free surface of the cerebrum and cerebellum. Its existence is denied by Key and Retzius. [J, 10.]—C. dentis. A thin corneous investment of the teeth which disappears shortly after they have perforated the gums. [L, 31, 318.]—C. extima. See EPIDERMIS.—C. laucocoxantha. A peculiar lichen growing on the outer skin of the Loxa cascarilla. [L, 30 (a, 14).]—C. membranæ tympani [Arnold]. The external (dermoid) layer of the tympanic membrane. [L, 31.]—C. ovi. Of Velpeau, the outer covering of an egg. [A, 45.]—C. vitelli. Of Velpeau, the enveloping membrane of the vitellus. [A, 45.]—Muttere' (Ger.). The c. of the mother-cyst of an Echinococcus. [“Arch. f. Anat. u. Phys.,” 1862, p. 636 (L).]

CUTICULAR, adj. Gr., δερματικός. Lat., cuticularis. Fr., cuticulaire, cuticuleux. Ger., häutig. Pertaining to, resembling, or of the nature of cuticle. [L, 41 (a, 24).]

CUTICULARIZATION, n. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2k\text{-}u^2\text{-}la^2r\text{-}i^2z\text{-}a\text{-}shu^2n$. Fr., cuticularisation. The formation of a thick, cuticle-like envelope by a horny transformation of epidermic cells. [B, 77, 121, 229 (a, 24); L, 121.] Cf. CUTINIZATION.

CUTICLE (Fr.), n. $Ku^6\text{-}te\text{-}ku^2l$. See EPIDERMIS.—C. de l'œil. See CUTICULA dentis.—C. du poil. See HAIR-CUTICLE.

CUTICULEUX (Fr.), adj. $Ku^6\text{-}te\text{-}ku^2lu^2$. See CUTICULAR.

CUTICULUM (Lat.), n. n. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ti^2k\text{-}u^2(u^4)\text{-}lu^2m(lu^4m)$. See CUTICULA.—C. cerebri. The dura mater of the brain. [L, 17; K.]

CUTICULIZATION, n. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2\text{-}ku^2\text{-}i^2z\text{-}a\text{-}shu^2n$. Fr., cuticulisation. See CUTICULARIZATION.

CUTIDURAL, adj. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2\text{-}du^2r\text{-}a^2l$. From cutis, the skin, and durus, hard. Fr., cutidure. Pertaining to or connected with the coronary cushion. [L, 13.]

CUTIDURIS (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ti\text{-}(du^2)\text{-}ru^2s(ru^4s)$. The coronary cushion. [L, 13.]

CUTIFICATION, $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2\text{-}ka\text{-}shu^2n$. From cutis, the skin, and facere, to make. The regeneration of skin, as at the margin of a healing ulcer. [Hodgen (a, 18).]

CUTIGERAL, adj. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2\text{-}e^2r\text{-}a^2l$. From cutis, the skin, and gerere, to bear. Fr., cutigéral. Bearing skin. [A, 301.] See C. CAVITY.

CUTIN, n. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2n$. From cutis, skin. A modification of cellulose found in the walls of certain cells, chiefly on the exterior of plant organs rendering them impervious to water. [B, 229, 291 (a, 24).]

CUTINIZATION, n. $Ku^2\text{-}ti^2n\text{-}i^2z\text{-}a\text{-}shu^2n$. The formation of a cell-wall of cutin. [B, 229 (a, 24).]

CUTIO (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}shi^2(ti^2)\text{-}o$. Gen., cutio'nis. Fr., cution. See ASELLUS (2d def.).

CUTIS (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ti^2s$. Gr., κύτος, δέρμα. Fr., peau. Ger., Haut. The skin, especially the derma; in botany, the peridium of puff-balls and certain other Fungi. [B, 19 (a, 24); L, 343.]—C. ærea. The bronze-like hue of the skin found in Addison's disease. [Ziegler (a, 18).]—C. anguillæ. The skin of an eel, the Murena anguilla. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. anserina. Fr., peau anserine, chair de poule. Ger., Gänsehaut. It., pelle d'oca. Sp., piel de gallina. "Goose-skin"; a transitory state of the skin in which, owing to spastic contraction of the arrector pili muscles (usually from chilling of the surface), the follicles become prominent and form visible projections. [G.] Ct. HORRIPILATION.—C. carnosus. See PANNICULUS carnosus.—C. externa, C. extima, C. extrema. See EPIDERMIS.—C. fucata. Painted skin; artificial coloring of the skin with cosmetics. [G., 11.]—C. gallinacea, C. horrida. See C. anserina.—C. laxa. See DERMATOLYSIS and MOLLUSCUM fibrosum.—C. lingue. The mucous membrane covering the tongue. [L., 7.]—C. pendula. See DERMATOLYSIS and MOLLUSCUM fibrosum.—C. rugosa. A wrinkled state of the skin. Plenck describes three varieties, due, respectively, to laxity of the skin, to prosoy, and to old age. [G., 11.]—C. suilla. See BUFFY-COAT.—C. summa, C. suprema. See EPIDERMIS.—C. tensa. See SCLERODERMA.—C. testacea. See ICHTHYOSIS sebacea neonatorum.—C. ultima. See EPIDERMIS.—C. unctuosus. See SEBORRHEA.—C. variegata. Maculation of the skin with spots of varying color. [G., 11.]—C. variegata a sugillatione. Echy-mosis attended with variegated discoloration. [G., 11.]—C. variegata morbosa. A disease of doubtful character, observed once by Plenck, in which the patient's face was green, the right side of the body black, and the left side yellow. [G., 11.]—C. variegata nativa. A form of maculation of the skin resembling the marks on a tiger; said to exist among the people of a certain race in Tartary. [G., 11.]—C. vera. See CORIUM (1st def.).—Horrida c. See C. anserina.

CUTISATION (Fr.), n. $Ku^6-te\text{-}za^3-se\text{-}o^2n^2$. The skin-like condition of hardness, thickness, and dryness acquired by a mucous membrane as the result of continued exposure, as in a state of eversion, inversion, or prolapse. [A., 301.]

CUTISECTOR (Lat.), n. m. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ti^2-se^2k\text{'to}^2r$; in Eng., $ku^2\text{'ti}^2-se^2k\text{'to}^2r$. Gen., cutisectoris. From cutis, the skin, and sector, a cutter. Of H. G. Piffard, an instrument for cutting out sections of skin from the living subject for microscopical examination; a spring-catch thumb-forceps with expanded, fenestrated cutting blades capable of nice adjustment as to their degree of approximation. [E.]

CUTISPONGIUS (Lat.), adj. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ti^2-spo^2n(spo^2n^2)\text{'ji}^2(gi^2)\text{-}u^3s(u^3s)$. For deriv., see CUTIS and SPONGE. Having a spongy cuticle (a botanical species name). [a., 24.]

CUTITRIBA, n. In Brazil, the Lucuma rivicoa. [B., 121 (a., 24).]

CUTITIS (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku^4)\text{-}ti(te)\text{'ti}^2s$. Gen., cutit'idus (-is). Fr., cutite. See DERMATITIS.

CUTLEAF, n. $Ku^3t\text{'lef}$. A popular name for various marine Algae, such as the Fucus vesiculosus, the Fucus serratus, and the Laminaria digitata. [A., 505.]

CUTLERIACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ku^2\text{-}lu^3r\text{-}i^2(a^2)\text{'se}^2(ke^2)\text{-}e(a^3\text{-}e^2)$. A family of fucoid Algae. [B., 279; L., 73.]

CUTLERIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ku^2\text{-}lu^3r\text{-}i^2(i^2)\text{'e}^2(e^3\text{-}e^2)$. Of Zardini, a tribe of the Antheridiæ (of Trevisan, a subtribe of the Dictyotæ; of Thuret, a family of the Phæosporæ), consisting of the genus Culleria. [B., 121, 170 (a., 24).]

CUT-OFF, n. $Ku^3t\text{'o}^2f$. An appliance for obstructing the flow of gas or liquid through a rubber tube, as in a spray apparatus.

CUTOSE, n. $Ku^2\text{'tos}$. The transparent film covering the aerial organs of plants. It is isomeric with cellulose, soluble in alkaline liquids, insoluble in concentrated sulphuric acid and in cuprammonia. [B., 229 (a., 24).]

CUTSCHULA, n. In the East, the Strychnos nux vomica. [B., 121 (a., 24).]

CUTSFOOT, n. $Ku^3s\text{'fu}^4t$. The Gnaphalium dioicum. [B., 88.]

CUTTING, n. $Ku^3t\text{'i}^2n^2g$. The operation of making a cut.—[C.] on the gripe. See APPARATUS minor.

CUTTLE-BONE, n. $Ku^3t\text{'ho}^2n$. See OS SEPLÆ.

CUTTLE-FISH, n. $Ku^2t\text{'fi}^2sh$. See SEPIA officinalis.—C.-f. bone. See OS SEPLÆ.—C.-f. powder. Of Plesse, a preparation made by rubbing 1 part of carmin with 4 parts of ammonia-water diluted with 24 parts of water, imbuing 96 parts of powdered c.-f. bone and 132 parts of precipitated chalk with this solution, allowing the mixture to dry, and adding 96 parts of orris-root perfumed with 16 parts of oil of lemon and 8 parts of oil of neroli. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiii (a., 21).]

CUT-TOOTHED, adj. Lat., inciso-dentatus. Ger., eingeschnitten-gèzàhnt. In botany, slash-toothed (i. e., having teeth separated by acute incisions), said of leaves, as in the Alchemilla fissa. [B., 19, 123 (a., 24).]

CUTUBA (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku)\text{-}tu^2(tu)\text{'ba}^3$. See DERMATOBIA.—C. noxialls. See DERMATOBIA noxialls.

CUTUBEÆ (Lat.), n. f. $Ku^2(ku)\text{-}tu^2(tu)\text{'be}^2a^3$. See COUTOUBEÆ.

CUTUCANHEM, n. In Brazil, a variety of Roupala. [B., 121 (a., 24).]

CUTUCHA. $Ku^2(ku)\text{-}tu^2(tu)\text{'ka}^3(ch^2a^3)$. Properly, CUTUBA. See DERMATOBIA.

CUVAGE (Fr.), n. $Ku^6\text{-}va^3zh$. The Polygonum hydropiper and, in the Antilles, the Commelina zanonica. [L., 87 (a., 21).]

CUVE (Fr.). $Ku^6\text{'v}$. A trough or vat.—C. hydrargyropneumatique. A pneumatic trough in which mercury is used in place of water. [L., 42.]—C. hydropneumatique. See Pneumatic TROUGH.

CUVE DE VÉNUS (Fr.), n. $Ku^6\text{'v d' va-nu}^6z$. The Dipsacus fullonum. [B., 121, 173 (a., 14).]

CUVIERIADÆ [Gray] (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ku^6\text{-}ve\text{-}ar\text{-}i^2(i^2)\text{'a}^2d(a^3d)\text{-}e(a^3\text{-}e^2)$. A family of the Holothurida. [L., 303.]

CUVIERIAN, adj. $Ku^6\text{-}ve\text{-}ar\text{'i}^2a^2n$. Described or classified by Baron Cuvier.

CUVY, n. $Ku^2\text{'vi}^2$. The Laminaria digitata. [A., 505.]

CUYA, n. Of the Paunacos Indians, the Acrocomia tolai. [B., 121 (a., 24).]

CYAMELIDE, n. $Si\text{-}a^2m\text{'e}^2l\text{'i}^2d(id)$. Fr., cyamelide. Ger., Cyamelid, unlösliche Cyansäure. An amorphous, porcelain-like mass, polymeric with cyanic acid, into which it may be converted by great heat. It has no acid properties, is insoluble in water, in alcohol, in ether, and in dilute acids. Soluble in strong sulphuric acid with the aid of heat. [B., 4, 253, 270 (a., 24).]

CYAMELURATE, n. $Si\text{-}a^2m\text{-}e^2l\text{-}u^2\text{'rat}$. A salt of cyameluric acid. [L., 73.]

CYAMELURIC ACID, n. $Si\text{-}a^2m\text{-}e^2l\text{-}u^2\text{'i}^2k$. Fr., acide cyamelurique. Ger., Cyamelürsäure. An acid whose formula, $C_6N_7O_3H_2 = \begin{matrix} OH \\ | \\ (C_6N_6)\text{-}O \\ | \\ N \end{matrix}$ (C₆N₆)—OH (C₆N₆—OH, may be regarded as that of a double molecule of tricyanic (cyanuric) acid, in which 1 atom of nitrogen replaces 3 molecules of hydroxyl. It occurs under the form of white crystals. [B., 4 (a., 24).]

CYAMETHINE, n. $Si\text{-}a^2m\text{-}e^2th\text{-}en$. Fr., cyaméthine. Ger., Cyamethin. A crystallizable organic base, C₆H₅N₃, polymeric with methyl cyanide, homologous with cyanethine, produced by the action of acetyl chloride on potassium cyanate. [B., 2 (a., 24).]

CYAMIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Si(ku^6)\text{-}a^2m(a^2m)\text{'i}^2d\text{-}e(a^3\text{-}e^2)$. Fr., pour de baleine, cyamidées. A family of the Læmodipoda. [L., 275.]

CYAMIUM (Lat.), n. n. $Si(ku^6)\text{-}a(a^3)\text{'mi}^2\text{-}u^3m(u^3m)$. Ger., Hülseknapsel. A legume-like follicle like that of Aquilegia, Helleboreus, etc. [B., 119, 121, 123 (a., 24).]

CYAMOID, adj. $Si^2a^2m\text{-}oid$. From κνίμος, a bean, and είδος, resemblance. Fr., cyamoïde. Ger., bohnenähnlich. Of Fricke, having the odor of the bean in flower. [B., 121 (a., 24).]

CYAMOS (Lat.), CYAMUS (Lat.), n's m. $Si(ku^6)\text{'a}^2m(a^2m)\text{-}o^2s, \text{-}u^3s(u^3s)$. Gr., κνίμος. Fr., cyame. 1. A bean. [A., 322, 325.] 2. See ASELLUS. 3. The nipple. [A., 387.] 4. The testicle. [A., 387.] 5. Of Theophrastus, the genus Nelumbium; of Pliny, the Egyptian bean (supposed to be Nelumbium speciosum). [B., 88, 116, 121 (a., 24).]—C. regypticus. The C. of Pliny.

CYAN (Ger.), n. $Tsu^6\text{-}a^3n'$. See CYANOGEN.—C'cyan. Cyanogen gas. [a., 24.]

CYANACETYL, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{-}a^3s\text{'e}^2t\text{'i}^2l$. See ACETYL isocyanide.

CYANAETHIN (Ger.), n. $Tsu^6\text{-}a^3n\text{-}at\text{-}en'$. See CYANETHINE.

CYANALDEHYDE, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{-}a^2\text{'de}\text{-}hid$. For deriv., see CYANOGEN and ALDEHYDE. A cyanogen substitution compound of acetic aldehyde. Monocyanaldehyde, C₂H₃(CN)O, formed by adding potassium cyanide to an aqueous solution of monochloraldehyde, is the only member of this class known. [B., 2.]

CYANALLYL, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{-}a^2\text{'i}^2l$. A compound, C₃H₅N, prepared by the action of a cyanide on potassium myronate; a neutral, colorless liquid, with an agreeable, alliaceous odor and a burning, aromatic taste, boiling at 116° C. [B., 244 (a., 27).]

CYANAMEISENSÄURE (Ger.), n. $Tsu^6\text{-}a^3n\text{-}a^3m\text{'i}^2ze^2n\text{-}zoi\text{-}r\text{'e}^2$. See CYANFORMIC acid.

CYANAMÉLIDE (Fr.), n. $Se\text{-}a^2n\text{-}a^3\text{'ma}\text{-}led$. See CYAMELIDE.

CYANAMIDE, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{'a}^2m\text{'i}^2d(id)$. Lat., cyanamidum. Fr., c. Ger., Cyanamid. Amide of cyanogen, CN₂H₂=NH₂C≡N, obtained by the action of ether and ammonia on cyanogen chloride. It forms colorless, readily soluble crystals which melt at 40° C. [B., 4 (a., 24).]

CYANAMIL, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{'a}^2m\text{'i}^2l$. Cinnamyl cinnamate. [B.]

CYANAMMON (Ger.), n. $Tsu^6\text{-}a^3n\text{-}a^3m\text{'mon}$. See AMMONIUM cyanide.

CYANANILIDE, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{-}a^2n\text{'i}^2l\text{'i}^2d(id)$. Fr., c. Ger., Cyananilid. An anilide of cyanic acid; aniline in which two atoms of hydrogen are replaced by the acid residue, CNH₂, of cyanic acid. It forms acicular crystals of the composition N(C₆H₅)₂: C:NH=C₆H₅N₂. [B., 4 (a., 24).]

CYANANILINE, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{-}a^2n\text{'i}^2l\text{-}en$. Fr., c. Ger., Cyananilin. A base, (C₇H₇N)₂=H(C₆H₅)₂N₂C—C≡N(C₆H₅)H, forming colorless laminar crystals. [B., 4 (a., 24).]

CYANATE, n. $Si^2a^2n\text{-}at$. Lat., cyanas. Fr., c. Ger., Cyanat, cyansaures Salz. A salt of cyanic acid. [A., 301.]

CYANCARBONIC ACID, n. $Si\text{-}a^2n\text{-}ka^3r\text{-}b\text{-}o^2n\text{'i}^2k$. See CYANFORMIC acid.

CYANDIPHENYL, n. $\text{Si}(\text{a}^2\text{n}-\text{di}-\text{fe}^2\text{n}^{\text{f}})^2$. A cyanogen substitution product. $\text{C}_6\text{H}_5\text{C}_6\text{H}_5$. CN. of diphenyl. It forms hard, colorless crystals, which melt at 84° or 85°C ., and are insoluble in water, but easily soluble in alcohol. [B, 4, 158 (a, 24).]

CYANE (Fr.), n. $\text{Se}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}$. 1. See CYANOGEN. 2. The genus Pneumonanthe. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYANELLA [Linnæus] (Lat.), n. f. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{e}^2\text{f}^2\text{a}^3$. Fr., cyanelle. A genus of liliaceous herbs, referred by Bentham and Hooker to the Hæmodoraceæ, tribe Conanthereæ. [B, 19, 42 (a, 24).]—C. capensis. Fr., cyanelle du cap. A South African species. The root is eaten by the Hottentots. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

CYANESCENT, adj. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{e}^{\text{u}^3\text{s}}\text{e}^2\text{nt}$. Bluish, turning blue. [a, 27.]

CYANETHINE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{e}^2\text{th}^{\text{en}}$. Fr., cyanéthine. Ger., Cyanäthin. A base. $\text{C}_7\text{H}_{16}\text{N}_2 = 3(\text{C}_2\text{H}_5\text{CN})$, a polymeride of ethyl cyanide, forming white foliate crystals discovered by Kolbe and Frankland in 1847. [Walton, "Jour. of Physiol.," iii, 5-6, 1832, p. 349; B, 4 (a, 24).]

CYANETHOLINE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{e}^2\text{th}^{\text{o}}\text{len}$. Ger., Cyanätholin. Of Cloëz, true cyanate of ethyl, as distinguished from the pseudocyanate. [B.]

CYANETUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{e}(\text{a})\text{tu}^3\text{m}(\text{u}^4\text{m})$. See CYANIDE.—C. kalico-ferrosium [Netherl. Ph.]. Potassium ferrocyanide. [B, 95.]

CYANEUS (Lat.), adj. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}(\text{a}^3)\text{ne}^2\text{u}^3\text{s}(\text{u}^4\text{s})$. See CYANEOUS.

CYANEUX (Fr.), adj. $\text{Se}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{u}^3$. See CYANEOUS and CYANIC.

CYANFORMATE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{fo}^2\text{rm}^{\text{at}}$. A salt of cyanformic acid. [B.]

CYANHEMATIN, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{he}^2\text{m}^{\text{a}^2}\text{i}^2\text{n}$. From $\kappa\upsilon\alpha\upsilon\epsilon\omicron\varsigma$, blue, and $\alpha\iota\mu\alpha$, blood. A compound prepared by adding potassic cyanide to an alkaline solution of hæmatin. [A, 27.]

CYANHARNSÄURE (Ger.), n. $\text{Tsu}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{a}^3\text{n}\text{ha}^3\text{r}^{\text{m}}\text{zoi}^{\text{e}^2}$. Cyanuric acid. [A, 324.]

CYANHIDROSIS (Lat.), n. f. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{hi}^2\text{d}\text{ro}^{\text{si}^2\text{s}}$. See CYANEPHROSIS.

CYANHYDRATE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{hi}^2\text{drat}$. See HYDROCYANATE.

CYANHYDRIC, adj. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{hi}^2\text{dri}^2\text{k}$. Lat., cyanhydricus. Fr., cyanhydrique. See HYDROCYANIC.

CYANHYDRIN, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{hi}^2\text{dri}^2\text{n}$. A derivative of one of the higher alcohols in which cyanogen replaces hydroxyl. [B.]

CYANIC, adj. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Lat., cyanicus. Fr., cyanique. Ger., cyanisch. 1. Blue. 2. Containing or pertaining to cyanogen. [a, 24.]—C. acid. Fr., acide cyanique. Ger., Cyansäure. A very volatile colorless liquid, $\text{HCNO} = \text{probably H}-\text{O}-\text{C}\equiv\text{N}$, of acetous odor and caustic properties. It is strongly acid in reaction, and forms a series of salts called cyanates. The isomeric pseudocyanic acid (see CARBOXYLAMIDE) is known only by its derivative, but polymeric forms have been isolated. [B, 4, 158, 270 (a, 24).] See TRICYANIC ACID and CYAMELIDE.—C. ether. Of Wöhler and Liebig, ethyl allophanate. [B, 2.] As now used, a cyanate of a compound radicle, especially ethyl cyanate. The pseudocyanic ethers were originally called c. ethers, their discovery antedating that of the normal cyanic ethers, which are the product of gaseous cyanogen chloride on the sodium alcoholates. [B, 158 (a, 24).]—C. series. Of De Candolle, plants exhibiting some modification of a blue coloration. [B, 104 (a, 24).]

CYANICUS (Lat.), adj. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{i}^2\text{k}\text{u}^3\text{s}(\text{u}^4\text{s})$. Cyanic; with the name of a base, the cyanate of the base. [B.]

CYANIDE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{i}^2\text{d}(\text{id})$. Lat., cyanidum. Fr., cyanure. Ger., Cyanür, Cyanid. It., cianuro. Sp., cianido. A compound of cyanogen with a metal or a compound radicle. The general formula of the c's is $\text{Rn}(\text{C}\equiv\text{N})_n$ (formed from true cyanogen), although others, the isocyanides, have the composition $(\text{C}\equiv\text{N})_n\text{Rn}$, being derived from isocyanogen, Rn in the formula denoting a radicle of the atomity n. The c's, as a class, are active poisons and frequently, from their strong affinity for oxygen, act as powerful reducing agents. [B, 158 (a, 24).]

CYANIDROSIS (Lat.), n. f. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{i}^2\text{d}\text{ro}^{\text{si}^2\text{s}}$. See CYANEPHROSIS.

CYANIDUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{i}^2\text{d}\text{u}^3\text{m}(\text{u}^4\text{m})$. See CYANIDE.—C. hydricum. See HYDROCYANIC ACID.

CYANILIC ACID, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{i}^2\text{f}^2\text{ik}$. See CYANYLIC ACID.

CYANILINE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{i}^2\text{en}$. See CYANANILINE.

CYANINE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{en}$. Fr., c. Ger., Cyanin. A blue dye-stuff which crystallizes in tables of a fine beetle-green lustre, soluble in alcohol. The c's are derived by heating the amyl-iodide compound of the quinoline bases with potash.

CYANITE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{it}$. Lat., cyanis. Fr., c. Ger., Cyanit. 1. A salt of cyanic acid. [A, 301.] 2. A native basic aluminium silicate, $\text{Al}_2\text{O}_3\text{SiO}_3$. [B, 158 (a, 24).]—C. ammonique (Fr.). Urea. [B, 119 (a, 21).]

CYANJODID (Ger.), n. $\text{Tsu}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{yo}^{\text{ded}}$. See CYANOGEN iodide.

CYANMETHINE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{me}^2\text{th}^{\text{en}}$. See CYAMETHINE.

CYANMETHYL (Ger.), n. $\text{Tsu}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{mat}^{\text{u}^6}$. See ACETONITRIL.

CYANO-ANÉMIQUE (Fr.), adj. $\text{Se}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{no}^{\text{a}^2}\text{na}^{\text{me}^2}$. Pertaining to anæmia and cyanosis. [P. Durozier, "Union méd.," Sept. 4, 1888, p. 313.]

CYANOBENZENE, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{o}^{\text{benz}^{\text{en}}}$. See BENZONITRIL.

CYANODERMA (Lat.), CYANODERMIA (Lat.), n's n, and f. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{o}(\text{o}^2)\text{du}^2\text{rm}(\text{de}^2\text{rm})\text{a}^3, \text{i}^2\text{a}^2$. From $\kappa\upsilon\alpha\upsilon\epsilon\omicron\varsigma$, blue, and $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\rho\mu\alpha$, the skin. See CYANOSIS.

CYANOFERRATE (Fr.), n. $\text{Se}^{\text{a}^2}\text{no}^{\text{fe}^2}\text{r}^2\text{ra}^2\text{t}$. See FERROCYNANIDE.

CYANOFERRURETUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{Si}(\text{ku}^6)\text{a}^2\text{n}(\text{a}^3\text{n})\text{o}(\text{o}^2)\text{fe}^2\text{r}^2\text{ru}^2(\text{ru}^4)\text{re}(\text{ra})\text{tu}^3\text{m}(\text{tu}^4\text{m})$. Fr., cyanoferrure. See FERROCYNANIDE.

CYANOFORM, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{o}^{\text{fo}^2}\text{rm}^{\text{f}}$. Fr., cyanoforme. A compound, $\text{CH}(\text{CN})_2$, formed by heating chloroform with cyanide of potassium or of silver and a little alcohol. It forms small white acicular crystals of a disagreeable odor. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CYANOFORMATE (Fr.), n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{o}^{\text{fo}^2}\text{rmat}$. See CYANFORMATE.

CYANOGEN, n. $\text{Si}^{\text{a}^2\text{n}}\text{o}^{\text{je}^2\text{n}}$. Lat., cyanogenium (from $\kappa\upsilon\alpha\upsilon\epsilon\omicron\varsigma$, a bluish color, and $\gamma\epsilon\upsilon\upsilon\alpha$, to engender). Fr., cyanogène. Ger., Cyan. It., cianogeno. Sp., cianógeno. A compound radicle, usually univalent, consisting of an atom of carbon and one of nitrogen united together. Symbol, CN or Cy. In its chemical relations it is analogous to bromine, chlorine, and iodine. There are several isomeric varieties of c. depending upon the mode of connection of the elements: 1. True c., or carbonitrile, $\text{C}\equiv\text{N}$, in which the free bond is attached to the carbon atom; the nitrogen, however, may be a pentad, and then there result trivalent compounds of the formula $-\text{C}\equiv\text{N}-$. 2. Isocyanogen, or carbammonium, $\text{C}\equiv\text{N}-$, in which the free bond is attached to the nitrogen, which is here a pentad. 3. Pseudocyanogen, a trivalent radicle, $=\text{C}=\text{N}-$. In the free state c. consists of a double molecule, C_2N_2 . See C. gas. [B, 4, 158, 270 (a, 24).]—C. bromide. Fr., bromure de cyanogène. Ger., Bromcyan, Cyanbromür. It., bromuro di cianogeno. Sp., bromuro de cianógeno. A compound of c. and bromine, $\text{CNBr} = \text{Br}-\text{C}\equiv\text{N}$, occurring as colorless cubical or acicular volatile crystals, which are very poisonous. [B, 4, 158 (a, 24).]—C. chloride. Fr., chlorure de cyanogène. Ger., flüssiges Chlorcyan, Cyanchlorür. It., cloruro di cianogeno. Sp., cloruro de cianógeno. A compound of c. and chlorine, $\text{CNCl} = \text{Cl}-\text{C}\equiv\text{N}$; a mobile liquid, crystalliz ing at 6° C. and boiling at 15.5° C. Its vapor is acrid and highly poisonous. [B, 4, 158 (a, 24).]—C. gas. Dicyanogen, C₂N₂ = N≡C—C≡N. A colorless inflammable gas, of a peculiar almond odor, obtained by heating mercuric cyanide. It may be condensed into a thin, colorless liquid by exposing it to a pressure of 3.6 atmospheres, at a temperature of 7.20° C. Water dissolves 4 or 5 times its volume of c. gas, and alcohol a still larger quantity. [B, 158 (a, 24).]—C. disulphhydrate. Ger. Rubeinwasserstoff. A union of c. gas with hydrogen sulphide, forming red acicular crystals, C₂N₂ + 2H₂S = $\frac{H}{SH} > N \equiv C - C \equiv N < \frac{H}{SH}$. [B, 4 (a, 24).]—C.

iodide. Fr., iodure de cyanogène. Ger., Jodcyan, Cyanjodid. It., ioduro di cianogeno. Sp., ioduro de cianógeno. A product of the compound of iodine with c., I—C≡N, forming colorless acicular crystals. It sublimes with a strong odor, and is very poisonous. [B, 4 (a, 24).]—C. monosulphhydrate. Ger., Flaveanwasserstoff. A compound of dicyanogen and hydric sulphide, forming yellow crystals, C₂N₂H₂S. [B, 4 (a, 24).]—C. sulphide. Fr., sulfure de cyanogène. Ger., Cyansulfür, Schwefelcyan. It., solfuro di cianogeno. Sp., sulfuro de cianógeno. A compound of dicyanogen and sulphur, obtained in transparent, volatile, rhombic tabular crystals, C₂N₂S. It has a powerful odor, melts at 60° C., and is soluble in ether, in alcohol, and in water. [B, 158 (a, 24).]—Liquid c. chloride. Ger., flüssiges Cyanchlorür. See C. chloride. —Solid c. chloride. Ger., festes Cyanchlorür. See TRICYANOGEN.

CYANOGENYUS (Lat.), adj. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-o²j(o²g)¹2n(u²n)-u²s(u²s). From κύανος, blue, and γενή, a female. Fr., cyanogyne. Ger., blaugriffelig. Having blue pistils. [L, 41.]

CYANOHYDRIC, adj. Si-a²n-o-hid¹r¹k. See HYDROCYANIC.

CYANOIDES (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-o(o²)-i(e)¹dez(das). The genus Centaurea. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYANOIL, n. Si-a²n'o-i²l. Fr., cyanoïle. A volatile oil, C₆H₁₁NO, formed during the fermentation of almond-cake and from fruits containing prussic acid; colorless, with an odor of bitter almonds; pungent and astringent to the taste; insoluble in water. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CYANOL, n. Si-a²n-o²l. Lat., cyanooleum. Fr., cyanole. See ANILINE.

CYANOMELAMINE, n. Si-a²n-o-me²l'a²m-en. An artificial alkaloid, C₁₂H₁₃N₆, formed by the action of cyanogen chloride on melamine. [A, 1.]

CYANONE, n. Si'a²n-on. A compound formed when coal-gas containing carbon disulphide is passed into a solution of mercuric cyanide. [B, 270 (a, 27).]

CYANOPATHY, n. Si-a²n-o²p'a²th-i². Lat., cyanopathia (from κύανος, blue, and πάθος, disease). Fr., cyanopathie. See CYANOSIS.

CYANOPHILOUS, adj. Si-a²n-o²f¹l'u²s. From κύανος, blue, and φιλέω, to love. Fr., cyanophile. Ger., cyanophil. Having an elective affinity for a blue staining agent. [Sahlh., "Ztsch. d. wiss. Mikr.," 1855 (J).]

CYANOPHYCEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-o(o²)-fi²s-(fu⁶k)¹e²(a³e²). Of Sachs, a subclass (of Bessey and Bastin, a class) of the Protophyta (of Bastian and others, a subclass of the Schizophyta), comprising the orders Chroococaceæ and Nostocaceæ, and, according to Bessey, also the Oscillatoriaceæ and Rivulariaceæ. [B, 77, 291 (B).]

CYANOPHYLL, n. Si-a²n'o-fi²l. From κύανος, blue, and φύλλον, a leaf. Fr., cyanophylle. Ger., Cyanophyll. The bluish-green pigment obtained by Frémy and by Kraus by acting on an alcoholic solution of chlorophyll with benzene. [B, 229 (a, 24).]

CYANOPYRA (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-o²p'i²(u⁶)-ra³. From κύανος, blue, and πύρ, fever. Fr., cyanopyre. Ger., Blaufieber. The febrile æræula of Göllis. [A, 322.]

CYANOSE (Fr., Ger.), n. Se-a²-noz, tsu⁶-a²n-o²e². See CYANOSIS.—C. blanche (Fr.). Of J. Simon, a condition of pallor, notwithstanding the admixture of arterial and venous blood due to patency of the foramen ovale. ["Rev. mens. des mal. de l'enfance," Apr., 1888, p. 151 (a, 18).]

CYANOSED, adj. Si'a²n-osd. Fr., cyanosé. Affected with cyanosis. [A, 301.]

CYANOSTIN, n. Si-a²n'o-si²n. See Eosin.

CYANOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-os'i²s. Gen., cyanosios (-is). Gr., κύανωσις. Fr., cyanose, ictère bleu. Ger., Cyanose, Blausucht. It., cianosi, cianopatia, itterizia blu. Sp., cianosis, cianopatia. Syn.: blue jaundice, cyanopathy, hæmatocyanosis, hæmatocyanopathia, kyanosis, morbis (see icterus) cæruleus. 1. A bluish coloration of the skin from defective aeration of the blood, either temporary, as in asphyxia, collapse, etc., or permanent, as in the subjects of some malformation of the heart, especially persistent patency of the foramen ovale. [A, 301.] 2. Of Naumann, lividity of the face from venous plethora. [A, 322.]

CYANOSPERMA (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-o(o²)-spu¹rm-(spe²rm)¹i²a³. From κύανος, blue, and σπέρμα, seed. Fr., cyanospermie. Ger., Cyanospermie. A condition in which the semen has a bluish tinge, apparently due to the presence of indigo. [Ultzmann (A, 326); O. Guelliot, "Ann. des mal. des org. gén.-urin.," May, 1886, p. 294.]

CYANOSULFURE (Fr.), n. Se-a²-no-su¹fu⁶r. See THIOCYANIDE.

CYANOTIC, adj. Si-a²n-o²t'i²k. Lat., cyanoticus. Fr., cyanotique. Ger., cyanotisch. It., cianotico. Sp., cianótico. Pertaining to or of the nature of cyanosis. [D.]

CYANOTIS (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-ot'i²s. Gen., cyanotidos (-is). Fr., cyanotise, cyanotid. Of Don, a genus of the Comnelinaceæ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. axillaris. A plant growing in the East Indies; an infusion is used in tympanites. [a, 22.]

CYANOTOLUDINE, n. Si-a²n-o-to²l'u²-den. An artificial alkaloid, C₁₀H₁₈N₄, formed by the action of cyanogen chloride on toluidine. [A, 1.]

CYANOTOLUENE, n. Si-a²n-o-to²l'u²-en. Ger., Cyanotoluol. Toluonitril, a compound of the formula C₆H₄(CN)CH₃. There are three isomeric modifications: *ortho*c, a colorless liquid with the odor of nitrobenzene, boiling at about 204° C.; *para*c, forming acicular needles which melt at about 28° C.; and *meta*c, not yet obtained in the pure state. [B, 4, 158 (a, 24).]

CYANOTYPE, n. Si-a²n'o-tip. From κύανος, blue, and τύπος, a stamp. A blue print; in photography, a positive made by exposing paper impregnated with ferricyanide of potassium to the action of light under a negative. [L.]

CYANOURIN, n. Si-a²n-u¹r¹i²n. See CYANURIN.

CYANOPYRIDINE, n. Si-a²n-pi²r'i²d-en. Fr., cyanopyridine. Ger., Cyanpyridin. A cyanogen substitution compound of pyridine, C₆H₄(CN)N = C₆H₄N₂. It forms colorless crystals, melting at 48° to 49°. [B, 79.]

CYANSAUER (Ger.), adj. Tsu⁶-a²n'za³-u⁴-e²r. Pertaining to cyanic acid; with the name of a base, the cyanate of the base.—Cyansauers Salz. A cyanate.

CYANSAURE (Ger.), n. Tsu⁶-a²n'zoi¹-e². Cyanic acid. [a, 24.]—Normale C. See CYANIC acid.—Unlösliche C. See CYAMELIDE.

CYANURAMIDE, n. Si-a²n-o²ra²m-i²d(id). Lat., cyanuramidum. Fr., c. An amide derived from cyanuric acid. Three such derivatives are known: ammeline, ammetide, and melamine. The last is the compound usually known as c. [B, 158 (a, 24).]

CYANURATE, n. Si-a²n-u¹r¹at. Fr., c. Ger., cyanursauers Salz. A salt of cyanuric acid. [J, 41 (a, 14).]

CYANURDIAMIC, adj. Si-a²n-u¹r¹-di-a²m'i²2k. Having the nature of a diamide and derived from cyanuric acid. [a, 24.]—C. acid. See AMMELINE.

CYANÜR (Ger.), CYANURE (Fr.), n's. Tsu⁶-a²n-u¹r¹, se-a²n-u¹r. See CYANIDE.—Cyanure ferroso-potassique [Fr. Cod.]. Ferrocyanide of potassium. [B, 113 (a, 21).]

CYANUREA, n. Si-a²n-u¹r¹-e²a³. Fr., cyanurée. Ger., Cyanharnstoff. It., cianurea. Sp., cianúrea. An amorphous, yellowish substance, C₇H₂N₂O = CO.(NH₂)₂(N.H.CN), formed by heating urea with cyanogen iodide. [B, 2.]

CYANURENIC, adj. Si-a²n-u¹-re²n'i²2k. Fr., cyanurénique. See CYANURIC.

CYANURET, n. Si-a²n-u¹-re²t. See CYANIDE.

CYANURETUM (Lat.), n. n. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-u¹(u⁴)-(re)¹-tu²m(tu²m). See CYANIDE.—C. ferri-co-potassium. See POTASSIUM ferrocyanide.—C. ferroso-ferri-cum [Fr. Cod.]. Ferroso-ferric cyanide; ferrocyanide of iron. [B.]—C. ferroso-potassium [Fr. Cod.]. Ferroso-potassic cyanide; ferrocyanide of potassium. [B.]—C. ferroso-quinque [Fr. Cod.]. Hydroferrocyanide of quinine. [B.]—C. hydrargyricum [Fr. Cod.]. Mercuric cyanide. [B.]—C. kalium. C. potassicum. See POTASSIUM cyanide.—C. zincicum [Fr. Cod.]. Zinc cyanide. [B.]

CYANURIC, adj. Si-a²n-u¹r¹i²k. Fr., cyanurique. Ger., cyanursauer. It., cianurico. Sp., cianúrico. Resembling or containing cyanurea. [a, 24.]

CYANURIN, n. Si-a²n-u¹r¹i²n. Lat., cyanurinum. Fr., cyanurine. Ger., Harnblau. A dark-blue coloring matter found occasionally in urine containing indican. [a, 27.]

CYANURMONAMIC, adj. Si-a²n-u¹r¹-mo²n-a²m'i²2k. Having the nature of a monamide, and derived from cyanuric acid. [a, 24.]—C. acid. See AMMELINE.

CYANUS (Lat.), adj. Si(ku⁶)-a²n(a²n)-u²s(u⁴s). Gr., κύανος. Blue; as a n., a section of the genus Centaurea. [B, 42, 121 (a, 24).]—C. ægyptiacus. The Nelumbium speciosum [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. arvensis, C. cærulea, C. major. See CENTAUREA c.—C. nelumbo. The Nymphaea nelumbo. [a, 24.]—C. segetum, C. vulgaris. See CENTAUREA c.—Flores cyani. The flowers of Centaurea cyanus. [B, 180 (a, 21).]

CYANWASSERSTOFFSÄURE (Ger.), n. Tsu⁶-a²n'va³-se²r-sto²f-zoi¹-e². Hydrocyanic acid. [a, 24.]—C. amyloster. See AMYLHYDROCYANIC ether.—C¹ätlier, C. Aethylster. Ethyl cyanide. [B, 48.]

CYANYL, n. Si'a²n-i²l. A colorless, very poisonous liquid, smelling like hydrocyanic acid, obtained by oxidizing aloes with nitric acid. It is heavier than water, in which it is insoluble, and volatilizes at a high temperature without decomposition. [a, 27.]

CYANYLIC ACID, n. Si-a²n-i²l'i²2k. Fr., acide cyanijlique. Ger., Cyanylsäure. Tricyanic acid, obtained by dissolving mellone in boiling nitric acid. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CYAPHENINE, n. Si-a²f'e²n-en. Ger., Cyaphenin. A compound, C₇H₅N, obtained by heating potassium cyanate with benzene chloride. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

CYAR (Lat.), n. n. Si(ku⁶)/a²r. Ger., cy'atos. Gr., κύαρ. Of Hippocrates, the eye of a needle; of Pollux, the internal auditory meatus. [A, 325.]

CYATHAXONIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a²th)-a²x-(a²x)-o²n'i²d-e(a²e²). A family of the Rugosa. [a, 121.]

CYATHÆA (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a²th)-e(a)/a³. Gr., κυτόθειον, a little cup. Fr., cyathée. Of Smith, a genus of arborescent ferns of the Cyatheaceæ. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]—C. affinis [Swartz]. See C. medullaris.—C. angustata [Smith]. The Cystopteris fragilis, var. dentata. [B, 242.]—C. arborea. Syn.: Polyopteris arboreum. A poisonous South American species. The fronds are used as a pectoral, and the root as a demulcent and diuretic. [B, 138 (a, 24); B, 173, 249.]—C. dealbata [Swartz]. A species indigenous to

New Zealand. The pulp of the stem is eaten by the natives. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. elegans. A variety of C. arborea. [B, 138, 249.]—C. excelsa [Swartz]. A species indigenous to the Isle of France. The natives eat the pulp of the stem. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. extensa. See C. medullaris.—C. fragilis. The Cystopteris fragilis. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. grevilleana. See C. arborea.—C. medullaris [Swartz]. The Aspidium furcatum. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. mertensiana. A variety of C. medullaris. [B, 242.]—C. minor. See C. arborea.—C. orientalis. The Cystopteris fragilis. [B, 242.]—C. Rumphii. The C. arborea [B, 88 (a, 24).]—C. Smithii. A plant found in Sumatra, Timor, and Amboina, the woolly masses of which, under the microscope, prove to be composed of long hairy threads, containing no visible air-cells. The cellular tissue is smooth and glistening and has chemically the composition of cork. [Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., xxii (a, 21).]

CYATHEACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-e²-a(a³)-se²(ke³)-e(a³-e²). Fr., cyathéacées. 1. Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Polypodiaceae inclusatae, comprising Alsophila, Chnoophora, Hemitelia, and Cyathea. 2. Of Kunze, an order of the Filices, comprising the Cyatheoideae and Trichonanoideae (of Matton, comprising Cibotium, Balanium, Thyrsopteris, Alsophila, Hemitelia, Cyathea, and Mattonia). 3. Of Endlicher, a suborder of the Polypodiaceae, comprising Thyrsopteris, Hemitelia, Alsophila, Cyathea, and Mattonia. 4. According to others, a class of ferns comprising Cyathea, Eatoniopteris, Disphenia, Schizococena, Fourneia, Hemistegia, Amphidesmium, Trichopteris, Alsophila, Dichorexia, and Lophosoria. [B, 19, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYATHEACEOUS, adj. Si-a²th-e-a³shu²s. Fr., cyathéacé. Resembling the genus Cyathea or belonging to the Cyatheaceae. [a, 24.]

CYATHEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-e(a³)-e(a³-e²). Fr., cyathées. 1. Of Gray, a division of ferns comprising Woodsia, Trichomanes, Hymenophyllum, subsequently a subtribe of the Polypodiaceae, comprising Cyathea, Hemitelia, Alsophila, Woodsia, and Chnoophora. 2. Of Lindley, a class comprising Thyrsopteris, Schizococena, Hemitelia, Cnemidaria, Alsophila, Haplophlebia, Dicranophlebia, Metazyga, Trichopteris, Arachniodes, Gymnosphaera, Cyathea, Schizococena, Disphenia, Cnemidaria, and Mattonia. 3. Of J. Smith, a tribe of the Polypodiaceae, comprising the sections Cyatheae, Gleicheniaceae, Osmundaceae, Marattiaceae, and Ophioglossaceae. [B, 170 (a, 24).] 4. Of Hooker, a tribe of ferns (Polypodiaceae) comprising Thyrsopteris, Cyathea, Hemitelia, Alsophila, Dicalpe, and Mattonia. [B, 249.] Cf. CYATHEACEÆ.

CYATHEINÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-e²(a)-i²n²-e²(a³-e²). See CYATHINÆÆ.

CYATHIDÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-i²d²-e²(a³-e²). Fr., cyathidées. 1. Of Léveillé, a tribe of the Ectoheci, comprising the sections Cyttaria, Pezizei, Argriei, Cenangiei, and Stietei. 2. Of Gray, a division of the Gasteromycetes, consisting of the genus Cyathus. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYATHIFORM, adj. Si-a²th²-i²-fo²rm. See CYATHOID.

CYATHINÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-i(e)²-ne(a³-e²). Of Batsch, an order of the Monopetalae, comprising the Primulariaceae and Anagallidææ. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYATHISCUS (Lat.), CYATHISCUS (Lat.), n's. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-i²sk²(o²s, -u²s)(u⁴s). Gr., κυαθίσκος. Fr., cyathisque. 1. A small cup or glass. 2. The scoop-like extremity of a probe. 3. An aural curette. [A, 322, 325.]

CYATHIUM (Lat.), n. n. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-i²-u²m(u⁴m). A little goblet or cup. [a, 22.]

CYATHOCRINIDÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-o(a³)-kr²i²n²i²d-e(a³-e²). Fr., cyathocrinidées. A family of Crinoidea. [L, 87.]

CYATHOID, adj. Si²a²th-oid. Gr., κυαθώδης (from κυαθος, a cup, and είδος, resemblance). Fr., cyathoïde. Ger., becherförmig. Cup-shaped.

CYATHOIDEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-o(o³)-i²d(ed)²-e²(a³-e²). Fr., cyathoïdées. Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Amphibolocarpeæ, corresponding to the Cyatheoideae of Kunze. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYATHOLITH, n. Si-a²th²-o-li²th. From κυαθος, a cup, and λίθος, a stone. Fr., cyatholithé. Of Huxley, a coccolith having the shape of two cups placed base to base. [A, 301.]

CYATHOPHORUS (Lat.), adj. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-o²f²-o²r-u²s(u⁴s). From κυαθος, a cup, and φορέω, to bear. Fr., cyathophore. Ger., bechertragend. Having cup-like excavations. [L, 41.]

CYATHOS (Lat.), n. m. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-o²s. See CYATHUS.

CYATHOZOÏD, n. Si-a²th-o-zo²oid. From κυαθος, a cup, ζώον, an animal, and είδος, resemblance. Of Huxley, a rudimentary zooid formed from the posterior part of the blastoderm of the Tunicata. From it is given off a stolon on which arise 4 ascidiodozoids, that gradually surround the c., which eventually disappears, its place being occupied by the general cavity of the animal. [L, 11, 201.]

CYATHUS (Lat.), n. m. Si(ku⁶)-a²th(a³th)-u²s(u⁴s). Gr., κυαθος. 1. An ancient measure for liquids and solids. 2. A cup for receiving the blood in venesection. 3. A genus of Fungi, commonly called bird's-nest Peziza. 4. The cup-shaped receptacle of the spores of Marchantia. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CYATOLYTH, n. Si²a²-o-li²th. Ger., C., Doffelscheibe. See CYATHOLITH.

CYBE (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-be(ba). Gen., cyb'es. Gr., κυβη. The head, also any round, hollow object. [A, 325.]

CYBELLION (Fr.), n. Se-be²le-o²n². The Viola odorata. [L, 87, 105.]

CYBISTAX (Lat.), n. Si²b²-i²s²-ta²x. 1. A tumbler; one who turns a somersault. 2. A genus of Bignoniaceae. [B, 19.]—C.

antisymphilitica. A Brazilian species the bark of which is used in syphilis externally and internally. It is also employed in dropsy, dysuria, and liver complaints. The leaves furnish a blue dye. [B, 19, 121, 270 (a, 24).]

CYBITON (Lat.), CYBITOS (Lat.), n's n. and m. Si²b(ku⁶b)-i²t-o²n, -o²s. See CYBITUS.

CYBIUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²b(ku⁶b)-i²-u²m(u⁴m). Gr., κυβίον. A genus of the Scombriidæ (the mackerels). [L, 207.]

CYBOIDES (Lat.), adj. Si²b(ku⁶b)-o(o²)-i(e)²/dez(das). See CYBOID.

CYCADACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-a²d(a²d)-a(a³)²/se²(ke²)-e(a³-e²). For deriv., see CYCAS. Fr., cycadacées. 1. Of Lindley, the Cycadæe of Richard. 2. Of Reichenbach, a family of the Angiopterides, comprising the divisions Ophioglossæ, Zamiæ, and Cycadæe. 3. Of Endlicher, an order of the Zamiæ, comprising Cycas, Encephalartos, Palæozamia, Zamites, Pterophyllum, Nilsonia, Cycaditis, Mantellia, and Hauflia. 4. Of Eichler, a family divided into the tribes Cycadæe and Zamiæ. [B, 19, 34, 121, 170, 279 (a, 24).]

CYCADACEOUS, adj. Si²k-k²-a²-shu²s. Lat., cycadaceus. Fr., cydadacé. Resembling the genus Cycas or belonging to the Cycadaceae. [L, 73.]

CYCADEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-a(a³)²/de²-e(a³-e²). Fr., cycadées. 1. Of Reichenbach, a class of plants (between palms and ferns) comprising Cycas and Zamia. 2. Of R. Brown, an order of monocotyledons, comprising the genera of Reichenbach, and subsequently an order allied to the Coniferae, with the same genera. 3. Of Richard, an order of the Symnorphiceæ, comprising the same genera. 4. Of De Candolle, an order of the Endogeneæ. 5. Of Eichler, a subdivision of the Cycadaceæ, consisting of the genus Cycas. [B, 121, 170, 180 (a, 24).]

CYCADIFORM, adj. Si²k-a²d²-i²-fo²rm. See CYCADACEOUS.

CYCADINÆÆ (Lat.), CYCADINÆÆ (Lat.), n's f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-a²d(a³)-i(e)²-ne(na³-e²), i²n²-e²(a³-e²). Of Engler, a class of gymnosperms, consisting of the Cycadaceæ; of Miquel, the Cycadææ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYCADS, n. pl. Si²k-a²d². The Cycadæe. [B.]

CYCAS [Linnaeus] (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-ka²s(ka²s). Gen., cyc'ados (-is). Fr., c. Ger., Cycade. The fern-palm; the typical genus of the Cycadæe. [B, 19, 42, 121, 275 (a, 24).]—C. caffra [Thunberg]. A species indigenous to South Africa. The root cooked, as well as the medulla of the trunk, is eaten by the Hottentots. The fruit is used as a substitute for coffee. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. circinalis. Fr., c. en crosse. A tree much resembling the cocconut-tree, growing in the East Indies. The fruits cause purging; the kernels are said to produce vomiting. [a, 22.]—C. enroulé (Fr.). See C. revoluta.—C. inermis. Fr., c. inermis. A Tonquin species having the same properties as C. revoluta. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. revoluta. Fr., c. enroulé. A tree found in Japan, and much cultivated as an ornament in Europe, which yields an excellent quality of sago. [B, 245; L, 41 (a, 21).]

CYCEON (Lat.), n. m. Si²s(ku⁶k)-e²-o²n(on). Gen., cyceon/ous (-is). Gr., κυκεών. An ancient dietetic or medicinal drink or pap the basis of which was barley. [A, 318, 322, 387; L, 87, 94 (a, 21).]

CYCIMA, n. An old name for litharge. [Ruland (A, 325).]

CYCLAMEN [Linnaeus] (Lat.), n. n. Si²k(ku⁶k)-la²m(la³m)-e²n. Gen., cyclam'inis. Gr., κυκλάμιον, κυκλάμιον, κυκλάμις. Fr., cy-clame. Ger., Erdbeere. Apple of the earth; a genus of the Primulaceae. [B, 19, 34, 121, 173, 275 (a, 24).]—C. arthanita. See C. europæum.—C. europæum [Linnaeus]. Fr., pain depourcaeu. Ger., Schweinbrod. Sp., artanita [Sp. Ph.], pan de puerco [Sp. Ph.]. Common c.; a species indigenous to southern Europe and naturalized in England. The rhizome—tubera (sen radix cyclaminis (sen cyclaminis officinalis, sen panis porcini)—is blackish externally, white within, has an acid, bitter taste, contains cyclamin, and has laxative and emmenagogue properties. It is official in the Sp. Ph. [B, 95, 97.]—C. hederæfolium. 1. Of Tenore, a European species with cordate, prickly leaves and purple flowers; according to the Sp. Ph., it may be substituted for the C. europæum. [B, 95, 2.] Of Aiton, ivy-leaved c.; a European species with deeply dentate leaves and purple flowers, found growing near old walls and ruins. [B, 64, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—C. officinalis. The C. europæum. [B, 97 (a, 21).]—C. repandum [Sibthorp]. The C. hederæfolium of Tenore. [B, 95.]—Radix cyclaminis, Radix cyclaminis officinalis, Rhizoma cyclaminis arthanita, Tubera cyclaminis. The rhizome of C. europæum. [A, 319.]

CYCLAMIN, n. Si²k²-la²m-i²n. Lat., cyclaminum. Fr., cyclamine. Ger., C. The active principle of the root of Cyclamen europæum; a white, amorphous substance without odor and, when held a short time in the mouth, very acrid. It readily dissolves in cold water, but with difficulty in cold alcohol. According to Klinger, its formula is $C_{20}H_{32}O_{10}$. It is poisonous, and, in a milder way, acts like curare. Mutschler believes it to be identical with saponin. [Tufanov, quoted in "Ctrlbl. f. klin. Med.," Oct. 6, 1888, p. 729; B, 5, 270 (a, 24).]

CYCLAMINON (Lat.), n. n. $Si^2k(ku^k)la^2m(la^2m)l(e)no^2n$. See CYCLAMEN.

CYCLAMINOS (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2k(ku^k)la^2m(la^2m)l(e)no^2s$. 1. Of Dioscorides the genus Cyclamen and the Tamus communis. 2. Probably the Cucubalus baccifer and the Maianthemum bifolium. [B, 116, 121 (a, 24).]

CYCLAMIRRHETIN, n. $Si^2k-la^2m-i^2r-re'ti^2n$. From κυκλάμιρος (see CYCLAMEN), and ρήτιν, resin. A white, amorphous substance, $C_{16}H_{22}O_2$, derived from cyclamin. It is insoluble in water, but soluble in alcohol, and gives, with concentrated sulphuric acid, a violet-red color. [B, 5, 270 (a, 24).]

CYCLAMIS (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2k(ku^k)la^2m(la^2m)l^2s$. Gen., cyclamidos (-is). See CYCLAMEN.

CYCLAMOSE, n. $Si^2k'la^2m-os$. A sugar, $C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$, obtained from the tubers of Cyclamen europæum, which readily reduces Fehling's solution, and is levorotatory. [G. Michaud, "Brit. and Colon. Druggist," May 22, 1886, p. 358.]

CYCLANTHACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Si^2k(ku^k)la^2n(la^2n)tha(thas)^2se^2(ke^2)l(a^2e^2)$. Fr., cyclanthacées. 1. Of Lindley, a tribe of the Pandanaceæ corresponding to the Cyclanthaceæ of Poiteau. 2. Of Bentham and Hooker, an order of monocotyledons corresponding to Lindley's Pandanaceæ. 3. Of Drude, an order of monocotyledons comprising the Cydantheæ and Carludovicææ. [B, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYCLANTHÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Si^2k(ku^k)la^2n(la^2n)the^2e(a^2e^2)$. Fr., cyclanthæes. A group of monocotyledons the relations of which are not well defined. Poiteau, who established the family, places it between the Aroidææ and the Pandanææ, and includes under it the single genus Cyclanthus. Reichenbach (1828) makes it a division of Palmeæ, consisting of Cyclanthus and Carludovicia, which genera are adopted by Dumortier and Bartling. Schott, who classes the C. as an order of the Aroidææ, adds to the genera of Reichenbach Phytelephas. In Jussieu's system the C. are a family of the Spadicifloræ, and in Lindley's, at first, an order of the Pandales, and subsequently a suborder of the Pandanaceæ, comprising Carludovicia, Nipa, Cyclanthus, and Wettinia. Endlicher (1837) makes the C. not a distinct order, but a family of the Pandanææ, comprising Cyclanthus, Carludovicia, and Wettinia, which genera are adopted by Brongniart (who makes the C., however, a family of the Pandanoidææ). Reichenbach (1841), Spach, and most other authors—though Bentham and Hooker and Drude class the C. as a tribe of the Cyclanthaceæ—retain only the genus Cyclanthus. [B, 42, 121, 170, 245 (a, 24).]

CYCLANTHEREÆ (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2k(ku^k)la^2n(la^2n)the(thas)^2re^2e(a^2e^2)$. Of Schrader, a tribe of the Cucurbitaceæ, consisting of Cyclanthera; of Endlicher, a division of the Cucurbitææ, with the same genus and Discanthera; of Reichenbach, a subsection of the Zygantherææ; of Römer, a tribe of the Cucurbitææ, with the same genera. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYCLE, n. Sik^1 . Gr., κύκλος. Lat., cyclus. Fr., c. Ger., Cyclus. It., Sp., ciclo. 1. A period of time in which a certain series of events or acts is completed, especially if repeated again and again. 2. The imaginary spiral described by leaves round the stem to make one complete turn (i. e., to reach a leaf which stands directly above the first). 3. A course of diet and exercise arranged in a definite manner, for a certain end. 4. See CYCLUS. [B, 201 (a, 24); L, 41.]—Cardiac c. Fr., c. cardiaque. The series of the normal auscultatory phenomena proceeding from the heart and caused by one contraction of that organ. It embraces the period comprised between the commencement of one contraction and the commencement of the contraction immediately following it, and is divided into 4 parts, viz.: 1, the first sound; 2, the first silence or pause; 3, the second sound; 4, the second silence or pause. The entire average duration of the c. has been given as 1'058 second, but this is manifestly too great for all hearts that beat 60 or more times a minute. [Bramwell (a, 18).]—C. cardiaco-vasculaire (Fr.). The circuit made by the blood in its passage through the organism. [L, 88.]—C. défini (Fr.). In pathology, the period of evolution of a disease having a fixed and regular course, in which the symptoms generally succeed each other in the same order, and of which the duration can be predicted approximately. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—C. fébrile (Fr.). The period of the duration of fever in diseases. [a, 18.]—C. foliaire (Fr.), C. folial (Fr.). See CYCLE (2d def.).—C. métabasique (Fr.), C. récorporatif (Fr.). See CYCLUS metasyneriticus.—C. résumptif (Fr.). See CYCLUS resumptivus.

CYCLEA (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2k(ku^k)le^2a^2$. Of Arnott, a genus of menispermaceous plants. [B, 245.]—C. Burmanni [Miers]. A species employed in India as a bitter tonic. The root is used in fevers and liver complaints, and in Malabar it is employed in dysentery and hæmorrhoids. [B, 121, 245 (a, 24).]—C. peltata. A species having similar properties to those of C. Burmanni. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYCLEAL, n. $Si^2k'le^2a^2l$. Fr., cycléal. See CYCLOVERTEBRAL.

CYCLEENCEPHALIA (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2k(ku^k)le^2n(le^2n)^2se^2f(ke^2f)l(a^2a^3)l^2a^2$. See CYCLOCEPHALIA.

CYCLEENCEPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. $Si^2k(ku^k)le^2n(le^2n)^2se^2f(ke^2f)l(a^2a^3)l^2u^3s(u^4s)$. See CYCLOCEPHALUS.

CYCLESIS (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2k(ku^k)le(la)si^2s$. Gen., cycles' eos (-is). Gr., κύκλισις. See CIRCULATION.

CYCLIC, adj. $Si^2k'li^2k$. Gr., κυκλικός. Lat., cyclicus. Fr., cyclique. Ger., cyklisch, kreisförmig. 1. Arranged in whorls (said of flowers). [B, 291 (a, 24).] 2. See CYCLICAL.

CYCLICA [Latreille] (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Si^2k(ku^k)li^2k-a^2$. A division of the Phytophaga. [L, 121.]

CYCLICAL, adj. $Si^2k'li^2k-a^2l$. Gr., κυκλικός. Lat., cyclicus. Fr., cyclique. Ger., cyklisch. 1. Recurring at regular periods. 2. Arranged in concentric circles. 3. Rolled in the form of a circle or of a series of circles. [B, 19 (a, 24); L, 121.]

CYCLICOTOMY, n. $Si^2k-li^2k-o^2t'o-mi^2$. From κυκλικός, circular, and τέμνειν, to cut. An incision into, or division of, the ciliary body, done for the purpose of relieving increased tension; devised by Hancock for the cure of glaucoma, and called by him intraocular myotomy. [F.]

CYCLISCUS (Lat.), CYCLISMUS (Lat.), n's m. $Si^2k(ku^k)li^2s(ku^4s)(ku^4s)$, $-mu^3s(mu^4s)$. Gr., κύκλισκος (dim. of κύκλος, a circle). Fr., cyclisme. 1. A troche. 2. A small circular knife, or some similar instrument, used in the treatment of fracture of the skull. [A, 322; Galen (A, 325); L, 94 (a, 21).]

CYCLITIS (Lat.), n. f. $Sik(ku^k)li^2le^2tis$. Gen., cyclit'idios (-is). From κύκλος, a circle (see also -itis). Inflammation of the ciliary muscle.—C. minima. A slight form of c. [Boucheron, cited in "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Mar. 17, 1888, p. 305.]—C. plastica. Inflammation of the ciliary body with an effusion of plastic lymph, uniting the surfaces of the iris, ciliary processes, and sometimes the suspensory ligament to each other, and sometimes involving the iris to such an extent as to cause posterior synechia and occlusion of the pupil. [F.]—C. purulenta. Inflammation of the ciliary body with an effusion of pus which may cause a hypopyon. [F.]—C. serosa. Inflammation of the ciliary body, in which the effusion is almost entirely serous, causing increased tension and a haziness of the vitreous and occasionally of the aqueous humor. [F.]—C. vasomotoria. A form of inflammation of the ciliary body described by Samelsohn, and referred by him to some lesion of the sympathetic nervous system. The tension may be either increased or diminished. There is pain on the corresponding side of the head, marked ciliary neuralgia and injection, and sometimes a herpetic eruption on one side of the face. [F.]

CYCLOBRANCHIATE, adj. $Si^2k-lo-bra^2n^2k-l^2a^2t$. Lat., cyclobranchius, cyclobranchiatus (from κύκλος, a circle, and βράχια, the gills). Fr., cyclobranche. Having the branchiæ surrounding the body, belonging to the Cyclobranchiata, or Cyclobranchia (a family of the Gasteropoda so characterized). [L, 180, 296.]

CYCLOCAUTERIUM (Lat.), n. n. $Si^2k(ku^k)lo(lo^2)ka^2(ka^2u^4)te(ta)^2ri^2u^3m(u^4m)$. From κύκλος, a circle, and καυτήριον, a cautery-iron. A ring-shaped cautery-iron. [A, 322.]

CYCLOCEPHALIA (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2k(ku^k)lo(lo^2)se^2f(ke^2f)l(a^2a^3)l^2a^2$. From κύκλος, a circle, and κεφαλή, the head. Fr., cyclocephalie. Ger., Cyclocephalie. The form of monstrosity described under CYCLOCEPHALUS.

CYCLOCEPHALIENS (Fr.), n. pl. $Se-klo-sa-fa^2le-a^2n^2$. A family of monsters including ethmocephalus, cebocephalus, rhinocephalus, cyclocephalus, and stomocephalus. [I. Geoffroy St.-Hilaire (A, 301).]

CYCLOCEPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. $Si^2k(ku^k)lo(lo^2)se^2f(ke^2f)l(a^2a^3)l^2u^3s(u^4s)$. Fr., cyclocephale. A monster having two contiguous eyes or a double eye in the median line and an atrophied nose. [I. Geoffroy St.-Hilaire (A, 301).]

CYCLOCERA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Si^2k(ku^k)lo^2s(lo^2k)l^2e^2r-a^2$. From κύκλος, a circle, and κέρας, a horn. A tribe of the Brachycera. [L, 121.]

CYCLOCÆLUS [Ehrenberg] (Lat.), adj. $Sik(ku^k)lo(lo^2)se^2l(ke^2f)l(a^2a^3)l^2u^3s(u^4s)$. From κύκλος, a circle, and κοιλία, the belly. Fr., cyclocèle. Having the alimentary canal circular, so that the oral and anal apertures are united (said of Infusoria). [L, 180.]

CYCLODIÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Si^2k(ku^k)lod-l(i^2)l^2e^2e(a^2e^2)$. Fr., cyclodiées. Of Fée, a tribe of the Cathetograteæ, comprising Polystichum, Phanerophlebia, Hemicardium, Amblia, Cyrodium, Cyrtomium, Podopeltis, and Bathmum. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYCLOGANGLIATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Si^2k(ku^k)lo(lo^2)ga^2n^2(ga^2n^2)gli^2a(a^3)ta^2$. From κύκλος, a circle, and γάγγλιον (see GANGLION). Of Grant, animals in which one portion of the nervous system is disposed around some portion of the alimentary canal (usually the œsophagus) and the remainder of the ganglia and cords in different parts of the body (e. g., the Tunicata). [L.]

CYCLOGASTER (Lat.), adj. $Si^2k(ku^k)lo(lo^2)gast(ga^2st)ur(ar)$. From κύκλος, a circle, and γαστήρ the belly. Fr., cyclogastre. Ger., kreisbauchig. Sp., ciclogastro. Having the abdominal fins united into a disc. [L, 180.]

CYCLOGEN, n. $Si^2k'lo-je^2n$. From κύκλος, a circle, and γεννάν, to engender. In botany, an exogen, a plant showing concentric rings in its stem. [B, 77 (a, 24).]

CYCLOID, adj. $Sik'loid$. Gr., κυκλοειδής (from κύκλος, a circle, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., cycloïdique. Ger., kreisbühig. 1.

The transcendental curve described by a point in the circumference of a circle rolling in a straight line on a plane. The c. is used in investigating the laws of the pendulum and the fall of heavy bodies. [A, 27.] 2. In ichthyology, a circular or elliptical figure with a more or less completely smooth outline (said of scales). [L, 147.]

CYCLOIDEI [Agassiz] (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-i²d-(e)y²e²(-e). Fr., cycloïdes. The cycloids; a family of fishes having cycloid scales. [L, 147.]

CYCLOLABRIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-la²b(la³b)-ri²d-e(a³-e²). A family of the Phagryngognathi. [L, 14.]

CYCLOLOBEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-lob(lo²b)-e²e(a³-e²). From κύκλος, a circle, and λόβος, a lobe. Fr., cyclolobées. 1. Of Meyer, a suborder of the Chenopodeæ, comprising the tribes Chenopodiæ, Salicorniæ, and Atripliciæ. 2. Of Moquin, a tribe of the same order, comprising the Anserinæ and Salicorniæ. 3. Of Meissner, a suborder of the Chenopodiaceæ, comprising the same tribes as Meyer's. 4. Of others, a suborder of the Chenopodiaceæ, comprising the tribes Salicorniæ, Spinaciæ, and Chenopodiæ. 5. Of Bentham and Hooker, a series of the suborder Camporoseæ, comprising the tribes Euchenopodiæ, Atripliciæ, Camporosomæ, Corispermæ, Polycnemæ, Chenoleæ, and Salicorniæ. [B, 42, 170 (a, 24).]

CYCLOMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²ma². Gen., cyclomatos (-is). Gr., κύκλωμα. Anything that is circular or circulated (e. g., the blood, or some substance contained in it). [A, 322.]

CYCLOMIDES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²m²i²d-ez(e²s). A subfamily of the Curculionidæ. [L, 262.]

CYCLOMYARIA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo²)-mi(mu⁶)-a(a³)ri²-a³. From κύκλος, a circle, and μυρία, a fly. An order or suborder of the Thaliacea. [L, 121, 353.]

CYCLONEURA [Eimer] (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-nu²ra². 1. Animals in which the arrangement of the nervous system is cycloneurous. 2. A division of the Hydrozoa. [L, 121.]

CYCLONEUROSE, CYCLONEUROUS, adj^s. Si²k-lo-nu²ra²os, -us. Lat., cycloneurus (from κύκλος, a circle, and νεῦρον, a nerve). Having the nervous system arranged in a circle, as in certain Medusæ, where there is a nervous cord surrounding the oral aperture, from which branches proceed to other portions of the body. [L.]

CYCLONOTUS (Lat.), adj. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo²)-not(u³s(u⁴s)). From κύκλος, a circle, and νότος, the back. Fr., cyclonote. Ger., kreisrückenartig. Marked on the back with a colored circle. [L, 41.]

CYCLOPANOPTHALMIA, n. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²p(lop)-a²n-(a²n)-o²f-tha²(tha²)mi²a². From κύκλωψ, round-eyes, a priv., and ὀφθαλμός, the eye. Fr., cyclopanophtalmie. Ger., Cyclopanophtalmie. Cyclopia, with one orbit and perfect or imperfect eyelids, without an eyeball. [A, 322.]

CYCLOPE (Fr.), adj. Se-klop. See CYCLOPS.

CYCLOPHORIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-fo²r²i²d-e(a³-e²). From κύκλος, a circle, and φορέω, to bear. Fr., cyclophoridées. A family of the Platypoda. [L, 282.]

CYCLOPHYLLA [Van Beneden] (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo²)-fi²(fu¹)y¹la³. Fr., cyclophyllées. See TENIADÆ.

CYCLOPIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lop²i²-a³. From κύκλωπιος, round-eyed. Fr., cyclopie. Ger., Cyklopie, Einäugigkeit (1st def.). 1. That defect of development, or monstrosity, in which there is apparently but one eye, though minute investigation generally reveals the presence of the second eye, at least in part. The cyclopic eye is usually in the lower middle part of the forehead. The formation of the interpalpebral aperture, which is of a rhomboidal form, indicates at least the rudimentary presence of four eyelids. [F: Hannover, "Dublin Jour. of Med. Sci.," May, 1888; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Oct. 13, 1888, p. 415.] 2. A genus of leguminous shrubs. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]—C. brachypoda. A South African species, constituting one source of the so-called bush-tea of the Cape. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C. genistoides. A South African species. An infusion and a decoction of the leaves, called bush-tea, is used in pulmonary complaints. It contains a glucoside cyclopin (though more abundant in the other species) but no theine. [B, 5, 19, 270 (a, 24).]—C. latifolia. A species which furnishes bush-tea, from the leaves of which cyclopin has been more abundantly obtained. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—C. longifolia. Ger., Honigthee. A species the stalks and leaves of which (with occasionally some of the flowers), bound together, occur in commerce. They constitute a pleasantly aromatic, slightly bitter and astringent drug. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxix (a, 21).]—C. Vogelii. An African species, used in the preparation of bush-tea. It contains cyclopic acid. [B, 2.]

CYCLOPIC, adj. Si-klo²p²i²k. Gr., κυκλωπικός. Lat., cyclopicus. Fr., cyclopieque. Ger., cyklopisch. 1. Pertaining to or resembling a cyclops. 2. Derived from a plant of the genus Cyclopia.—C. acid. Fr., acide cyclopieque. An acid, C₇H₆O₄, obtained from Cyclopia Vogelii. [B, 2; L, 87.]

CYCLOPIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²p(lop)²i²d-e(a³-e²). Fr., cyclopidées. A family of the Copepoda. [L, 240.]

CYCLOPIEN (Fr.), n. Se-klo-pe-a²n². See CYCLOPS.

CYCLOPIGÈNE (Fr.), adj. Se-klo-pe-zhan. From κύκλωψ (see CYCLOPS), and γεννάν, to engender. Laying eggs from which the larvæ emerge in the condition of a cyclops. [A, 385.]

CYCLOPIN, n. Si²k-lo²-pi²n. A glucoside, C₂₅H₂₆O₁₈ + H₂O, obtained by Greenish from the leaves of Cyclopia latifolia. [B, 270 (a, 24).]

CYCLOPIO-FLUORESCIN, n. Si²k-lo²-pi²-o-flu²-o²r²-e²s²i²n. A fluorescent hydrocarbon found, together with cyclopin, in the leaves of Cyclopia latifolia. [B, 270 (a, 27).]

CYCLOPION (Lat.), n. n. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lop²i²-o²n. Gr., κυκλωπίων. The white of the eye. [Aristotle (A, 325).]

CYCLOPLEGIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-ple(pla²y²)i²(gi²)-a³. From κύκλος, a circle (hence the ciliary muscle), and πληγή, a stroke. Fr., cycloplégie. Ger., Cykloplegie. Paralysis of the ciliary muscle. [F: "Lancet," Nov. 6, 1886, p. 861.]

CYCLOPODI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²p²-o²d-i(-e). From κύκλος, a circle, and πούς, the foot. See CYCLOPTERIDÆ.

CYCLOPS (Lat.), adj. Si(ku⁶)klo²ps(klops). Gen., cyclops (-is). Gr., κύκλωψ (from κύκλος, a circle, and ὤψ, the eye). Round-eyed, one-eyed; as a n., a monster having but one eye, placed in the middle of the forehead. [L, 109.] Cf. CYCLOPIA (1st def.).—C. megalostomus arrhynus. A unioocular monster without nasal cavities or passages. ["Am. Vet. Rev.," Aug., 1889, p. 228 (L).]

CYCLOPTERIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²p²-te²r²i²d-e(a³-e²). A family of the Physostomi. [L, 303.]

CYCLOPTERINA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²p²-te²r²-i(-e)²na³. A group of the Discoboli. [L, 280.]

CYCLOPTEROUS, adj. Si²k-lo²p²-te²r²-u³s. Lat., cyclopterus (from κύκλος, a circle, and πτερόν, a wing or fin). Fr., cycloptère. Ger., kreisflügelig. 1. Having fruit with lateral orbicular alæ. [a, 24.] 2. Having circular wings or fins. [A, 322.]

CYCLORCHIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²r²ch(lo²r²ch²)-i²d-e(a³-e²). A family of the Cubostomi. [L, 121.]

CYCLORRHAPHA [Brauer] (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²ra²-ra³-fa². From κύκλος, a circle, and ράφη, a seam. A division of the Diptera in which the larval skin opens in the last moult in a curved line on the back. [L, 121.]

CYCLORRHAPHOUS, adj. Si²k-lo²ra²-a²-u³s. Pertaining to or resembling the Cyclorrhapha. [L, 121.]

CYCLOS (Lat.), n. m. Si²k(ku⁶k)y¹lo²s. Gr., κύκλος. See CIRCLE and CYCLE.

CYCLOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²k(ku⁶k)-los²i²s. Gen., cyclosis (-is). Gr., κύκλωσις. Fr., cyclose. 1. An encircling, also the state of being encircled. 2. A circulation; of Schultz, the intercellular, as distinguished from the general, circulation in plants. [A, 322; B, 19, 77, 121 (a, 24).]

CYCLOSPONDYLIE (Fr.), n. Se-klo-spo²n²-de-le. From κύκλος, a circle, and σπόνδυλος, a vertebra. The state in which a ring-shaped bony layer takes part in the formation of the body of a vertebra, as in certain chondropterygians. [A, 385.]

CYCLOSTEGIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo²)-ste(sta)²(gi²)-a³. A genus of the Satureiæ. [L, 24.]—C. strobilifera. An East Indian species, with strong aromatic properties used as a carminative. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CYCLOSTOMATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²s-to²m²a²t-(a²)t-a³. 1. A tribe or suborder of the Gymnoæmata. [L, 353.] 2. See MARSIPOBRANCHII.

CYCLOSTOMATOUS, adj. Si²k-lo²sto²m²a²t-u³s. Lat., cyclostomus (from κύκλος, circle, and στόμα, the mouth). Fr., cyclostome. Ger., rundmündig. Having a circular mouth. [A, 322.]

CYCLOSTOMI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²st²-o²m²-i(-e). See MARSIPOBRANCHII.

CYCLOSTOMIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²s-to²m²i²d-e(a³-e²). A family of the Tenioglossa. [L, 353.]

CYCLOSTOMOUS, adj. Si²k-lo²st²-o²m²-u³s. See CYCLOSTOMATOUS.

CYCLOSYPHILIDOCHTHUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-si²(su⁴f)-i²l-i²d-o²ch²(o²ch²)(thu³s)(thu⁴s). From κύκλος, a circle, siphilis (q. v.), and ὄχθος, a hard elevation. Fr., c. kreisförmiges Knotensyphilid. A circular syphilitic node. [A, 322.]

CYCLOSYSTEM, n. Si²k-lo-si²-s²-te²m. Of Moseley, the arrangement of a number of dactyozooids arranged in a circular manner around a central gastrozoid. [L, 121.]

CYCLOTHYRIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-thi²r-(thu⁶r)²i²d-e(a³-e²). See TERABRATULIDÆ.

CYCLOTHYMIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo(lo³)-thim(thu⁶m)-i²-a³. From κύκλος, a circle, and θυμός, the mind. Circular insanity. [D, 36.]

CYCLOTINA (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²k(ku⁶k)-lo²t-i(-e)-na³. A subfamily of the Cyclophoridae. [L, 282.]

CYMBIFORM, adj. Si²m'be-fo²rm. See CYMBIFORM.

CYMBALARIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²m(ku⁶m)-ba²l(ba³l)-a(a²)/ri²-a³. Fr., cymbalaire. A section of the genus Linaria. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—C. elatine. The Linaria elatine. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. muralis. The Linaria c. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. spuria. The Linaria spuria. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—Herba cymbalarie. The Linaria c. (the whole plant). [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CYMBALARIS (Lat.), adj. Si²m(ku⁶m)-ba²l(ba³l)-a(a³)/ri²s. See ARYTENOID.

CYMBALION (Lat.), n. n. Si²m(ku⁶m)-ba(ba³)/li²-o²n. Gr., κύμβαλον. Of Dioscorides, according to Dalechamps, either the Cotyledon umbilicus or the Saxifraga cotyledon. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYMBALOID, adj. Si²m'ba²l-oid. Lat., cymbaloides (from κύμβαλον, a cymbal, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., cymbaloïde. Ger., zimbälähnlich. Resembling a cymbal. [L, 41.]

CYMBARIEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²m(ku⁶m)-ba²r(ba³r)-i(i²)/e²-e(a²-e²). Of D. Don, a section (of G. Don, a tribe) of the Rhinanthaceæ consisting of the genus Cymbaria. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CYMBECEPHALIC, adj. Si²m-be²-se²f-a²l'i²k. See CYMBOLIC.

CYMBELBLUME (Ger.), n. Tsu⁶m'be²l-blum-e². The Epiclaclis latifolia. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CYMBELLÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²m(ku⁶m)-be²l'le(a²-e²). From κύμβα, a boat. Elliptical reproductive locomotive bodies found in some algae. [B, 19.]

CYMBELLEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²m(ku⁶m)-be²l'le²-e(a²-e²). 1. Of Agardh, a division of the Diatomaceæ, consisting of Cymbella, Schizonema, Micromyces, Berkeleya, Homocladia, Gloiodyctyon, Hydrurus, Gloionema, and Gomphonema. 2. Of Harvey, a tribe of the Diatomaceæ, consisting (in 1838) of Gomphonema, Micromyces, and Schizonema, and subsequently (in 1841) of Gomphonema, Homocladia, Berkeleya, Schizonema, and Cymbella. These classifications have been rejected by modern mycologists. Kützinger divides the c. into four genera: Cymbella, Cocconeia, Synocycla, and Eucyponema. Rabenhorst adds Ceratoneis and Amphora. H. L. Smith in a recent classification makes it a family of Rhaphidieæ. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24); B, 275.]

CYMBICARPUS (Lat.), adj. Si²m(ku⁶m)-bi²-ka³rp'u³s(u⁴s). From κύμβα, a boat, and καρπός, a fruit. Fr., cymbicarpe. Ger., kahnfruchtig. Having boat-shaped fruits. [L, 180.]

CYMBIDIEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²m(ku⁶m)-bi²d-i(i²)/e²-e(a²-e²). Of Benthams and Hooker, a subtribe of the Vandeeæ, order Orchidaceæ. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

CYMBIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²m(ku⁶m)-bi²d'i²-u³m(u⁴m). Fr., cymbidie. Ger., Kahnblippe. Of Swartz, a genus of orchids, referred by Benthams and Hooker to the Vandeeæ. [B, 42 (a, 24).]—C. scriptum. The Vanda scripta. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. tesselloides. See AERIDES tessellatum.

CYMBIFOLIUS (Lat.), adj. Si²m(ku⁶m)-bi²-fol(fo²l)/i²-u³s(u⁴s). From cymba, a boat, and folium, a leaf. Fr., cymbifolié. Ger., kahnblättrig. Having boat-shaped leaves. [L, 180.]

CYMBIFORM, adj. Si²m'bi²-fo²rm. Lat., cymbiformis (from cymba, a boat, and forma, form). Fr., cymbiforme. Ger., kahnformig. See SCAPHOID bone.

CYMOCEPHALIC, CYMOCEPHALOUS, adj's. Si²m-bo-se²f-a²l'i²k, -se²f-a²l'u³s. From κύμβα, a boat, and κεφαλή, the head. Fr., cymocéphalique. Ger., kahnshädelig. Having the vault of the skull shaped like a skiff or boat. [L, 149, 150.]

CYMOCEPHALY, n. Si²m-bo-se²f-a²l'i². Fr., cymocéphalie. The condition of being cymoccephalous. [L, 149.]

CYMOÏDE (Fr.), adj. Sa²n²-bo-ed. From κύμβα, a boat, and εἶδος, resemblance. See SCAPHOID.

CYMOPOGON (Lat.), n. m. Si²m(ku⁶m)-bo(bo³)-pog'o²n(on)-Gen., cymbopogon/os (-is). From κύμβα, a cup, and πάγων, the beard. Of Sprengel, a section of the genus Andropogon. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYMBULADÆ [Gray] (Lat.), CYMBULIDÆ [Contraire] (Lat.), CYMBULIIDÆ (Lat.), n's f. pl. Si²m(ku⁶m)-bu²l(bu³l)-i(i²)/a²d(a³d)-e(a²-e²), -bu²l(bu³l)/i²d-e(a²-e²), -bu²l(bu³l)-i(i²), -i²d-e(a²-e²). Fr., cymbulidées. A family of the Thecosomata. [L, 121, 234.]

CYME, n. Sim. Gr., κύμα. Lat., cyma. Fr., c. Ger., Trugdolde, Scheindolde, Afterdolde, Afterschirm. In general, any loose flower-cluster on the determinate or cenrifugal plan; more properly, that level-topped, or fastigate, form of centrifugal inflorescence which resembles the corymb, as in the elder. [B, 1, 19, 34, 121, 123, 291 (a, 24).]—Biparous c. Fr., c. bipare. A c. in which the primary axis, ending in a single flower, produces at its base two leaves or bracts from which arise secondary axes, which, also ending in single flowers, produce at their bases each two bracts from which arise tertiary axes, and so on. [B, 77, 104, 121 (a, 24).]—Bostrychoïd c. Fr., c. bostrychoïde. Ger., lockenförmige Trugdolde. See Helicoid c.—Cicinnal c. Ger., kreiselnnde Trugdolde. See Scorpioid c.—Circinate c. See Helicoid c.—Contracted c. Fr., c. contractée. Ger., zusammengezogene Trugdolde. See FASCICLE.—Compound c. Fr., c. composée. Ger., zusammengesetzte Trugdolde. A diffuse and freely branching c. [B, 291 (a, 24).]—Dichastal c., Dichotomous c., Forked c. Fr., c. dichotome. Ger., wiederholt-gabelästige Trugdolde. See Biparous c.—Globous c. Fr., c. globeuse. Ger., kugelförmige Trugdolde. A rounded c., like that of the snow-ball. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—Helicoid c. A uniparous curling c. in which all the branches are suppressed on one side of the primary axis. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Panicled c. Fr., c. paniculé. Ger., rispige Trugdolde. A compound of loosely spreading c., as in Staphylea triloba. [a, 24].—Polytomous c. See Trichotomous c.—Scorpioid c. Fr., c. scorpioïde. Ger., skorpionartige Trugdolde. A uniparous c. having the flowers pedicelled and arranged along a lengthened axis and curving on itself like a scorpion's tail, as in the Hyoscyamus niger. [B, 34, 77, 121, 291 (a, 24).]—Spiked c. Lat., cyma spicata. Fr., c. spiciforme. Ger., ährige Trugdolde. A mixed inflorescence partaking of both forms, c. and spike, the branches bearing sessile flowers. [a, 24.]—Trichotomous c., Triparous c. Fr., c. trichotome. Ger., wiederholtdreitheilige Trugdolde. A c. in which more than two lateral axes are produced from the primary floral axis. [B, 77, 121 (a, 24).]—Uniparous c. A c. in which the lateral branches are more or less suppressed on one side or on both sides alternately. It includes the helicoid and scorpioid c's. [B, 75.]

CYMECHOS (Lat.), n. m. Si²m(ku⁶m)-e(a)/ko²s(ch²o²s). From κύμα, a wave, and ἦχος, a sound. Ger., Schüttgeräusch, Wellengeräusch. A wave-like sound. [A, 322.]

CYMENE, n. Si'men. Fr., cymène. Ger., Cymol, Cymen. A colorless, oily liquid having an odor somewhat like that of lemons, derived from various volatile vegetable oils, such as that found in the seeds of Cuminum cyminum. In chemical constitution, it is paraprolylmethylbenzene—i. e. benzene in which two hydrogen atoms at opposite points of the closed carbon chain are replaced by propyl and methyl, C₆H₄CH₂.H.H.C₃H₇, H=C₁₀H₁₄. It is isomeric with diethylbenzene, metacymene, isocymene, ethyldimethylbenzene, and isoamylbenzene. [B.]

CYMNOL, n. Si'me²n-o²l. See CYRACROL.

CYMENYL, n. Si'me²n-i²l. Fr., cyményle. Ger., Cymenyl. The univalent radicle, C₁₀H₁₃, found in cymene. [B, 2.]

CYMEUX (Fr.), adj. Se-inu⁶. See CYMOSE.

CYMIC, adj. Si'mi²k. Fr., cymique. Of or pertaining to cymene. [B.]—C. acid. Fr., acide cymique. Ger., Cyminsäure. A monatomic aromatic acid, C₁₁H₁₁O₂, formed by the action of alkalis on cymyl cyanide. [a, 21.]

CYMYDE [Löwig], n. Si'mi²d(mid). Fr., cymyde. Ger., Cymid. See CYMYL.

CYMYDINE, n. Si'mi²d-en. Fr., c. Ger., Cymidin. A homologue of toluidine, C₁₀H₁₆N=C₁₀H₁₃(NH₂). [B, 158 (a, 24).]

CYMYNE, n. Si'men. Lat., cymina, cyminum. See CYMESE.

CYMYNIC, adj. Si-mi²n'i²k. Fr., cyminique. See CUMINIC.

CYMYNUM (Lat.), n. n. Si(ku⁶)-mi(me)/nu³m(nu⁴m). See CUMINUM.—Emplastrum cymino. See Emplastrum CUMINL.—Semen cymini. Cumin-seed. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CYMLING, n. Si²m'li²n²g. A popular name for a variety of the Cucurbita melopepo. [B, 77 (a, 24).]

CYMO-BOTRYOSE, adj. Sim'o-bo²t'ri²-os. Having the characters of a cymobotryas.

CYMOBOTRYAS (Lat.), n. m. Sim(ku⁶m)-o(o³)-bo²t'ri²s(ru⁴s). From κύμα, a cyme, and βότρυς, a cluster of grapes. Of Guillard, a compound indefinite cymose inflorescence. [B, 104 (a, 24).]

CYMODOCEADÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Sim(ku⁶m)-o(o³)-dos(do²k)-e(a)/a²d(a³d)-e(a²-e²). See CYMOCODÆ.

CYMODOCEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Sim(ku⁶m)-o(o³)-dos(do²k)/e²-e(a²-e²). Of Benthams and Hooker, a tribe of the Naiadaceæ, of Ascherson, a tribe of the Potamogetonaceæ, comprising Cymodoceæ and Halodule. [B, 42 (a, 24); B, 245.]

CYMODOCEIDÆ (Lat.), CYMODOCIDÆ (Lat.), n's f. pl. Sim(ku⁶m)-o(o³)-dos(do²k)-e(e²)/i²d-e(a²-e²), -dos(do²k)/i²d-e(a²-e²). A family of the Gymnosomata. [L, 234.]

CYMOGEN (Ger.), adj. Tsu^m-o-geⁿ. Giving rise to fermentation; as a n., see CYMOGEN. [A, 396.]

CYMOGEN, n. Sim^o-jeⁿ. Ger., Cymogen. A very volatile oil formed from the distillation of petroleum. It can be condensed from the gaseous state only under very great pressure, and boils at 0° C. It is used in the manufacture of artificial ice. [B, 270 (a, 24).]

CYMOGRAPHION (Lat.), n. n. Sim^(ku^m)-o(o²)-gra²f(gra²f)-i²-o²n. Fr., cymographe. See KYMOGRAPH.

CYMOID, adj. Sim^oid. From κύμα, a cyme, and εἶδος, resemblance. Having somewhat the form of a cyme. [L, 56.]

CYMOL, n. Sim^ol. See CYMENE.

CYMOPHENOL, n. Sim-o-feⁿo²l. See CARVACROL.

CYMOPLIEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Sim(ku^m)-o(o²)-po²i(i²)e²-e(a²-e²). Of Trevisan, a tribe of the Siphonothallæ, consisting of Neomeris and Cymoplia. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CYMOPTERIS (Lat.), CYMOPTERUS [Rafinesque] (Lat.), n's f. and m. Sim(ku^m)-o²p²te²r-1²s, -u²s(u²s). From κύμα, a swelling, and πτερίς, a fern. A genus of umbelliferous plants of the tribe Seseliaceæ. [B, 42, 121, 275 (a, 24).]—C. Fendleri [Gray]. The gamote of New Mexico. It has a peculiar pleasant odor, and is used, combined with whisky, as a stomachic tonic. [B, 66, 275 (a, 24).]

[B, 180 (a, 24).]—Säulenc'. See ARAUCHARIA columnaris.—Virginische C. The Taxodium distichum. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CYPRIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²p(ku⁶p)/ri²-a³. From κύπρος, the island of Cyprus, the original source of copper. A name proposed, apparently by Mayne, for a diseased condition caused by the use or abuse of copper. [L, 116.]

CYPRIAN, adj. Si²p'ri²-a²n. Gr., κύπριος. Lat., cypricus. Pertaining to or derived from the island of Cyprus; hence, containing copper. [B.]

CYPRIDÆ (Lat.), CYPRIDINADÆ (Lat.), n's f. pl. Si²p-(ku⁶p)/ri²-d-e(a²-e²), si²p(ku⁶p)-ri²-i²n'a²d(a²d)-e(a²-e²). A family of the Ostracoda. [L, 240.]

CYPRIN (Fr.), n. Se-pra²n². See CYPRINUS.

CYPRINACEA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²p(ku⁶p)-ri²-n-a(a³/se²(ke²)-a³). A family of the Integripallia. The Cyprinae, Cyprini, and Cyprinidæ are the same; also the Physostomi; also, of Owen, the Malacopteri. The Cyprinina are a group of the Cyprinidæ. The Cyprinodontidæ are a family of the Physostomi or of the Malacopteri. The Cyprinoidæ, or Cyprinoïdes, are the same as the Cyprinidæ. The Cyprinosalmi are a tribe of the Salmonidæ. [L, 14, 121, 147, 180, 207, 353.]

CYPRINUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²p(ku⁶p)/ri²-n-u²m(u²m). Gr., κύπρινον. An oil made from the flowers of an Egyptian tree called cyprus. [B, 45; B, 121 (a, 24).]—Ceratium ex cyprino. A cerate containing c.; mentioned by Celsus as used in uterine diseases. [A, 325.]

CYPRINUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²p(ku⁶p)-ri(re)/nu²s(nu²s). Gr., κύπρινος. Fr., cyprin. 1. A genus of the Cyprinina. [L, 207.] 2. A powder anciently applied to the hair. [A, 325.]—C. barbatus. Fr., barbeau. Ger., Flossbarbe. The barbel; a species the roe of which is said to cause vomiting and purging, if eaten to excess, and to be used in some countries as a purgative. [L, 43.]—C. brama. Ger., Brachsen, Bleihe. A species of carp found in European waters; it furnishes a leaf-isinglass. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. carpio. Fr., carpe. Ger., gemeiner Karpfen. The common carp (the sasan of the Caspian Sea); one of the sources of isinglass. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. latus. See C. brama.

CYPRIPÈDE (Fr.), n. Se-pre-pe²d. See CYPRIPEDIUM.—C. jaune. The Cypripedium pubescens. [a, 24.]—Extrait liquide de c. jaune. See Extractum CYPRIPEDII fluidum.

CYPRIPEDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²p(ku⁶p)-ri²-ped(ri²-ped²-e²-e²-a²-e²). Of Lindley, the same as his Cypripedicæ (1840). The Cypripediæ are the same. The Cypripedicæ are: Of Lindley, a suborder or tribe (of Reichenbach, a division) of the Orchidæ, consisting of Cypripedium; of Endlicher, a suborder of the Orchidæ; of Lindley (1833), an order of the Gynandriæ; of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Orchidæ, including Cypripedium, Selenipedium, Apostasia, and Neuwedia. [B, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYPRIPEDIN, n. Si²p-ri²-ped'i²n. Fr., cypripédine. Of the "eclectics," a substance prepared by precipitating with water a concentrated tincture of the root of Cypripedium [U. S. Ph.]. [B, 5 (a, 24).]

CYPRIPEDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²p(ku⁶p)-ri²-ped(ri²-ped²-e²-e²-a²-e²)(u²m). From κύπρις, Venus, and πέδιον, a slipper (from the slipper-like form of the lip). Fr., c. cypripedium, cypripède, sabot de la Vierge. Ger., Venussehuh. It., cipripedio, pantofola della Madonna. Sp., cipripedo, zucco. 1. Of Linnæus, a genus of terrestrial, rarely epiphytic orchids, of the Cypripedicæ. 2. Of the U. S. Ph., the rhizome and rootlets of C. pubescens and of C. parviflorum. They have, especially when fresh, an aromatic odor and a bitter, sweetish, somewhat pungent taste, and contain a volatile oil, tannic and gallic acids, resin, gum, glucose, starch, and lignin. C. is similar, medicinally, to valerian-root, for which it has been substituted, though milder; it is said to have been used in hypochondriasis, neuralgia, and other nervous disorders. [B, 5, 34, 42, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. aculea. The stemless lady's slipper; a species growing in dark woods from the Carolinas to the Arctic regions; said to have narcotic properties, and to be less safe than C. parviflorum. [B, 5, 34 (a, 24).]—C. calceolus. Fr., sabot de Notre-Dame, majorlaine bâtarde. Ger., Frauenschu. A variety of C. pubescens. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. canadense. See C. spectabile.—C. candidum. A North American species; the root has been used as a substitute for valerian-root. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. flavescens. See C. parviflorum.—C. guttatum. A Russian species. The flowers are sprinkled with blood-red spots. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. humile. See C. aculea.—C. luteum, C. parviflorum. The small yellow lady's slipper; a perennial species with small yellowish flowers, common through the United States south of the

CYPRIPEDIUM SPECTABILE. [A, 327.]

Potomac river, east and west of the Alleghanies, and in some of the Northern States. The root is the official part. [B, 5 (a, 24).] See C. (2d def.).—C. pubescens. The yellow lady's-slipper; a species indigenous to North America, growing in rich, moist woods. [B, 5, 180 (a, 24).] See C. (2d def.).—C. spectabile. The showy lady's-slipper; a species found in swamps from Canada to Kentucky. Medicinally, the root is said to be almost equal to that of C. pubescens. [B, 5, 34 (a, 24).]—Extractum cyripedii fluidum [U. S. Ph.]. Fr. extrait liquide de cyripède jaune. Ger., flüssiges Gelbfräusenschuh-Extrakt. Fluid extract of c.; made by moistening 25 oz. (av.) of c. (2d def.), in No. 60 powder, with 104 fl. oz. of alcohol, adding enough alcohol to saturate the powder and leave a stratum above it, macerating for 48 hours, allowing the percolation to proceed, adding more alcohol until the c. is exhausted, reserving the first 204 fl. oz. of the percolate, and evaporating the remainder to a soft extract, dissolving this in the reserved portion, and adding enough alcohol to make 24 fl. oz. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Rhizoma cyripedii. See under C. (2d def.).

CYPRIMUM (Lat.), n., n. of adj. cyprinus, Cyprian (æs understood). Gr., κύπριον. Cypriote brass or metal, copper. [B.]

CYROS (Lat.), CYPRUS (Lat.), n's f. $Si^2p(ku^6p)ro's$, - $ru's$ -($ru's$). Gr., κύπρος. An Egyptian tree mentioned by Celsus, corresponding perhaps to the Lawsonia inermis of Linnæus. [B, 45, 270 (a, 24).]—Radix cypri antiquorum. See Radix ALKANNEÆ vera.

CYPSELA (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2p(ku^6p)se^1a^2$. Gr., κυσέλη. Fr., cypselé. The achæmium of a composite plant. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

CYPSLE (Lat.), n. f. $Si^2p(ku^6p)se^1e(a)$. Gen., cypselés. Gr., κυσέλη. Ger., Käpselchen (1st def.), kleine Höhle (2d def.). 1. In pharmacy, a small capsule. 2. In anatomy, any small cavity, especially that of the ear. 3. Cerumen. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

CYPSILI (Lat.), n. m. pl. $Si^2p(ku^6p)se^1i(e)$. From κυσέλος, the sand-martin. Of Sclater, a suborder of the Picariæ. The Cypseliformes are the same. The Cypselidæ (Fr., cypselidées) are a family of the Fissirostres. The Cypselinæ are a subfamily of the Cypselidæ and of the Hirundinidæ. The Cypselomorphæ are a group of the Carinatae. [L, 121, 147, 221, 303.]

CYPSELION (Lat.), CYPSELIS (Lat.), CYPSELIUM (Lat.), n's n., f., and n. $Si^2p(ku^6p)se^1i^2o^2n$, $si^2p(ku^6p)se^1i^2s$, $si^2p(ku^6p)se^1i^2u^2m(u^4m)$. Gen., cypseli'i, -sel'idós (-is), -selii. Gr., κυσέλιον, κυσέλιον. See CYPSLE.

CYPTARIUM (Lat.), n. n. $Si^2p(ku^6p)ta(ta^2)ri^2o^2n$. An old name for a certain antidote. [L, 94.]

CYRENA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Si^2r(ku^6r)e'(a^2e^2)ni^2a^2$. An old name for the sediment of an infusion of saffron in oil. [L, 94.]

CYRBASIA (Lat.), CYRBASIS (Lat.), n's f. $Su^5r(ku^6r)ba(ba^2)si^2a^2$, $su^5r(ku^6r)ba^2s(ba^2s)i^2s$. Gen., cyrbasi'as, -bas'eos (cyrbasis). Gr., κυρβασία, κyρβασίς. Of Hippocrates, a turban-like covering for the mammary gland. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

CYREBIA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Si^2r(ku^6r)e(a)bi^2a^2$. Gr., κυρήβια. See ACHYRON.

CYRENAIUM (Lat.), n., n. of adj. cyrenaicus (gummi understood). $Si^2r(ku^6r)e^2n(an)a(a^2)i^2k-u^2m(u^4m)$. Fr., cyrénaïque. A gum-resin obtained from Cyrene, in northern Africa; probably the product of Thapsia siphion or Thapsia garganica, and was called laser. [B, 51.]

CYRENAIUS (Lat.), adj. $Si^2r(ku^6r)e^2n(an)a(a^2)i^2k-u^2s(u^4s)$. Gr., κυρηναϊκός. Pertaining to or obtained from Cyrene, in Africa. [B.]

CYRÈNE (Fr.), n. Se-re²n. The Ferula asafœtida. [B, 88.]

CYRIACUS (Lat.), adj. $Si^2r(ku^6r)i(i^2)a^2k(a^2k)u^2s(u^4s)$. Gr., κυριακός (from κύριος, a master). Magisterial, lordly; as a n. m., see ASCLEPIOS (2d def.).

CYRILLACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Si^2r(ku^6r)i^2l(la^2)se^1e(ke^2)e(a^2e^2)$. Of Lindley, an order of the Berberales, comprising Cyrilla, Mylocaryum, and Elliottia. The Cyritellæ (Fr., cyritellées) are a small group of dicotyledonous plants, by Endlicher made a family of the Bicornes, related to the Ericaceæ, comprising Cyrilla and Cliftonia; subsequently a family of the Frangulaceæ, comprising the same genera; of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Vacciniæ, comprising the same genera as Endlicher's; of Planché, a section of the Ericææ, including the same genera with the addition of Purdiana and Elliottia; of Wood, a suborder of the Ericaceæ; of Bentham and Hooker, a distinct order, comprising Cyrilla, Cliftonia, and Costæa, placed in the same cohort with the Illiciææ. [B, 42, 121, 170, 270 (a, 24).]

CYROUENNE (Fr.), n. Se-ru-a²n. The Melia azedarach. [B, 88, 121 (a, 24).]

CYROYENNE (Fr.), CYROYER (Fr.), n's. Se-rwa²-ya²n. -ya. The genus Rheedia. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—C. d'Espagne. The Rheedia americana. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYRSOTOMY, n. $Su^5r-so^2t'o-mi^2$. See CRSOTOMY.

CYRTANDRACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)a^2n(a^2n)dra^2s^2e^2(ke^2)e(a^2e^2)$. Fr., cyrtandrées. 1. Of Jack, the Gesneraceæ of Bentham and Hooker. 2. Of Nees, a family of the Bignoniaceæ, comprising the Trichosporeæ and the C. veræ (consisting of Cyrtandra, Whitia, Didymocarpus, and Loxonia). 3. Of Lindley, an order of the Monopetalæ. The Cyrtandreeæ are: 1. Of Blume, a section of the Bignoniaceæ, including Cyrtandra, Whitia, Rhynchothecum, Loxonia, Centronia, and Kuhlia. 2. Of Bartling, a division of the Acanthaceæ, comprising Cyrtandra, Henckelia, Loxonea, Lysionotus, and Trichosporium. 3. Of G.

Don, a subtribe of the Cyrtandraceæ, comprising the same genera as Blume's (with the exception of Kuhlia), and in addition Utania and Fieldia. 4. Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Orobanchææ. 5. Of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Gesneraceæ, comprising the subtribes Columneæ, Eucyrtandreeæ, Æschynanthææ, Beslerieæ, and Didymocarpeæ. The Cyrtandreeæ are a tribe of the Cyrtandreeæ, consisting of Cyrtandra, Whitia, Rhynchothecum, and Fieldia. [B, 42, 170 (a, 24).]

CYRTANTHÆÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)a^2n(a^2n)^{2e}e(a^2e^2)$. Fr., cyrtanthées. 1. Of Reichenbach, a subdivision of the Amaryllidææ, comprising Gastronema, Bravoa, Cyrtanthus, Urceolina, etc. 2. Of Kunth, a subtribe of the Amaryllinææ, consisting of Vallota, Cyrtanthus, and Cyphanema. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CYRTIDA [Haeckel] (Lat.), n. n. pl. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)i^2d-a^2$. Fr., cyrtidés. A family of the Monopyrgiæ. [L, 121.]

CYRTIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)i^2d-i^2n(u^4m)$. From κυρτίδιον (dim. of κύρτος), a little basket. In botany, a dimidiata and operculate conceptacle. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYRTOBLASTÆ [Presl] (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)o(o)bla^2st(bla^2st)^2e(a^2e^2)$. From κυρτός, crooked, and βλαστῆ, a sprout. See CURVEMBRÆÆ.

CYRTOCEPHALUS (Lat.), adj. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)o(o)se^1f(ke^2)fy-a^2l(a^2l)u^2s(u^4s)$. From κυρτός, convex, and κεφαλή, the head. Fr., cyrtocéphale. Having a short head; as a n., in the m. pl., Cyrtocéphali, a family of the Gastropterygiæ. [L, 41, 180.]

CYRTOCORYPHUS (Lat.), adj. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)o(o)ko^2r(i^2f)u^2f-u^2s(u^4s)$. From κυρτός, convex, and κορυφή, the crown of the head. Ger., cyrtocoryph. Having an angle of from 122° to 132° formed at a point highest above and in the same vertical plane with a line drawn from the punctum occipitale to the punctum bregmaticum, the angle being formed by two lines drawn from those points respectively and meeting at the point indicated. [Lissauer (L).] Cf. EUTHYCORYPHUS and HOMALOCORYPHUS, and see under CATANOSTOMUS.

CYRTODES (Lat.), adj. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)od^2e^2z(as)$. See CYRTOD.

CYRTOGRAPH, n. $Su^5rt'o-gra^2f$. From κυρτός, curved, and γράφειν, to write. See CYRTOETER.

CYRTOGRAPHIE (Fr.), n. Ser-to-gra²f-e. The art or process of making reduced fac-similes of the outlines of curved surfaces of the skull, the chest, etc.) by means of recording cyrtometers. [Maurel, "Bull. gén. de thérap.," Nov. 15, 1887, p. 399.]

CYRTOID, adj. $Su^5rt'oïd$. Gr., κυρτώδης, κυρτοειδής (from κυρτός, crooked, and ειδός, resemblance). Lat., cyrtoides, cyrtoides. Fr., cyrtoidé. Ger., buckelähnlich. Hump-like. [A, 322.]

CYRTOMA (Lat.), n. n. $Su^5rt(ku^6rt)o^2ma^2$. Gen., cyrtomatos (-is). Gr., κύρτωμα. A convexity, natural or pathological. [A, 387; L, 50.]

CYRTOMETER, n. $Su^5rt'o^2m^2e^2t-u^2r$. Lat., cyrtometrum (from κυρτός, convex, and μέτρον, a measure). Fr., cyrtomètre. Ger., Wölbungsmesser. An instrument for measuring the curve of any portion of the body. The name is sometimes applied to callipers for measuring the diameters of the chest. [A, 322; D, L, 50 (a, 14).]—Wilson's c. A special c. devised by C. Wilson for ascertaining the position, length, and direction of the fissure of Sylvius in the living subject. It consists of three strips of flexible metal and a tape for securing it in situ. "The broadest transverse strip passes coronally round the forehead, corresponding with the glabella and the external angular process; the narrower longitudinal strip passes backward from the glabella in the middle line to the occiput. This strip is marked with two scales of letters: capitals in its posterior fourth, and small letters about the middle of the strip.

end, thus giving the length and direction of the fissure on the surface of the head." [A. W. Hare, "Lancet," March 3, 1888, p. 407.]

CYRTOMETOPUS (Lat.), adj. Su^{rt}(ku^{rt}-o(o³)-me²-op-u^s-(u^s)). From κυρτός, convex, and μέτρον, the forehead. Ger., cyrtometop. In craniometry, having an angle of between 120° and 130° formed by the intersection (at the point highest above a plane touching the punctum bregmaticum and the punctum nasofrontale, the plane being horizontal) of two lines drawn one from each of those puncta. [Lissauer, "Arch. f. Anthropol.," xv, suppl. (L.) Cf. ENTHYMETOPUS and HOMALOMETOPUS, and see cut under CATANTOSTOMUS.

CYRTOMETRY, n. Su^{rt}-o²m²e²t-ri². Fr., cyrtométrie. Ger., Wölbungsmessung. The use of the cyrtometer. [L., 41.]

CYRTONOSUS (Lat.), n. f. Su^{rt}(ku^{rt}-o²n²-o^s-u^s-(u^s)). From κυρτός, crooked, and νόσος, a disease. An old name for rickets. [L., 116.]

CYRTOPISTHOCRANIUS (Lat.), adj. Su^{rt}(ku^{rt}-o(o³)-pi^s-tho(tho^s)-kra(kra³/ni²-u^s-(u^s)). From κυρτός, convex, and ὀπίσθιον, the occiput. In craniometry, having the angle formed (at the highest point on the inner surface of the occipital bone above a horizontal plane touching the punctum occipitale and the external occipital protuberance) by the intersection of two lines drawn respectively from the punctum occipitale and the external occipital protuberance between 117° and 149°. [Lissauer, "Arch. f. Anthropol.," xv, suppl. (L.) Cf. ENTHYPISTHOCRANIUS and HOMALOPISTHOCRANIUS, and see cut under CATANTOSTOMUS.

CYRTOSIPHYTUM (Lat.), n. n. Su^{rt}(ku^{rt}-o(o³)-si²f²t(u^t)-u^m(u^m)). From κυρτός, convex, and φυτόν, a plant. Fr., cyrtosiphyste. Of Necker, a genus (family) of plants, comprising Ricinus, Croton, Lunatia, Cinogasum, Aroton, Brunsvia, Chrozophora, Clusia, Cratoclitia, Plunkenetia, Acalypha, Stellingia, Mercurialis, Omphalea, Tragia, Phyllanthus, Sapium, Hippomane, etc. [B., 270 (a, 24).]

CYRTOISIS (Lat.), n. f. Su^{rt}(ku^{rt}-o²-i^s). Gen., cyrtosios (-is). Gr., κυρτώσις. 1. A certain form of hereditary dyscrasia, included by Good in Class III (Hæmatica), Order IV (Dysthetica), in which the head is bulky and prominent anteriorly, the stature stunted, and the spine curved. [a, 25.] 2. See KYPHOSIS.—C. cretinismus. Of Good, an hereditary condition in which the c. affects chiefly the head and neck. The countenance is vacant and stupid, the mental faculties are feeble or idiotic, and the sensibilities are obtuse. Enlargement of the thyroid is a frequent concomitant (see CRETINISM). [a, 25.]—C. rhachia. A form of osseous maldevelopment in which the spine is crooked, the ribs are depressed, the articular epiphyses are enlarged and spongy, and the belly is tumid, the mental faculties being clear and even their development premature (see RICKETS). [Good (a, 25).]

CYRTOTES (Lat.), n. f. Su^{rt}(ku^{rt}-o²-ez(as)). Gen., cyrtotes (-is). Gr., κυρτώτης. See CYRTOMA.

CYRTURANUS (Lat.), adj. Su^{rt}(ku^{rt}-u²(ur)/a²n(a²n)-u^s-(u^s)). From κυρτός, convex, and ὄψαρος, the roof of the mouth. Ger., cyrturan. Having an angle of between 132° and 147° formed (at the point of the roof of the mouth highest above a horizontal plane touching the posterior nasal spine and the punctum præmaxillare) by the intersection of two lines drawn respectively from those points. [Lissauer, "Arch. f. Anthropol.," xv, suppl. (L.) Cf. ENTHYURANUS and HOMALURANUS, and see cut under CATANTOSTOMUS.

CYOS (Lat.), CYSSAROS (Lat.), CYSSARUS (Lat.), n's m. Si(ku³/so²s, si²s(ku³/sa²r)sa²r)-o²s, -u^s-(u^s)). Gr., κύσος, κυσσαρος. See CYSTHOS.

CYSSOTIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²s(ku³-sot)²s. Gen., cyssotidos (-is). Fr., cyssote. Of R. A. Vogel, the lower end of the rectum. [L., 50 (a, 14).]

CYST, n. Si²st. Gr., κύστις. Lat., cystis. Fr., kyste. Ger., Cyste, Sackgeschwulst. It., cisti. Sp., quiste, cista. An organized structure consisting of a distinct sac-like wall together with its contents, especially one of pathological formation or abnormal development.—Adventitious c. Lat., cystis adventitia. Fr., kyste adventive. A c.-like wall formed around a foreign body or an effusion.—Air-c. See Gaseous c.—Alveolar c. Fr., kyste alvéolaire. Ger., Alveolarcyste. A c. connected with the alveoli of a tooth. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Aneurysmal c. Fr., kyste anévrysmal. The sac of an aneurysm. [A, 301.]—Apoplectic c. Fr., kyste apoplectique. Ger., apoplektische Cyste. An adventitious c. formed around a cerebral effusion of blood. [D, 3.]—Arachnoid c. Fr., kyste arachnoïdien. A meningeal hæmatoma. [Virchow (A, 301).]—Atheromatous c. Ger., Atheromcyste. See ATHEROMA (1st def.).—Autogenous c. A c. having an independent life, and being capable of secreting its own contents or producing solid growths. [Paget (E).]—Blood-c. Fr., kyste hémattique (ou sanguin). A c. formed around effused blood and containing blood or its remains. [A, 301.]—Boyer's c. A subhyoid c. ["Province méd.," Oct. 6, 1888, p. 577.]—Branchial c. Fr., kyste branchial. Ger., Kiemen-gangcyste. A c. of the neck formed by defective closure of an embryonic branchial cleft. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Bursal c. A c.-like enlargement of a bursa. [E.]—Butter-c. Ger., Buttercyste. A retention-c. of the mammary gland containing a butter-like material. [Marchand (A, 319); "Practitioner," Oct., 1886, p. 289.]—Cholesteatomatous c. See CHOLESTEATOMA.—Coccygeal c. Any c. growing from or in the tissues about the coccyx. [J. McCarthy, "Lancet," May 12, 1888, p. 920.]—Compound c. See Multilocular c.—Colloid c. A c. containing colloid material.—Conjunctival c. Fr., tumeur cystique de la conjonctive. Ger., Bindehautcyste. A rare form of c. usually appearing as a sharply defined, spheroidal or hemispheroidal prominence, about as large as a pea and transparent, occasionally met with near the corneal margin. It is congenital and distinct from the true dermoid c. [F.]—Cowperian c., Cowper's c. A c. formed in the vulvo-vaginal gland or its duct. [Grünfeld (A, 319).]—Cutaneous c., Cuticular c. 1. A c. developed in the skin. 2. See Dermoid c.—C. of the broad ligament. Fr., kyste du ligament large. A c. springing from the ovary or the epoophoron and developed between the layers of the broad ligament of the uterus.—C. of the iris. Fr., tumeur cystique de l'iris. Ger., Kyste der Regenbogenhaut. A rare form of c. almost always of traumatic origin. It usually appears as a small, transparent vesicle on the surface of the iris, with either a broad base or a small pedicle. The contents may be limpid or opaque, fluid or semi-solid. [F.]—Daughter-c. A secondary c. developed within another c.—Dentigerous c. A c. containing teeth, either a dermoid c. or one connected with an embryonic dental capsule. [E.]—Dermoid c. Fr., kyste dermoïque (ou dermoïde). Ger., dermoide Cyste, Cysto-Dermoid. A c. the wall of which consists of a skin-like structure, often true skin, and which sometimes contains hair, sebaceous matter, and, when occurring in the ovary, bony and dental formations. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Dilatation-c. See Retention-c.—Echinococcus-c. See under ECHINOCOCCUS.—Epidermal c. See ATHEROMA (1st def.).—Extravasation-c., Exudation-c., False c. See Adventitious c.—Follicular c. Fr., kyste folliculaire. Ger., folliculäre Cyste, Follicularcyste. A retention-c. of a follicle. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Gaseous c. Fr., kyste gazeuse (ou gazeux). Ger., Luftcyste. A c. containing gas (e. g., in colpo-hyperplasia cystica).—Hæmatic c. See Blood-c.—Hæmorrhagic arachnoid c. See Arachnoid c.—Hairy c. Fr., kyste pileux. Ger., Haarcyste. A dermoid c. containing hair. [A, 301.]—Hydatid c. See under ECHINOCOCCUS.—Hydroc. A c. containing watery contents. [E.]—Hygromatous c. See HYGROMA.—Intraligamentous c. See C. of the broad ligament.—Labial c. A c. on the lip or on the labium pudendi. [E.]—Meibomian c. See CHALAZION.—Milk-c. Fr., kyste lactée. Ger., Milchcyste. A cystic dilatation of a galactophorous duct, containing milk. [E.]—Morgagnian c. See HYDATID of Morgagni.—Mother-c. The original (external) c. of a multilocular cystoma.—Mucoid c. Fr., kyste mucoïde. A branchial c.; so called because its walls are developed from mucous membrane. [Lannelongue, "Progr. méd.," Jan. 26, 1889, p. 73.]—Mucous c. A retention-c. formed in a mucous follicle or in the duct of a muciparous gland. [E.]—Multilocular c. Fr., kyste multiloculaire (ou cloisonné). Ger., multiloculaire (oder mehrkammerige Cyste). A c. containing several compartments, usually by the formation of secondary c's within a mother-c. [A, 301.]—Nabothian c. Fr., glande de Naboth. A dilated mucous follicle of the cervix uteri. [A, 301.]—Ovarian c. Fr., kyste ovarien. Ger., Ovarialcyste. See Ovarian CYSTOMA.—Parent-c. See Mother-c.—Parovarian c. Fr., kyste para-ovarique. Ger., Parovarialcyste. A c. springing from the epoophoron.—Phylloid c. Of Müller, a cystic adenosarcoma.—Pitiferous c. See Hairy c.—Primary c. See Autogenous c. and Mother-c.—Proliferation c., Proliferative c., Proliferous c. Fr., kyste prolifératif. Ger., Proliferationscyste. 1. The mother-c. of a multilocular cystoma. 2. Of Paget, a c. containing solid outgrowths from its wall (the sero-cystic tumor of Brodie; the cystoid adenocoele of Birkett). [Marchand (A, 319).]—Proliferous c. Of Paget, a cystic adenosarcoma.—Recurring proliferous c. See Proliferous c.—Renal c. A cyst-like dilatation of the kidney.—Resting c. See HYPCOCYST.—Retention c. Fr., kyste par rétention. Ger., Retentionscyste. A c. formed by the accumulation of products of secretion in a follicle or a gland or its duct in consequence of obstruction of the outlet.—Rice-grain c. Fr., kyste synovial tendineux (ou synovite à grains riziformes, kyste hordéiforme. Ger., reisskörpchenenthaltendes Hygrom). A cystic dilatation of a synovial sheath containing rice-like bodies. [Weiss, "Rev. de chir.," June, 1885, p. 449.]—Salivary c. A retention-c. of the duct of a salivary gland.—Sanguineous c. Fr., kyste sanguin. Ger., Blutcyste. 1. See Blood-c. 2. Any c. containing blood, either from hæmorrhage from its wall or from the establishment of communication with a neighboring blood-vessel. [Gluck, "Dtsch. med. Woch.," 1886, No. 5; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Sept. 18, 1886, p. 333.]—Sebaceous c. Lat., cystis sebacea. Fr., kyste sebécé. Ger., Balggeschwulst. See ATHEROMA (1st def.).—Secondary c. Fr., kyste secondaire. Ger., secondäre Cyste. See Daughter-c.—Seminal c. Fr., kyste spermatique. Ger., Samencyste. Syn.: spermatocoele. A retention-c. of a tubulus seminiferus. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Serosus c. Fr., kyste séreux. Ger., seröse Cyste. A c. containing a clear, watery liquid. [E.]—Simple c., Single c. See Unilocular c.—Spermatic c. Fr., kyste spermatique. 1. See Seminal c. 2. A spermatoblast when it has become considerably increased in size and its nuclei have been multiplied by segmentation. [A, 15.]—Sublingual c. A c. situated under the tongue.—Sublingual mucous c. A c. due to obstruction of the duct of a mucous gland of Rivini. [E.]—Synovial c. A cystic enlargement of a synovial sheath or bursa. [D. A. Power, "Brit. Med. Jour.," March 21, 1885, p. 595.]—Tarsal c. See CHALAZION.—Testicular c. See Seminal c.—Thyroid c. A c. connected with the thyroid body. [E.]—Umbilical c. A congenital c. situated at the navel. According to Tillman, it is formed by the shutting off of a portion of the stomach during foetal life. [Roser, "Ctbl. f. Chir.," 1887, No. 14; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," June 25, 1887, p. 726.]—Unilocular c. Fr., kyste uniloculaire. Ger., uniloculäre (oder einkammerige) Cyste. A c. having only a single cavity.—Urinary c. Ger., Harncyste. A c. of the kidney, usually thin-walled, projecting beneath the capsule, and consisting of the cortical substance, containing a clear, yellowish liquid. [Marchand (A, 319).]

CYSTADENOMA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²d(a²d)-e²n(an)-o²-ma². Gen., cystadenom'atos (-is). For deriv., see Cyst and ADENOMA. An adenoma containing cysts. [A, 326.]—C. papilliferum. A c. with papillary growths on the inner surface of the cyst-walls. [A, 326.]

CYSTALGIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²l(a²l)/ji²(gi²)-a². From κυστις, the bladder, and αλγος, pain. Fr., cystalgie. Ger., Blasenschmerz. Pain, especially neuralgia, in the bladder. [A, 301; D, 35; L, 50.]

CYSTANASTROPHE (Lat.), CYSTANASTROPHIA (Lat.), n's f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²n(a²n)-a²s(a²s)/tro²f-e(a), -a²s(a²s)-trof(tro²f)-i²-a². From κυστις, the bladder, and ἀναστροφή, inversion. Fr., cystanastrophie. Ger., Cystanastrophie, Umkehrung der Blase. Inversion of the urinary bladder. [L, 50, 135.]

CYSTANENCEPHALIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²n(a²n)-e²n(e²n)-se²f(ke²f)-a(a²)li²-a². From κυστις, the bladder, a priv., and κεφαλή, the head. Fr., cystanencéphalie. Ger., Blasengehirn. See CYSTENCEPHALIA.

CYSTATROPHIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²t(a²t)-rof(ro²f)-i²-a². From κυστις, the bladder, and ἀτροφία, atrophy. Ger., Blasendarrucht. Atrophy of the bladder. [E.]

CYSTAUCHEN (Lat.), n. m. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²k(a²k)/u²ch²-e²n(an). From κυστις, the bladder, and αὐχὴν, the neck. Fr., c. Ger., Blasenhals. The neck of the urinary bladder. [L, 50.]

CYSTAUCHENITIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²k(a²k)/u²ch²-e²n(an)-i(e)²ti²s. Gen., cystauchenit'idōs (-is). For deriv., see CYSTAUCHEN and -itis. Ger., Blasenhalsentzündung. Inflammation of the neck of the urinary bladder. [E.]

CYSTAUCHENOTOMY, n. Si²st-a²k-e²n-o²t'o-mi². Lat., cystauchenotomia (from κυστις, the bladder, αὐχὴν, the neck, and τέμνω, to cut). Fr., cystauchenotomie. Ger., Blasenhalschnitt. Incision of the neck of the urinary bladder. [A, 322.]

CYSTAUXE (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-a²x(a²x)/u²ch²-e(a). From κυστις, the bladder, and αὐξή, enlargement. Fr., c. Ger., Blasenvergrößerung, Blasenverdickung. Enlargement, especially thickening, of the urinary bladder. [A, 322.]

CYSTE (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)/e(a). Gen., cyst'es. Gr., κυστήρ. 1. See CYSTIS. 2. See VULVA.

CYSTE (Ger.), n. Tsu⁶st/e². See Cyst.—Bindehautc. See Conjunctival cyst.—Cingeschwulst (Ger.). A cystic tumor. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Einfache C., Einkammerige C. See Unilocular cyst.—Erweichungc. A cyst left after the breaking down of a clot, etc.; usually not a true cyst, but a collection of soft connective tissue with its meshes filled with liquid. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Harnc. See Urinary cyst.—Klemengange. See Branchial cyst.—Luftc. See Gaseous cyst.—Mehrkammerige C. See Multilocular cyst.—Milchc. See Milk-cyst.—Morgagnische C. See HYDATID of Morgagni.—Samenc. See Seminal cyst.—Seifenc. A form of milk-cyst containing a soapy material. [Marchand (A, 319).]—Zusammengesetzte C. See Multilocular cyst.

CYSTECTASY, n. Si²st-e²k/ta²s-i². Lat., cystectasis, cystectasia (from κυστις, the bladder, and έκτασις, dilatation). Fr., cystectasie. Ger., Cystectasie, Blasenerweiterung. A method of extracting foreign bodies from the bladder by dividing the membranous part of the urethra and dilating the prostatic portion. A forceps is then introduced and the foreign body removed. [Moreland (A, 18).]

CYSTECTOMUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²k'tom(to²m)-u²s(u²s). From κυστις, a sac, and έκτέμνω, to cut out. See CYSTOTOME emporte-pièce.

CYSTEINE, n. Si²st/e²-en. Fr., cystéine. Ger., Cystein. A basic derivative of cystin, having, according to Baumann ["Ztschr. f. physiol. Chem.," viii, p. 299], the formula once assigned to cystine, C₂H₇NSO₂. From this body are formed the derivatives known as phenylcystine, bromphenylcystine, chlorphenylcystine, etc. [E.]

CYSTELOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²l-ko²/si²s. Gen., cystelosis (-is). From κυστις, the bladder, and έλωσις, ulceration. Ger., Harnblasengeschwür. Ulceration of the urinary bladder. [L, 50.]

CYSTENCEPHALIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²n(e²n²)-se²f(ke²f)-a(a²)li²-a². From κυστις, the bladder, and έγκεφαλος, the brain. Fr., cystencéphalie. A monstrosity characterized by a baglike structure in place of the brain. [Geoffroy St.-Hilaire (A, 322); L, 41, 49, 50.]

CYSTENCEPHALUS [St.-Hilaire] (Lat.), n. m. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²n(e²n²)-se²f(ke²f)/a²l(a²l)-u²s(u²s). Fr., cystencéphale. Ger., Blasenkopf. A monster characterized by cystencephalia. [A, 322.]

CYSTENCHYME (Fr.), n. Sest-a²n²-kem. From κυστις, a sac, and έγγυμα, something poured in. A parenchymatous tissue found in certain sponges, consisting largely of oval cells with fluid contents. [L, 121.]

CYSTEODERMUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²-o(o²)-de²rm-(du²rm)/u²s(u²s). A genus of the Coleoptera. [L.]—C. armatus. Species very common in Arizona and parts of California having feeble vesicating properties. [L, 22.]

CYSTEOTOMY (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²-o-je²n(ge²n)/e²s-i²s. Gen., cysteotom'os (-gen'esis). From κυστις, the bladder, and τέμνω, generation. Ger., Blasenbildung. The formation of a cyst. [A, 322.]

CYSTEOLAPAROTOMIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²-o(o²)-la²p(la²p)-a²r(ro²)-o²t-om(o²m)/i²-a². From κυστις, the bladder, λαπάρα, the belly, and τέμνω, to cut. See Suprapubic cystotomy.

CYSTEOLITHUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²st(ku⁶st)-e²-o²l(i²th)-u²s(u²s). Gr., κυστέολιθος (from κυστις, the bladder, and λίθος, a stone). Fr., cystéolithe. Ger., Blasenstein. A vesical calculus. [L, 41, 50.]

CYSTERCOID, n. Si²st-u²rk/oid. A cysticercus. [L, 182.]

CYSTERNA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-u²rn(e²rn)/a². See CISTERNA.

CYSTHEMORRHOIDES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)-he²m-(ha²-e²m)-o²r(ro²)-id(ed)/ez(e²s). From κυστις, the bladder, and αιμορροΐδες, hemorrhoids. Fr., cysthémorrhoides. Ger., Blasenhämorrhoiden. Hemorrhoids of the urinary bladder. [L, 50.]

CYSTHELICOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²s(ku⁶s)-the²l-ko²/i²s. See CYSTELICOSIS.

CYSTHEPATICUS (Lat.), adj. Si²s(ku⁶s)-the²p(thap)-a²t(a²t)/i²k-u²s(u²s). Gr., κυσθηπατικός (from κυστις, the bladder, and ήπαρ, the liver). Fr., cysthépatique. Belonging to or connected with the liver and the gall-bladder. [L, 41, 50.]

CYSTHEPATOLITHIASIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²s(ku⁶s)-the²p(thap)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-li²th-i²-a(a²)/si²s. Lithiasis of the gall-bladder and of the bile-ducts. [A, 322.]

CYSTHEPATOLITHUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²s(ku⁶s)-the²p(thap)-a²t(a²t)-o²l(i²th)-u²s(u²s). From κυστις, the bladder, ήπαρ, the liver, and λίθος, a stone. A concrement formed in the gall-bladder. [A, 322.]

CYSTITIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²s(ku⁶s)-thi(the)/ti²s. Gen., cystit'idōs (-is). From κυσθός, the vulva. Ger., Entzündung der Mutterscheide (oder der äusseren weiblichen Schaamtheile). Inflammation of the vagina or of the vulva. [A, 322.]

CYSTHOS (Lat.), CYSTHUS (Lat.), n's m. Si²s(ku⁶s)/tho²s(-thu²s/thu²s). Gr., κυσθος. Any aperture, especially the anus and the vulva. [L, 50.]

CYSTHYGROMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²s(ku⁶s)-thi(thu⁶)-gro²ma². Gen., cysthygrom'atos (-is). For deriv., see CYST and HYGROMA. Fr., cysthygrome. Ger., Sacklymphgeschwulst. A cystico-lymphatic tumor. [L, 50.]

CYSTHYPERCARCOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²s(ku⁶s)-thi(thu⁶)-pu²r-(pe²r)-sa²r-ko²/i²s. From κυστις, the bladder, ύπερ, above measure and σάρκωμα, a fleshy growth. Fr., cysthypersarcome. Ger., Harnblasengewächs, fleischige Verdickung der Harnblasenhäute. Muscular hypertrophy of the walls of the bladder. [A, 322; E, L, 50.]

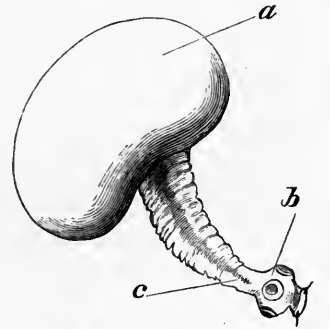

CYSTRIBRANCHIUS (Lat.), adj. Si²st(ku⁶st)-i²-bra²n²ik-(bra²n²ch²)/i²-u²s(u²s). From κυστις, a cyst, and βράγχια (see BRANCHIA). Fr., cystibranche. Having the branchia in a vesicular cavity; as a n., in the m. pl., Cystibranchii, a tribe of the Isopoda. [L, 41.]

CYSTIC, adj. Si²st/i²k. Gr., κυστικός. Lat., cysticus. Fr., cystique. Ger., cystisch, blasenartig. It., cistico. Sp., quistico. 1. Cyst-like, consisting of or containing a cyst or cysts. 2. Pertaining to a bladder. 3. As a n., a medicament supposed to be useful in diseases of the urinary bladder. [A, 385.]

CYSTICA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)/i²k-a². A family of the Strelmintha [Rudolphi], an order of the Eutozoa [Owen], or a family of the Tæniidea, now known to be larval forms of Tænia. [L, 127, 296.]

CYSTICERCOID, n. Si²st-i²-su²rk/oid. Fr., cysticercoides. The larva of a Tænia when the caudal bladder does not contain fluid. [L, 340.] Cf. PLEROCERCUS.

CYSTICERCUS (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-i²-su²rk-(ke²rk)/u²s(u²s). From κυστις, a sac, and έρκος, a tail. Fr., cysticergue. Ger., Blasenwurm, Finne, Blasenschwanz. Syn.: bladder-worm. 1. Of the older authorities, a genus of the Cystica. 2. The scolex of a Tænia when it is encysted in the body of its host and consists of a single head provided with hooks and suckers connected with a bladder-like expansion. [L, 121, 147.] Cf. ECHINOCOCCUS.—C. acanthotriax. The c. of the Tænia acanthotriax. [L, 121.]—C. albopunctata. See C. cellulosa.—C. bicornis. See DISCERAS rudis.—C. bovis. See C. saginata.—C. canis. See CYSTICERCUS FROM THE TÆNIA SOLIUM. (AFTER SOMMER). a, embryonic cyst, or vesicle, of the tail; b, head of the worm, with suckling apparatus; c, the neck.

C. cellulosa.—C. cellulosa. Fr. cysticerque ladrique. Ger., Zellgewebs-Blasenschwanz, Hilsenwurm, Schweinefinne. The larval stage of Tenia solium, found oftenest in the lower animals, as a rule in the pig, but sometimes in man. It has a quadrangular head, a long, cylindrical body, and an elliptical, caudal vesicle, and is from 10 to 15 mm. in length. Its presence is rarely noticed in man except in the eye or the brain; when lodged in the serous cavities of the body it is free, but elsewhere it is found in cysts, sometimes as large as a hazel-nut. [L.] Cf. MEASLES.—C. clavatus. See C. tenuicollis.—C. coprinus. See C. tenuicollis.—C. dicysta. A c. found in the cranial cavity of man. [Laennec (L. 17).]—C. finna. See C. cellulosa.—C. fischeriana. A c. found by Fischer in the chorioid plexus of man. [Laennec (L. 17).]—C. fistularis. A c. sometimes found in the peritonæum of the horse. [Rudolphi (L. 17).]—C. globosa, C. lineata. See C. tenuicollis.—C. medio-canellata. See C. saginata.—C. multilobularis. See C. racemosa.—C. ovis. A variety of c. found by Cobbold in the muscles of the sheep. [B. 182.]—C. pisiformis. The embryo of Tenia serrata. [B. 182.] See C. cellulosa.—C. pyriformis. See C. cellulosa.—C. racemosa [Zenker]. A c. which sends a number of branches, or processes, into the arachnoid of the brain. [L. 121.]—C. saginata, C. teniae mediocanellata, C. teniae saginata. The larval condition of the Tenia mediocanellata. [L. 16.]—C. felæ cellulosa. See C. cellulosa.—C. tenuicollis. Fr. bourse, boiteille. The scolex of Tenia marginata, found in the abdominal organs of man. [L. 16.]—C. turbiuata [Küberlé]. A variety in which the process connecting the head and the bladder is twisted. [L. 121.]—C. visceralis. See C. tenuicollis.

CYSTICHOLOSTÉNIE [Piorry] (Fr.), CYSTICHOLOSTÉNOSE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. s. Ses-te-ko-lo-sta-ne, -no-ze. From κυστις, the bladder, χολή, bile, and στένωσις, constriction. Stenosis of the gall-bladder. [A. 250.]

CYSTICI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²-si(ke). 1. A family of the Teniadæ whose larvæ are cysticeri. 2. An order of the Helminthes. The Cysticidæ are the Cystica of Rudolphi. [L. 121, 231, 243, 340.]

CYSTICLES [Owen], n. pl. Si²st²-i²-k'iz. See Marginal BODIES.
CYSTICOXYDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²-k-o²-x-id(u⁴d)-u³m(u⁴m). Of Wollaston, cystin. [A. 322.]

CYSTICULE, n. Si²st²-i²-ku²l. Lat., cysticula (dim. of cystis). Fr., c. In certain fishes, a division of the vestibule, which contains an otolith. [L. 14.]

CYSTID, n. Si²st²-i²d. Fr., cystide. The cell or case which contains a polypid. [L. 353.]

CYSTIDÆMORRHOIDES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²d-e²m(a³-e²m)²-o²r-ro(ro³-id(ed)²ez(e²s)). See CYSTÆMORRHOIDES, and for other words in Cystid-, not here given, see the corresponding words in Cyst- or Cysth-.

CYSTIDE (Fr.), n. Ses-ted. See CYSTID and CYSTIDIUM.

CYSTIDEA (Lat.), n. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²d'e-a³. An order of the Echinodermata. [L. 121, 173, 196.]

CYSTIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²d'i²-u³m(u⁴m). Fr., cystidium, cystide. Ger., Bläschen. 1. A cell of the basidium or areus of Fungi which, according to N. G. Smith, opens by an operculum at the top to discharge its granules, which he considers the analogues of antherozoids. 2. Of Link, a menospermous fruit which does not adhere to the calyx; the utricle of Gärtner, the carcerule of Mirhel. [B. 1, 19, 77 (a, 24).]

CYSTIDOMYELOMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²d-o(o³)-mil(mu⁶)-e²l-o²ma³. Gen., cystidomyelomatos (-is). From κυστις, the bladder, and μυελός, the brain (see also *oma). Ger., Blasenmarkschwamm. Medullary cancer of the urinary bladder. [A. 322.]

CYSTIDOTRACHELOTOMY, n. Si²st²-i²d-o-tra²k-e²l-o²t'o-mi². See CYSTAUCHENOTOMY.

CYSTIFELLEOTOMY, n. Si²st²-i²-fe²l-e²-o²t'o-mi². See CHOLECYSTOTOMY.

CYSTIGÉNÈTE (Fr.), adj. Ses-te-zha-ne². From κυστις, a sac, and γενετή, origin. Developed in a sporangium. [A. 385.]

CYSTIGNATHI (Lat.), CYSTIGNATHIDÆ (Lat.), n. m. pl. and f. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²g-na(ma³)²th(i)the), -na²th(ma³th)²-i²d-e(a³e²). From κυστις, a sac, and γνάθος, the jaw. A family of the Arcifera. [L. 204, 288.]

CYSTINE, n. Si²st²-i²n. Fr., c. Ger., Cystin. It., Sp., cistina. Syn.: cystic oxide [Wollaston]. A body occurring in minute tabular hexagonal crystals, in urine and in the kidneys, and sometimes forming a constituent of calculi. It is a sulphur derivation of serine and has the formula C₃H₇NO₂S. According to Baumann and Preusse ("Ztsch. f. phys. Chem.," vi, p. 307), it is isomeric with pyruvic acid in which an atom of oxygen is replaced by a molecule of hydrogen sulphide and one of ammonium; C₃H₇NO₂S=CH₂-C(SH)(NH₂). [B. 4 (a, 24).]

CYSTINEUX (Fr.), adj. Ses-ten-u⁶. See CYSTINOUS. [A. 301.]

CYSTINGORRHONCHUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²st(ku⁶st)²-i²n²-g-o²r-ro²n²ku⁶s(ch²u⁴s). From κυστις, a little sac, and ρῶγχος (see RHONCHUS). See Vesicular RÂLE.

CYSTOSCOPY, n. Si²st-o²s/ko-pi². Fr., cystoscopie. Ger., Cystoskopie. Exploration of the bladder by means of the cystoscope.

CYTOSE, adj. Si²st'os. See Cystric.

CYTOSEIRA [Agardh] (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-si²(se²-i²)-ra². From κυστίς, a sac, and σείρα, a rope. Ger., Blasenschurmtang. A genus of Algae. The species are found in the Mediterranean, Red, and Indian Seas. [B, 121, 173 (a, 24).]—C. abrotanifolia, C. barbata, C. ericoides, C. granulata, C. sedoides. Species furnishing the mixture of algae sold in Europe under the name of Helminthochorton. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. siliquosa. Ger., schotenträger Blaseschurmtang. A species from which iodine and crude potash are obtained. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CYTOSEIREÆ [Endlicher, Rabenhorst] (Lat.), CYTOSEIRIDÆ [Lindley] (Lat.), n's f. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-si²(se²-i²)-re²e(a²-e²), -ri²d-e(a²-e²). A tribe or subsection of the Fucaceæ, comprising Cytoseira, etc. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CYSTOSIS, n. n. Si²st-o-sis. Curvature of the spine. [L, 135.]

CYSTOSOMATOMIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-som-a²(a²t)-o(o³)-tom(to²m)/i²a². From κυστίς, the bladder, σῶμα, a body, and τέμνειν, to cut. Fr., cystosomatotomie. Ger., Blasen-körperschnitt. See Suprapubic CYSTOTOMY.

CYSTOSPASMUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-spa²z(spa²s)-mu²s(mu⁴s). From κυστίς, the bladder, and σπασμός, spasm. Fr., cystospasme, spasme de la vessie. Ger., Blasenkrampf. Spasm of the urinary bladder. [L, 46, 50, 57.]

CYSTOSPASTIC, adj. Si²st-o-spa²s/ti²ck. Lat., cystospasticus. Fr., cystospastique. Ger., kystospastisch. Pertaining to spasm of the bladder. [E.]

CYSTOSPERMEÆ [Hasskarl] (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-spu²m(spe²rm)/e²-e(a²-e²). From κυστίς, a sac, and σπέρμα, a seed. A tribe of Algae, comprising Vesiculifera and Bulbochete. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

CYSTOSPERMITIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-spu²rm(spe²rm)/i(e)/ti²s. Gen., cystospermitidos (-is). From κυστίς, a sac, and σπέρμα, semen (see also -itis). Fr., cystospermitte. Inflammation of the seminal vesicles. [E.]

CYSTOSPOREI [Léveillé] (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-spor(spo²r)/e²-i(e). From κυστίς, a sac, and σπορά, seed. Fr., cystosporé. A division of Fungi, comprising the Columellei and Saprophilei. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYSTOSTEATOMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-ste(ste²)-a²t-(a²t)-o²ma². Gen., cystosteatomatos (-is). From κυστίς, a sac, and στεάτωμα (see STEATOMA). Fr., cystostéatoma. A sebaceous cyst. [A, 301.]

CYSTOSTENOCHORIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-ste²n-o(o³)-ko(ch²o)/ri²-a². From κυστίς, the bladder, and στενοχώρα, narrowness. Ger., Blasenverengerung. Stenosis of the urinary bladder. [A, 322.]

CYSTOSTOME, n. Si²st'o-stom. From κυστίς, a sac, and στόμα, an aperture. The oral aperture of the Infusoria and other low forms of life. [L, 210.]

CYSTOTENIA [Leuckart] (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-te'(ta³/e²)-ni²-a². From κυστίς, a sac, and τενία (see TENIA). A division of the genus Tenia, including those in which the head arises in the wall of the embryonic bladder. [L, 121.]

CYSTOTHROMBOID, adj. Si²st-o-thro²m'boid. Lat., cystothromboides (from κυστίς, the bladder, θρομβος, a clot, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., cystothromboïde. Pertaining to clots in the urinary bladder. [L; L, 41.]

CYTOTOME, n. Si²st'o-tom. Lat., cystotomus (from κυστίς, the bladder or a sac, and τέμνειν, to cut). Fr., c. Ger., Cystotom, Steinmesser (1st def.). 1. An instrument for making or enlarging an opening into the bladder in the operation of lithotomy. [E.] 2. An instrument invented, it is said, by Lafaye for dividing the anterior capsule of the crystalline lens in the extraction of cataract. It consists of a malleable steel shank which ends in a right-angled hook with a cutting edge. It is introduced through the corneal wound and across and behind the pupil, and the capsule is more or less freely incised. Used in this sense, the word is often written cystotome. [E.]—C. caché (Fr.). A c. (1st def.) with a concealed blade. [L, 57.]—C. emporte-pièce [Rognetta]. Ger., stückwegnehmender Capselschneider. A punch-like instrument devised by Rognetta for removing portions of the capsule of the crystalline lens in operations for cataract. [A, 322.]—Double c. Fr., c. double. A two-bladed c. invented by Dupuytren for incising the bladder in bilateral lithotomy. [A, 301.]

CYSTOTOMIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-tom(to²m)/i²a². See CYSTOTOMY.—C. cum apparatu alto. See Suprapubic CYSTOTOMY.—C. cum apparatu magno. See Median CYSTOTOMY.—C. cum apparatu parvo. See APPARATUS minor.—C. hypogastrica. See Suprapubic CYSTOTOMY.—C. lateralis. See Lateral CYSTOTOMY.—Proctoc. See Rectal CYSTOTOMY.

CYSTOTOMIE (Fr., Ger.), n. Ses-to-to-me, tsu⁶s-to-to-me'. See CYSTOTOMY.—C. hypogastrique (Fr.). See Suprapubic CYSTOTOMY.—C. sous-pubienne (Fr.). See Perineal CYSTOTOMY.—C. sus-pubienne (Fr.). See Suprapubic CYSTOTOMY.

CYSTOTOMY, n. Si²st-o²t'o-mi². Lat., cystotomia (from κυστίς, the bladder, and τέμνειν, to cut). Fr., cystotomie, incision de la vessie. Ger., Blasenschnitt, Harnblasenschnitt, Blasenöffnung. It, cistotomia. Sp., cistotomia. An operation for gaining access to the interior of the bladder through an incision, although, as in the perineal operation, the incision does not necessarily involve the wall of the bladder itself. [E.]—Bilateral c. C. by means of a transverse perineal incision crossing the median line. [E.]—Colpoc. See Vaginal c.—Colpo-uretero-c. Vaginal c. by means of an incision that exposes the orifice of a ureter, through which drainage of the pelvis of the kidney is then effected. [N. Bozeman, "Am. Jour. of the Med. Sci.," Mar., Apr., 1888, pp. 255, 368.]—C. by cutting on the grip. Lat., methodus celsiana. See APPARATUS minor.—Lateral c. Lat., cystotomia lateralis. Fr., cystotomie latérale. Ger., Seitensteinschnitt. A form of perineal c. in which the incision is carried from the median line to one side, involving the prostate and the neck of the bladder. [E.]—Median c. Lat., cystotomia media, apparatus major. Fr., cystotomie prérectale. Syn., Allarton's operation. C. in the median line of the perineum. The incision involves the prostate, and the neck of the bladder is then stretched to admit of the extraction of a calculus. —Perineal c. Fr., cystotomie périméale. C. through the perineum. [E.]—Pre-rectal c. Fr., cystotomie prérectale. See Median c.—Rectal c., Recto-vesical c. Lat., sectio rectovesicalis. Fr., cystotomie recto-vésicale, taille postérieure. A method in which, after the external sphincter has been stretched, the bladder is incised between the prostate and the recto-vesical pouch, through the anterior wall of the rectum. [A, 385.]—Suprapubic c. Lat., cystotomia hypogastrica. Fr., cystotomie (ou taille) sup-pubienne. Ger., höher Blasenschnitt. Syn.: epicystotomy, the high operation for stone. C. above the pubic bone and below the prevesical peritoneal pouch.—Vaginal c. Fr., taille vaginale, c. vagino-vésicale. C. through the vesico-vaginal septum.

CYSTOTRACHELOMIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-tra²h(ktra³ch²)-e²l(al)-o(o³)-tom(to²m)/i²a². From κυστίς, the bladder, τράχηλος, the neck, and τέμνειν, to cut. See CYSTACHTENOMY.

CYSTOTRAUMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-tra⁴(tra³u⁴)-ma². Gen., cystotraumatatos (-is). From κυστίς, the bladder, and τραύμα, a wound. Fr., cystotraume. Ger., Blasenverletzung. A wound of the urinary bladder. [L, 50.]

CYTOUS, adj. Si²st'u²s. See Cystric.

CYSTOVARIUM (Lat.), n. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o³)-va(wa³)/ri²-u²m(u⁴m). An ovarian cystoma.

CYSTOXYDUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²st(ku⁶st)-o²x-id(iu⁶d)/u²m(u⁴m). See CYSTINE.

CYSTULA (Lat.), n. f. Si²st(ku⁶st)/u²(u⁴)-la². Fr., cystule. A round, closed apothecium (of lichens) filled with spores adhering to filaments and arranged like rays around a common centre. [a, 24.]

CYSTURASIE [Piorry] (Fr.), CYSTURECTASIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n.s. Ses-tu⁸-ra²-ze, -re²k-ta³-ze. Dilation of the urinary bladder. [A, 250.]

CYSTUREMPHRAXIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. Ses-tu⁸-ra²n²-fra³x-e. Obstruction of the urinary bladder. [A, 250.]

CYSTURIQUE (Fr.), adj. Ses-tu⁸-rek. Cystic; vesical; relating to the urinary bladder.

CYSTURITE (Fr.), n. Ses-tu⁸-ret. See CYSTITIS.

CYSTUROSTÉNIE [Piorry] (Fr.), CYSTUROSTÉNOSE [Piorry] (Fr.), n.s. Ses-tu⁸-ro-sta-ne, -no-ze. Constriction (a diminished expansive power) of the urinary bladder. [A, 250.]

CYSTUROTOPIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. Ses-tu⁸-ro-to-pe. Hernia of the urinary bladder. [A, 250.]—C. perididymique [Piorry]. Inguinal hernia of the urinary bladder. [L, 82.]

CYSUS (Lat.), n. m. Si(ku⁶)/su²s(su⁴s). Gr., κύσος. The anus, also the orifice of the vagina. [Aristophanes (A, 357).]

CYTAROS (Lat.), n. m. Si²(ku⁶t)/a²(a³r)-o²s. Gr., κύταρος. The cup of an acorn. [A, 387.]

CYTEOPHYTUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²(ku⁶t)/e-o-fl²-u³m(u⁴m). Fr., cytéphyte. Of Necker, a group of leguminous plants belonging to the suborder Papilionaceae, consisting of genera (Medicago, Lotus, Indigofera, Hedysarum, and many others), which by Bentham and Hooker are referred to the tribes Trifoliceae, Loticeae, Gategeae, and Hedysareae. [B, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYTERIUM (Lat.), n. n. Si²(ku⁶t)-e(a)/ri²-u³m(u⁴m). Probably a misspelling of cyterium from κύτρίπος, promoting conception. Fr., cytérior. Ger., fruchtbarmachendes Mittel. An old term for a supposed remedy for barrenness. [A, 322.]

CYTHERAEDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²th(ku⁶th)-e²r-e(a)/a²d(a³d)-e(a²-e²). Of D'Orbigny, the Veneridæ. The Cytheridæ are a family of the Entomostraca. [L, 303.]

CYTHEREAN, adj. Si²th-e²r-e-a²n. Lat., cythereius (from κύθέρης, pertaining to the island of Cythera, which was sacred to Venus; hence, pertaining to Venus or to venery). See VENEREAL.

CYTHION (Lat.), n. n. Si²th(ku⁶th)/i²-o²n. Gr., κύθιον. A certain ash-colored collyrium mentioned by Celsus. [Gorrius (A, 335).]

CYTINACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²(ku⁶t)-i²n-a(a³)/se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²). Fr., cytinacées. Ger., Cytineen. 1. Of Bentham and Hooker, an order of the series Multi-ovulate terrestres, embracing the Raflesiacæ and Hydnoracæ. 2. Of Lindley, an order of the Rhizogonæ, comprising Cytinus, Hydnora, Hypolepis, and Thismia. The Cytineæ (Fr., cytinées; Ger., Cytineen) are: 1. Of Brongniart, an order of plants allied to the Aristolochiacæ, comprising Raflesia, Cytinus, and Nepenthes, to which others add Apodanthes, Aplytia, and Gonyanthus. 2. Of Reichenbach, a family of the Imbricatæ. [B, 42, 170 (a, 24).] Cf. ARISTOLOCHIÆ.

CYTINUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²(ku⁶t)/i²n-u³s(u⁴s). From κύτινος, the calyx of the pomegranate. Fr., cytinelle, cytinet. A genus of the Cytinaceæ. [A, 385.]—C. hypocistis. Fr., cytinelle hypociste. Ger., gewöhnlicher Hypocist. A species growing on the roots of different species of Cistus in southern Europe, northern Africa, and Asia Minor. From the sap of the plant and the juice of the berries there was formerly prepared a dark substance of a sourish, astringent taste, official as succus hypocistidis. It was used in diarrhoea and dysentery. It also formed a part of the confection of opium known as theriaca. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]

CYTIODERMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²(ku⁶t)-i²-o(o³)-du³rm(de²rm)/a². Gen., cytiodermatos (-is). From κύτις, a cell, and δέρμα, skin. The envelope of a vegetable cell. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYTIOPLASMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²(ku⁶t)-i²-o(o³)-pla²z(pla³s)/ma². Gen., cytioplasmatos (-is). From κύτις, a cell, and πλάσμα, formed matter. The protoplasm of vegetable cells. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYTIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²(ku⁶t)/i²s. Gen., cytidos (-is). Gr., κύτις. Fr., cyte. A vegetable cell. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

CYTISE (Fr.), n. Se-tez. The genus Cytisus, especially Cytisus nigricans and Cytisus laburnum. [L, 41, 105.]—C. à feuilles sessiles. See Cytisus sessilifolius.—C. à grappes. See Cytisus laburnum.—C. d'Adam. See Cytisus purpurascens.—C. des Alpes. See Cytisus laburnum and Cytisus alpinus.—C. des anciens. See Medicago arborea and Cytisus laburnum.—C. des Indes. See Cajanus indicus. [B, 88.]—C. des jardins. C. des jardiniers. See Cytisus sessilifolius.—C. épineux. See Cytisus spinosus.—C. pourpre. See Cytisus purpureus.—C. velu. See Cytisus hirsutus.

CYTISEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²(ku⁶t)-i²s-e²-e(a²-e²). 1. Of Lindley, a division of the Genisteæ, comprising Ulex, Stauracanthos, Adenocarpus, Erinacea, Spartium, Genista, Retama, Calycotome, Sypnone, Sarothamnus, Lembotropsis, Cytisus, and Laburnum. 2. Of Bentham and Hooker, a subtribe of the Genisteæ, comprising Ulex, Cytisus, Hypocalyptus, and Loddigesia. [B, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYTISINE, n. Si²t/i²s-i²n. Lat., cytisine. Fr., c. Ger., Cytisin, Bohnenbaumwibler. A poisonous alkaloid, C₂₀H₂₇N₅O, found in the seeds of Cytisus laburnum and, it is said, in arnica-flowers also. It is a white crystalline solid, of a bitter, nauseous taste, soluble in water and in alcohol, but scarcely soluble in ether, in chloroform, in benzene, or in carbon disulphide. It is strongly basic and melts at 150° C. In poisonous doses it produces vomiting, convulsions, and death. [B, 3, 270 (a, 24).]

CYTISMA ECZEMA (Lat.), n. n. Si²(ku⁶t)-i²z(i²s)/ma³ e²k'-ze²m-a³. Eczema. [G, 16.]

CYTISMA HERPES (Lat.), n. m. Si²(ku⁶t)-i²z(i²s)/ma³ hu³rp-(he²rp)/ez(e²s). Herpes. [G, 16.]

CYTISSOGENISTA (Lat.), n. f. Si²(ku⁶t)/i²s-o(o³)-je²n(ge²n)-i²st'a³. The Genista tinctoria. [B, 180, 270 (a, 24); L, 135.]—Sum-

mitates cytissogenistæ. The flowering tops of Genista sagittalis. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CYTISPORACEI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²(ku⁶t)-i²s-po²r-a(a³y)-se²(ke²)-(e). Of Fries, an order of the Pyrenomycetes, comprising the divisions Leveillinei, Cytispori, and Scuto-adnati, including Parmularia and Microsporeæ. The Cytisporæ (Fr., cytisporées) are: 1. Of Brongniart, a tribe of the Hypozygaleæ, comprising Sphaeromena, Cytispora, Pilidium, Leptostroma, Actenothyrium, and Phoma. 2. Of Math, the same tribe and genera, to which he added Melasma, Labrella, Ceuthospora, Micropora, Microthyrium, and Aylographa. 3. Of Sprengel, a division of the Gastromycetes. The Cytispori are: 1. Of Fries, a section of the Pyrenomycetes, comprising Apiosporium, Chaetominium, Coccoleurium, and Sphaeromena; subsequently a division of the Pyrenomycetes, comprising Sphaeromena, Cytispora, and Phoma; and subsequently an order of the Pyrenomycetes, comprising the same genera and, in addition, Zythia, Septorea, and Ceuthospora. 2. Of Reichenbach, a division of the Sphaeriacei, comprising the subdivisions Xylomacei and Phomacei. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYTISUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²(ku⁶t)/i²s-u³s(u⁴s). Gr., κύτισος. Fr., cytise. Ger., Bohnenstrauch, Guisacklee. 1. Milk- (or shrub- or tree-) trefoil; of Linnaeus, a genus of leguminous plants of the Genisteæ, indigenous to Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Canaries. 2. Of Celsus, the C. hirsutus or C. nigricans. [B, 42, 45, 121, 275 (a, 24).]—C. alpinus [Miller], C. angustifolius [Mönch]. Fr., cytise des Alpes. Ger., Alpenbehenholz. Two species very much like C. laburnum, and having the same uses. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—C. Antillarum [De Candolle]. A species found in the Antilles. The flowers and bitter seeds are employed as a febrifuge and as a digestive tonic. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. cajan. The Cajanus indicus. [a, 24.]—C. hirsutus. A species growing in the southern part of Europe, the leaves of which are said to be diuretic. [a, 22.]—C. laburnum. Fr., cytise à grappes (ou des Alpes, ou des anciens), arbois, aubour, bois de lièvre, ebenier des Alpes (ou sauvage). Ger., gemeiner Bohnenstrauch, Goldregen. The common laburnum, false ebony, golden chain; a species indigenous to the higher mountains of Europe, and widely cultivated. All parts of the plant are poisonous; its flowers contain oil, gum, lignin, gallic acid, and calcium chloride and sulphate; its seeds contain cytisin and laburnine. It has been employed as a sedative in nervous disorders and externally and internally in prurigo. It is also emetic. [“Am. Jour. of Pharm.,” July, 1888, p. 33; B, 5, 173, 180 (a, 24); A, 385.]—C. lanigerus [De Candolle]. A species found in southern Europe and the East; formerly used as an astringent. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—C. odoratus. See C. alpinus.—C. pseudocajan [Linnaeus]. The Cajanus flavus. [B, 173.]—C. purpurascens. Fr., cytise d'Adam. The purple laburnum; a hybrid between C. laburnum and C. purpureus. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. purpureus. Fr., cytise pourpre. Ger., rother Bohnenbaum. The purple-flowered laburnum; a species indigenous to Carniola. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. scoparium [Link]. The Spartium scoparium. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—C. sessifolius. Fr., cytise (ou trèfle) des jardiniers, cytise à feuilles sessiles, trifolium. Ger., italiänischer Bohnenbaum. The stalkless-flowered laburnum. [B, 173, 275 (a, 24).]—C. spinosus. Fr., cytise épineux. Ger., dorniger Bohnenbaum. Prickly laburnum; a species formerly used in southern Europe as an astringent. [B, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]

CYTITIS (Lat.), n. f. Si²(ku⁶t)-i(e)-ti²s. Gen., cytitidos (-is). See DERMATITIS.

CYTOBLAST, n. Si²to-bla²st. Lat., cytoblastus (from κύτος, a cell, and βλαστός, a germ). Fr., cytoblaste. Ger., C, organischer Hautkeim. Syn., nucleus. 1. Scheiden's term for a cell-nucleus; now rarely used. [“Arch. f. Anat.,” 1838, p. 137; L, 20.] 2. The envelope or encysting substance of a colony of choanoflagellate Infusoria. [Soilas, “Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.,” 1884 (J).] 3. Of Bailion, the nucleus of a vegetable cell. [B, 19, 105, 121, 146 (a, 24).]

CYTOBLASTEMA (Lat.), n. n. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-bla²s(bla³s)-te(ta)/ma³. Gen., cytoblastematos (-is). From κύτος, a cell, and βλαστῆμα, germ substance. Lat., substantia hyalina (seu vitrea), matric. Fr., cytoblastème. Ger., Cytoblasteum, Zellenkeimstoff, Bildungsstoff, Bildungsflüssigkeit. Syn.: blastema. 1. Formative fluid, ground (or intercellular, or hyaline) substance; the fluid, semi-fluid, or solid intercellular substance in which cells were supposed to be developed by free cell-formation. 2. The contents of cells which give rise to young cells. 3. Of Schwann, the liquid formative material of the ovum, supposed to be produced by the liquefaction of the blastospheres, and to furnish the nidus of the primitive cells of the embryo. 4. In botany, the liquid in which all vegetable cells are formed. [A, 8; B, 121 (a, 24); J, 21, 27, 36; K, 4.]

CYTOBLASTION (Lat.), n. n. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-bla²st(bla³st)-i(e)-o²n. From κύτος, a cell, and βλαστῆριον, a sprout. An anatomical element consisting of spherical or ovoid nuclei, or of spherical cellulæ very little or not at all granular. [L, 41.]

CYTOCHYLEMA [Strasburger] (Lat.), n. n. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-ki²(ch²u⁴)-e(a)/ma³. Gen., cytochylematos (-is). From κύτος, a cell, and χυλός, juice. Ger., Interflarmasse. The more fluid portion of the cell protoplasm which fills up the spaces of the network formed by the cytochylolasm. [“Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.,” xxx, p. 211 (L).]

CYTOCHYME [Strasburger], n. Si²to-kim. Lat., cytochyma (from κύτος, a cell, and χυμός, juice). Ger., Cytochym. The watery fluid found in the vacuoles of plant-cells; also the homogeneous ground-substance of the body of a cell. [“Arch. f. mikr. Anat.,” 1884, p. 246 (J); “Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.,” xxx, p. 211 (L).]

CYTOCOCCUS (Lat.), n. m. Si(ku⁶s)-to(to³)-ko²k'(ku²s)/ku³s. From κύτος, a cell, and κόκκος, a kernel. Ger., Stammkern. The nucleus of a cytula. [L, 146.]

CYTOCORMUS (Lat.), n. m. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-ko²rm(u³s)(u⁴s). From κύτος, a cell, and κόρμος, a stem. Haeckel's term for one of his six forms of morphological units derived from a cell-stock or cell-fusion of previously separated cells such as occur in lactiferous and spiral vessels of plants and muscular and nerve-fibres of animals. [a, 24.]

CYTODA (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-tod/a³. See CYTODE.—Cytodæ membranoseæ. See LEPYCYTODES.—Cytodæ primordiales. See GYMNOCYTODE.

CYTODE, n. Si'tod. Lat., cytoda (from κύτος, a cell, and εἶδος, resemblance), cellina. Fr., c. Ger., C., kernloses Plasmastück, kernlose Zelle, Plasmaklumpen, ohne Kern, Protoplasmakörperchen. Syn.: protoplasmic corpuscle. Of Haeckel (1866), a minute cell-like mass of living matter without a nucleus. [J, 9.]—C. générateur [Van Beneden] (Fr.). A Gregarina when it presents itself as a spherical mass of naked, granular, non-nucleated protoplasm. [L, 321.]—Encased c. See LEPYCYTODE.—Naked c., Primitive c., Simple c. See GYMNOCYTODE.

CYTODIÆRESIS (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-di(di²)-e²r/(a³e²r)-e²s-i²s. Gen., cytodiaireseos (-æ²esis). From κύτος, a cell, and διαίρεσις, division. Fr., cytodiérèse. Of Carnoy, cell division. ["La cellule," 1885 (J).]

CYTODLÆRETIC, adj. Si-to-di-e²r-e²t/i²k. Fr., cytodierétique. Pertaining to cytodiairesis. [A, 385.]

CYTOGENESIS (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-je²n(ge²n)-e²s-i²s. Gen., cytogenesios (-gen/esis). From κύτος, a cell, and γένεσις, generation. Cell-formation. [J.]

CYTOGENETIC, CYTOGENIC, adj's. Si-to-je²n-e²t/i²k, -je²n/i²k. Lat., cytogeneticus. Pertaining to or concerned in the formation of cells. [K.]

CYTOGENOUS, adj. Si-to-je²n-u³s. Lat., cytogeneticus. Fr., cytogène, cytogenétique. Ger., cytogen. 1. Pertaining to a tissue or part containing cells, especially lymphoid cells. 2. Pertaining to a tissue giving rise to cells. [J, 33, 35.]

CYTOGENY, n. Si-to-je²n-i². See CYTOGENESIS.

CYTOHYALOPLASMA [Haunstein and Strasburger] (Lat.), n. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-hi(hu⁶)-a²l(a³)-o(o³)-pla²z(pla³s)-ma³. Gen., cytohyaloplasmatos (-is). From κύτος, a cell, υαλος, transparent, and πλάσμα, formed matter. Ger., Färlarmasse. The more solid constituent of cell-protoplasm, which forms threads that may or may not be arranged in a network. ["Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.," xxx, p. 211 (L).]

CYTOID, adj. Si'toid. Lat., cytoides (from κύτος, a cell, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., cytoïde. Cell-like. [J.]

CYTO-IDIOPLASMA (Lat.), n. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-i²d-i²-o(o³)-pla²z(pla³s)/ma³. Gen., cyto-idioplasmatos (-is). From κύτος, a cell, ἴδιος, peculiar, and πλάσμα, formed matter. The idoplasma of the cell-body, in contradistinction to that of the cell-nucleus. [Strasburger (J).]

CYTOLOGY, n. Si-to³/o-ji². From κύτος, a cell, and λόγος, understanding. Fr., cytologie. The science of cells. [J.]

CYTOMICROSOME, n. Si-to-mi²/r²-o-som. From κύτος, a cell, μικρος, small, and σῶμα, a body. Ger., Cytomikrosom. A microsome, or tube-shaped granule, of chromatin found in the threads of the cytohyaloplasma of cells. ["Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.," xxx, p. 211 (L).]

CYTOMITOME, n. Si-to³m/i²t-om. From κύτος, a cell, and μῖτος, a thread. The fibril or fibrils of a cell-body. ["Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.," 1886 (J).]

CYTOPLASMA (Lat.), CYTOPLASMA (Lat.), n's n. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-pla²z in -pla²z(pla³s)/ma³. Gen., cytoplasmatos (-is). From κύτος, a cell, and πλάσμα, formed matter. Fr., cytoplasme. Ger., C., Zellplasma. 1. Of Kölliker (1863), protoplasm. 2. The substance of the cell-body in contradistinction to that of the nucleus, or caryoplasma. [Strasburger, "Arch. f. mikr. Anat.," 1884, p. 246 (J).]—C. fäden (Ger.). Fibrils of the protoplasm of the cell-body. ["Arch. f. mikr. Anat.," 1884, p. 285 (J).]—C'fasern (Ger.). See Achromatic FIBRILS.

CYTOPLASTIC, adj. Si-to-pla²s/ti²k. Ger., cytoplastisch. Pertaining to or of the nature of cytoplasm. [J.]

CYTOPLASTIN, n. Si-to-pla²st/i²n. A "viscous, extensible" substance, resisting the action of pepsin and trypsin, found by F. Schwarz in cell-protoplasm. ["Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.," xxx, p. 171 (L).]

CYTOPROCT, n. Si'to-pro²kt. From κύτος, a cell, and πρῶκτος, the anus. In certain Infusoria, an orifice serving for the discharge of the non-nutritious portions of the food. [L, 210.]

CYTOSPERMÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-spu⁶rm-(spe²rm)/e²-e(a³e²). From κύτος, a cell, and σπέρμα, seed. A subsection of Algae, of the old suborder Gymnospermeæ, comprising genera now ranked among the Fuocidæ. The Cytosporæ (Fr., Cytosporées) of Ehrenberg are a cohort of Fungi, consisting of Coccopleum, Apiosporium, Chaetomium, and Cytospora. The Cytosporiacei of Pfeiffer are an order of the Pyrenomyces, comprising the Leveilleini, Cytospori, and Parmulari. [B, 41; B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYTOSTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-to²st/a²s(a³s)-i²s. Gen., cytostasios (-ost/asis). From κύτος, a cell, and στάσις (see STASIS). Stasis of the white blood-corpuscles, as in the incipient stage of inflammation (q. v.). [K.]

CYSTOSTOME, n. Si'to-stom. Lat., cytostoma (from κύτος, a cell, and στόμα, an aperture). In certain Infusoria, an orifice serving for the ingestion of food. [L, 210.]

CYTOTÆNIA [Leuckart] (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-te/(ta³e²)-ni²-a³. See TÆNIA.

CYTOTHECA (Lat.), n. f. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-the(tha)/ka³. From κύτος, a cell, and θήκη, a cover. Fr., cytothèque. That portion of the cocoon of an insect which covers the body. [L, 180.]

CYTOTOMIE (Fr.), n. Se-to-to-me. From κύτος, a cell, and τέμνειν, to cut. The anatomy of cells. [Carnoy (J, 15).]

CYTOZOA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-zo/a³. Fr., cytozoaires. See PROTOZOA.

CYTOZOON, n. Si(ku⁶)-to(to³)-zo'o²n. From κύτος, a cell, and ζῶον, a living being. Fr., cytozoaire. A peculiar mass of protoplasm found in blood-corpuscles and in many epithelial cells; considered by Lankester to be a parasite. [K, 16.] Cf. WÜRMCHEM.

CYTR DRZEWO (Polish), n. The Citrus medica. [B, 88.]

CYTRULE, n. In Bohemia, the Cucurbita citrullus. [B, 88.]

CYTRYN, n. In Bohemia, the Citrus medica. [B, 88.]

CYTTARIA (Lat.), n. f. Si²t(ku⁶t)-ta(ta³)/ri²-a³. Fr., cyttaria. A genus of hymenomycetous Fungi, parasites upon South American evergreen beeches. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]—C. Berteri. A species found in Chili, occasionally eaten. [B, 61.]—C. Darwinii. A species found in Tierra del Fuego and forming an important article of food there. [B, 61.]—C. Gunnii. An edible species found in Tasmania.

CYTTARIEI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Si²t(ku⁶t)-ta²r(ta³r)-i(i²)/e²-i(e). 1. Of Léveillé, a family of Fungi (subsequently a section of the Cyathidei), consisting of the genus Cyttaria. 2. Of Pfeiffer, a section of the tribe Dichanacei, of the Pyrenomyces. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

CYTTAROS (Lat.), n. m. Si²t(ku⁶t)/ta²r(ta³r)-o³s. Gr., κύτταρος. See CYTTAROS.

CYTTIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Si²t(ku⁶t)/ti²d-e(a³e²). A family of the Acanthopterygii. The Cyttina are a group of the Scobriddæ. [L, 207, 280.]

CYTULA (Lat.), n. f. Si²t(ku⁶t)/u²(u⁴)-la³. Ger., Stammzelle. A fertilized ovum. [L, 146.]

CYTULOCOCCUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²t(ku⁶t)-u²(u⁴)-lo(lo³)-ko²k'-ku³s(ku⁴s). The nucleus of the first cleavage globule. [L, 146.]

CYZICENUS (Lat.), n. m. Si²t(ku⁶t)-i²-se(ka)/nu³s(nu⁴s). Gr., κυζικένος. A certain vulnerary plaster mentioned by Galen. [A, 325.]

CZACKIA (Lat.), n. f. Kza³k/i²-a³. A genus of plants, made by some authors a section of the genus Anthericum. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—C. Hillestrum. Fr., lis de Saint Erme. A species found in mountainous forests in southern Europe. Its tuberos root was formerly official as radix liliastri. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

CZARKOW (Pol.), n. Tsa²r/ko. A place in Silesia, where there is a gaseous saline spring. [L, 49.]

CZERVICZE (Hung.), n. Che²r/vi²-che². See PARÁD.

CZIGELKA (Hung.), n. Chi²g'e²/ka⁴. A place near Bartfeld, in Hungary, where there is a spring containing iodine and chlorides. [A, 319.]

D

DA, n. 1. In Languedoc, the date. [L, 41.] 2. A Japanese variety of rice with small, reddish grains. [A, 385.]

DAAN (Hind.), n. The Punica granatum. [A, 496 (a, 24).]

DAANGA (Singh.), n. The Spathodes longiflorus. [A, 496 (a, 24).]

DAAURITH, n. See MAL de coit.

DAB (Hind.), n. 1. The Viburnum nervosum and the Poa cynosuroides. 2. In Bengal, the Xyris indica. [A, 496 (a, 24).]

DABACH (Ar.), n. The Viscum album. [B, 88, 121 (a, 24).]

DABA CHETTA (Tel.), n. The Citrus medica. [A, 496 (a, 24).]

DABALI (Guz.), n. The Abutilon indicum. [A, 479.]

DABANE-HINDI (Pers.), n. The Mylabris cichorii. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xx (a, 21).]

DABBERLACK, n. Da²b/u⁶r-la²k. The Alaria esculenta. [A, 505.]

DABBERRIES, n. pl. Da²b/be²r-i²z. The fruit of Ribes grossularia. [A, 505.]

DABER-LOCKS, n. Da²b/u⁶r-lo²ks. See DABBERLACK.

DABINGORA, n. The Croton variegatum. [B, 88.]

DABRA (Hind.), n. The Uvaria picta. [A, 479.]

DABURI, n. The Bixa orellana. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

DACALO-TANDALO, n. An Indian plant, a decoction of which is used for the cure of cutaneous eruptions. [L, 87.]

DACAMPIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Da³-ka²mp-i(ji)²e²-e(a³-e²). Of Körber, a family of lichens belonging to the Kryoblusti, comprising Endopryenium, Catopyrenium, Dacampia, and Dermatocarpon. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

DACELONINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Da(da³)-se²l(ke²)-o²n-i(e)/ne-(na²-e²). A subfamily of the Halcyonidae. [L, 121.]

DACHA, n. Of the Hottentots, cucumbers, and the Cannabis sativa. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]

DACHEL (Egyptian), n. According to Bory, the genus Elate; according to Adanson, the genus Phoenix. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—D'kern. Of Stilling, the nucleus of the tegumentum. [L, 6; K.]

DACHRYDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Da³k(da³ch²)-ri²d(ru⁶d)/i²-u³m(u⁴m). See DACRYDIUM.

DACHS (Ger.), n. Da³ch²s. The badger (Meles taxus).—D'blut. The dried blood of Meles taxus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—D'fett. See ADEPS TAXI.—D'harn. See HYRACIUM.—D'kern. Stilling's nucleus. [Arch. f. Anat. u. Phys., 1888, p. 202.]

DACNEROS (Lat.), adj. Da³k(da³k)-ne(na)²ro²s. Gr., δακνηρός. See DACNODOS; as a n., in the neut., dacneron, an old term for a certain pungent collyrium. [A, 358.]

DACNODES (Lat.), adj. Da³k(da³k)-nod/ez(as). Gr., δακνώδης. Ger., beissend. Biting (i. e., highly irritating). [A, 322.]

DACNOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-nos/i²s. Gen., dacnos/eos (-is). From δάκνω, to bite. Fr., dacnose. Ger., Beissen. A biting or pungency. [L, 50.]

DACRÆMORRHYSIS (Lat.), n. i. Da³k(da³k)-re²m(ra²-e²m)-o²r-ri(ru⁶)si²s. See DACRÆMORRHYSIS.

DACRY (Lat.), n. n. Da(da³)/kri(kru⁶). Gr., δάκρυ. See DACRYON.

DACRYADENALGIA (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-a²d-(a³d).e²n a²l(a³l)/ji²(gi²)-a³. From δάκρυ, a tear, δάνη, a gland, and άλγος, pain. Fr., dacryadenalgie. Ger., Thränenrüsenschmerz. Pain in the lacrymal gland. [A, 322.]

DACRYADENITIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-a²d(a³d).e²n-i(e)/ti²s. Gen., dacryadenit'idos (-is). From δάκρυ, a tear, and δάνη, a gland (see also -itis²). Fr., dacryadénite. Ger., Thränenrüsenschleimhautentzündung. Inflammation of the lacrymal gland. [A, 322.]

DACRYADENOSCIRRHUS (Lat.), n. m. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-a²d(a³d).e²n-o(o²)-si²r(ski²r)/ru⁶(ru⁶s). From δάκρυ, a tear, δάνη, a gland, and σκίρρυσος, to become indurated. Fr., dacryadenoscirrhus. Ger., Thränenrüsenschleimhautentzündung. Inflammation of the lacrymal gland. [L, 50.]

DACRYÆMORRHYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-e²m-(a³-e²m)-o(o²)-si²r(ski²r)/ru⁶(ru⁶s). Gen., dacryæmorrhys/eos (-is). From δάκρυ, a tear, αίμα, blood, and ῥέω, a streaming. Fr., dacryhémorrhysie. Ger., Thränenblutfluss. Originally, a flow of bloody tears; subsequently, hæmorrhage from the lacrymal passages. [F; L, 50, 135.]

DACRYAGOGATRESIA (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-a²g-(a³g)-o²g-(og)-a²l(a³l)-re(re)/zi²(si²)-a³. From δάκρυ, a tear, ἀγωγός, conducting, and ἀπρῶτος, imperforate. Fr., dacryagogatresie. Ger., Verschliessung der Thränengänge. Occlusion of the lacrymal duct. [L, 50.]

DACRYAGOGUS (Lat.), adj. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-a²g(a³g)-og/-u³s(u⁴s). From δάκρυ, a tear, and ἀγωγός, conducting. Fr., dacryagogus. Ger., thränenführend. Tear-conducting (said of the lacrymal passages). [L, 116.]

DACRYALLOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-a²l(a³l)-le(lo³-e²)-os/i²s. Gen., dacryallos/eos (-is). From δάκρυ, a tear, and ἀλλοίωσις, a change. An abnormal state of the lacrymal secretion. [A, 322.]

DACRYDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Da³k(da³k)-ri²d(ru⁶d)/i²-u³m(u⁴m). Gr., δακρυδιον (dim. of δάκρυ, a tear). Ger., Thränenchen (1st def.). 1. A drop (a so-called tear) of gum or resin, especially scammony. [A, 311.] 2. Of Solander, a genus of the family Taxineæ. [B, 48 (a, 14).]—D. cupressinum [Solander]. D. taxifolium. A species of D. (2d def.) indigenous to New Zealand, said to acquire a height of 200 feet. Its shoots are made into a beverage having the same antiscorbutic properties as spruce-beer. [B, 19, 245 (a, 24).]

DACRYELCOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-e²l-ko²si²s. Gen., dacryelcos/eos (-is). From δάκρυ, a tear, and ἔλκος, ulceration. Fr., dacryelcose. Ger., Verschwörung der Thränenwerkzeuge, Thränengeschwür. Ulceration of the lacrymal apparatus. [L, 135.]

DACRYGELOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-je²l(ge²l)-o²si²s. Gen., dacrygelos/eos (-is). From δακρυγέλωσις, smiling through tears. Alternating laughter and weeping, as in hysteria. [L, 50.]

DACRYHÆMORRHYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-he²m(ha³-e²m)-o²r-ri(ru⁶)si²s. See DACRÆMORRHYSIS.

DACRYHELICOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-he²l-ko²si²s. See DACRYELCOSIS.

DACRYIN, n. Da³k/ri²i²n. Lat., dacryinum, dacryina (from δάκρυ, a tear). Fr., dacryine. Ger., Thränenstoff, Dacryin. A peculiar substance found in tears. [L, 50.]

DACRYMA (Lat.), n. n. Da³k(da³k)-ri(ru⁶)ma³. Gen., dacrym/atos (-is). Gr., δάκρυμα. See DACRYON (1st def.).

DACRYOADENALGIA (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-a²d(a³d).e²n-a²l(a³l)/ji²(gi²)-a³. See DACRYADENALGIA.

DACRYADENITIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-a²d(a³d).e²n-i(e)/ti²s. See DACRYADENITIS.

DACRYOBLENNORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-ble²n-no²r-re(re)/ro²(e²)-a³. From δάκρυον, a tear, κλύω, mucus, and ῥέω, to flow. Fr., dacryoblennorrhée. Ger., Thränenfleischfluss. A mucous discharge from the lacrymal passages. [L, 41, 50.]

DACRYOCYSTALGIA (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-a²l(a³l)/ji²(gi²)-a³. From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, and άλγος, pain. Fr., dacryocystalgie. Ger., Thränensackschmerz. Pain in the lacrymal sac. [L, 50.]

DACRYOCYSTANTONIA (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-a²(a³t)-on(o²n)/i²-a³. From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, and ἀτομία, relaxation. Fr., dacryocystantonie. Ger., Erschlaffung des Thränensacks. Atony of the lacrymal sac. [L, 50.]

DACRYOCYSTE (Lat.), DACRYOCYSTIS (Lat.), n's. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)(e/a).-i²s. From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, and ἄστυ, a tumor. Fr., dacryocyste, sac lacrymale. Ger., Thränensack. The lacrymal sac. [F.]

DACRYOCYSTITIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-i(e)/ti²s. Gen., dacryocystit'idos (-is). Fr., dacryocystite. Ger., Thränensackentzündung. Inflammation of the lacrymal sac. [L, 50.]—D. blennorrhœica. Fr., dacryocystite blennorrhéique. Ger., blennorrhöische Thränenschleimhautentzündung. Suppurative inflammation of the lacrymal sac. [F.]—D. catarrhalis. Fr., dacryocystite catarrhale. Ger., catarrhische Thränenschleimhautentzündung. A disease of the lacrymal sac characterized by a reddened and swollen condition of the mucous membrane lining the sac and canaliculi, and the secretion of an abundant, clear or slightly cloudy fluid, mucus or muco-pus, which can be pressed out of the puncta by the finger. There is always some catarrhal conjunctivitis present, with perhaps slight reddening of the skin over the sac. [F.]—D. phlegmonosa. Fr., dacryocystite phlegmonense. Ger., phlegmonöse Thränenschleimhautentzündung. Phlegmonous inflammation of the lacrymal sac, characterized by infiltration of the skin and subcutaneous tissue with serum and lymphoid cells. There is a very hard, brawny, prominent swelling of the region of the sac, and this dense infiltration spreads to all the neighboring tissues. No pus can be pressed out from the puncta; there are great pain and local heat of skin, and often a rise in the general temperature. The lids are often entirely closed, and the skin is purple and glazed. [F.]—D. purulenta. Fr., dacryocystite purulente. Ger., eitriche Thränenschleimhautentzündung. See D. blennorrhœica.

DACRYOCYSTOBLENNORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o²)-ble²n-no²r-re(re)/ro²(e²)-a³. From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, κλύω, mucus, and ῥέω, to flow. Fr., dacryoblennorrhée. Ger., Thränensackschleimfluss. A mucous discharge from the lacrymal sac. [L, 50.]

DACRYOCYSTOBLENNOSTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o²)-ble²n-no²st-a³(a³s)-i²s. Gen., dacryocystoblennostas/eos (-nost/as)-is. From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, κλύω, mucus, and στάσις, stagnation. Ger., Stöckung des Schleimabganges aus dem Thränensack. An accumulation of mucus in the lacrymal sac. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

DACRYOCYSTOCŒLE (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o²)-se(ka)/le(la). In Eng., da³k-ri²-o-si²st-o-sel. From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, and κύλη, a tumor. Fr., dacryocystocèle. Ger., Thränensackbruch. A hernia of the lacrymal sac. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

DACRYOCYSTOPTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-o²p-to²si²s. Gen., dacryocystoptos/eos (-is). From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, and πτώσις, a falling. Ger., Vorfall des Thränensacks. Prolapse of the lacrymal sac. [A, 322.]

DACRYOCYSTOSYRINGOKATAKLEISIS (Lat.), n. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-o(o²)-si²r(su⁶r)-i²a²-go(go²)-ka²t-ka²(ka²)-a²(a³)-kl(i)/kle²-e²-si²s. Gen., dacryocystosyringokatakleis/eos (-is). From δάκρυον, a tear, κύστις, a sac, σφύγγη, a fistula, and κατακλείσις, closure. An operation proposed by Dieffenbach for the healing of lacrymal fistulae. It consisted in paring the edges of the fistula, dissecting up the skin around the opening, and uniting the lips of the wound by sutures, assisting the sliding of the skin-flaps by lateral incisions through the skin. The name and the operation are now obsolete. [F.]

DACRYODES (Lat.), adj. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-od/ez(as). Gr., δακρυόδης (from δάκρυ, a tear, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., dacryode. Ger., thränenähnlich (1st def.), thränenartig (1st def.). 1. Tear-like, occurring in tears (said of gummy exudations). [A, 322; L, 41.] Cf. DACRYOM. 2. Weeping. 3. As a n., of Vahl, a genus of trees now assigned to the Anacardiææ. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

DACRYOHÆMORRHŒA (Lat.), DACRYOHÆMORRHYSIS (Lat.), n's. f. Da³k(da³k)-ri²(ru⁶)-o(o²)-he²m(ha³-e²m)-o²r-re(re)/ro²(e²)-a³.-ri(ru⁶)si²s. See DACRÆMORRHYSIS.

DAMMAR, n. Da²ma³r'. Jav. and Malay, dámar. Fr., d. Ger., D. A generic name for certain oleo-resins resembling copal, employed in the arts for varnishes, and as an addition to plasters in the Ger. and East Indian Ph's. It is an exudation from many species of Coniferae and other trees of eastern Asia, the islands of the Pacific, New Zealand, Australia, and South America. It is soluble in chloroform, in fats, in oils, in benzene, in ether, and in hot alcohol. Its sp. gr. is from 1.040 to 1.112; its melting point, 120° C. It contains dammarylic acid, resin, gum, and a volatile oil. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—American d. Ger., amerikanisches D. A hard, fragrant resin, of a reddish color, obtained from Araucania brasiliana. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—Aromatic d. Of Guibourt, a variety differing somewhat from Australian and East Indian d.; soluble in ether. [a, 27.]—Australian d. Ger., australisches D'harz. Syn.: New Zealand d., Kauri copal. A product of Dammara australis and Dammara ovata; a half-fossil resin found a short distance underground in the Kauri fields of New Zealand, very like copal, and occurring in roundish fragments from the size of an egg to that of a man's head. It has an aromatic taste and a balsamic odor. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—Bengal d. The Shorea robusta. [a, 24.]—Black d. Lat., dammara nigra. Fr., d. noire. Ger., schwarzes D'harz. Hind., kala-d. A resin obtained from Canarium strictum, or, according to some persons, the Marginea acutifolia, recommended as a substitute for Burgundy pitch. It is only black when on the tree. When held to the light, it is of a transparent, brownish-yellow or amber color. It is somewhat soluble in boiling alcohol, and entirely soluble in oil of turpentine. [B, 77, 172 (a, 24).]—D. batu (Malay). See Rock d. and D. puti.—D. des Indes (Fr.). See Indian d.—D'fichte (Ger.). The genus Agathis (Dammara). [B, 180 (a, 24).]—D'harz (Ger.). D. of the Ger. Ph. Indian d. [B, 180, 270 (a, 24).]—D. of the sal-tree. Bengal d., called by the natives ral or ethooma; the product of Shorea robusta. [B, 172 (a, 24).]—D. pine. The Dammara alba. [a, 24.]—D. pitch. See D. of the sal-tree.—D. puti [Hind.]. Literally, cat's-eye d.; the resin of Dammara alba. [a, 24.] See also Rock-d.—D. resin. See D. selan [Malay]. The resin of Araucania selanica; also a resinous extract from Vatica selanica. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—D. varnish. A varnish made by adding 10 parts of powdered d. to 20 of benzene. This is allowed to stand 24 to 48 hours, when the dissolved portion is carefully poured off and added to 4 parts of pure oil of turpentine. It is often used in preference to Canada balsam in microscopy on account of its being more nearly colorless, and of its not rendering the preparations so transparent as the latter, being therefore preferable to it for colored objects. [a, 27.]—East Indian d., Indian d. Fr., d. des Indes. Ger., indisches D. In commerce, the product of Hopea splendida, Hopea nicanantha, Dammara alba, Dammara orientalis, and Engelhardia spicata. It occurs in long, irregularly-shaped fragments, more or less colorless or yellowish, transparent, breaking conchoidally, and having a soft, smooth outer surface. It is softer than copal and harder than colophony. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—New Zealand d. Ger., Neuseeländisches D. See Australian d.—Rock d. Malay, d. batu. An Indian d. obtained from Hopea nicanantha. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Sal-d. See D. of the sal-tree.—Schwarzes D. (Ger.). See Black d.—Sufel-d. (Hind.), White d. Ger., weisses D. The resin or varnish obtained from Vateria indica (see malabarica). [B, 77, 172 (a, 24).]

DAMMARA (Lat.), n. f. Da²m-ma³r'a³. 1. Of Gärtner, the genus Bursera. 2. Of Rumphius, a genus of resinous trees found in the Moluccas and New Zealand, of the Coniferae, tribe Araucariæ. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]—D. alba. The Cyathis d. (q. v.); a lofty species of D. (2d def.) growing in the Sunda Islands, the Moluccas, and the Philippines; one of the chief sources of Indian dammar. [B, 173, 180, 270 (a, 24).]—D. australis. Ger., neuseeländische Kaurifichte. The kauri-tree; a species furnishing kauri-copal. [B, 77, 270 (a, 24).]—D. orientalis. Fr., daphné des Monts Ourals. A species indigenous to Russia, where the bark is employed as a mild vesicant. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—D. candicans. Fr., daphné tartarique, gros retombet, trintanelle-malherbe. A shrub, hardly a foot high, growing upon sunny mountains in southern France and in Italy. In Sardinia the leaves are used as a purgative. [B, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. cannabina. Fr., daphné chanvreux. See D. papyracea.—D. eneorum [Linnaeus]. Fr., daphné camêlée. Ger., knester Seidelbast, Steinröschchen. The garland flower; a poisonous species growing in the central part of Europe. The bark is used as a vesicant and also for making dye. [B, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. gnidium. Fr., daphné à feuilles de gnidia, bois d'oreilles, camêlée noire à feuilles déliées, garou, lin bâlard, sain bois, thym-lee de Montpellier, trintanelle. Ger., rispenblütiger (oder italienischer) Seidelbast. Flax-leaved D.; a species indigenous to southern Europe, furnishing a portion of the mezereum of commerce. All parts of the plant are poisonous. A yellow dye is obtained from it. [B, 5, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. lagetta. Fr., bois dentelle. The lace-bark tree; indigenous to the Antilles. [B, 173, 275 (a, 24).]—D. laureola. Fr., lauréole mâle, auriole, laurier des bois, laurier purgatif. Ger., lorbeerartiger (oder immergrüner) Seidelbast, Lorbeerkraut, Lorbeerdaphne. Dwarf-bay, wood-laurel, or spurge-laurel; a smaller species than D. mezereum, recognized in the Br. Ph. as one of the sources of mezereum, though its root is inferior in acrimony. [B,

5, 19, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. Liottardi. Fr., d. de Liottard. A variety of D. mezereum. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—D. major. See D. laureola.—D. mezereon, D. mezereum. Fr., bois gentil, bois d'oreilles, fauz garou, lauréole femelle, mezéreon. Ger., gemeiner

DAPHNE MEZEREUM. [A, 327.]

Seidelbast, Kellerhals, Ziland, Zindelbast, Pfefferbaum. The mezereum; a species cultivated in Europe. The fruit is oval, red, and pulpy, and contains but one seed. The root is the source of mezereum of the U. S. Ph. The berries are sometimes used as a drastic purgative. [B, 5, 19, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. occidentalis. A poisonous species found in Jamaica. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—D. odora. See D. papyracea.—D. oleifolia, D. oleoides. A species found in Greece and Italy; supposed by some to be the χαμύλαια of the ancients. It is used as a purgative. [B, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. paniculata. See D. gnidium.—D. papyracea. The Nepal paper-shrub, or sethburusa; a small tree or shrub growing in India and Cochinchina. An excellent writing-paper is made from the bark prepared like hemp. The bark and the root are purgative. [B, 172, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. piliin. A shrub growing in the neighborhood of Valdivia, Chili. It is employed by the Chilians as an emetic and purgative, but its use is attended with considerable danger. In regular practice it is used like cortex mezerei. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxvi (a, 21).]—D. pontica. Fr., d. de Pont. Ger., pontischer Seidelbast. A poisonous species indigenous to Asia Minor. The aromatic flowers furnish the bees with a honey, said to be poisonous also. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—D. salicifolia. Sp., hojas de San Pedro [Mex. Ph.]. A Mexican species. The leaves are epispastic. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Dec., 1885, p. 601.]—D. tarton-raira. See D. candicans.—D. thymelea. Fr., daphné thymèle, herbe de Mont-Serrat. A small shrub indigenous to southern France and to Spain. The root and fruit (with the seed) are used as a purgative in dropsy, and the bark is employed like mezereum. [B, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—D. tinifolia [Swartz]. A poisonous West Indian species. [B, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—Decoetum daphnes mezerei [U. S. Ph., 1820, Ed. Ph., 1826, Dub. Ph., 1830, Swed. Ph., 1817]. Fr., décoction de garou. Decoction of mezereum; made by boiling down to two thirds 1 part of the fresh bark of D. mezereum in 144 parts of water, adding 2 parts of licorice-root, and straining. [B, 97 (a, 21).]

herbe-du-diable, pomme de vallée, put-put, stramoine. Ger., gemeiner Stechapfel, Tollkraut, Dornäpfel, Rauchapfel, Krötenmelde. It., stramonio. Sp., estramonio. The common thorn-apple; an annual species indigenous to Europe, but naturalized in America, with widely spreading, forked branches and large ovate leaves, with irregularly waved or sinuately toothed margins. The flowers are large, generally white, with a tubular, five-toothed calyx, the base of which, when the flower falls away, remains attached to the fruit, which is a fleshy four-valved, four-celled capsule, covered with sharp spines. The leaves (see STRAMONIUM-leaves) and the seed (see STRAMONIUM-seed) are official. The plant contains two alkaloids—atropine and hyoscyamine—and its physiological action is identical with that of belladonna. It has been used in neuralgia, rheumatism, dysmenorrhœa, syphilitic pains, and cancerous sores, and externally as an ointment or cataplasm in irritable ulcers, inflamed tumors, etc., and spasmodic asthma has been alleviated or entirely controlled by smoking the leaves or the root cut up and beaten so as to loosen its texture. DÉCANULEMENT (Fr.), n. Da-ka²-nu²l-ma²n². The removal of a cannula (e. g., a tracheotomy-tube). [E. Köhl, "Arch. f. klin. Chir.," xxxv, p. 75; "Ctrbl. f. Chir.," Mar. 3, 1888, p. 168.]

DÉCAPAGE (Fr.), n. Da-ka²-pa²zh. The process of cleaning and brightening the surface of metals by immersing them in acidulated baths. [B, 38 (a, 24).]

DECAPARTITE, adj. De²k-a²-pa²rt/i²t. Lat., decapartitus (from déka, ten, and partire, to divide). See DECEMPARTITE.

DECAPENTAMERUS (Lat.), adj. De²k-a²-pe²nt-a²m(a²m)²-e²r-u²s(u⁴s). From déka, ten, πέντε, five, and μέρος, a part. Having five to ten pieces (said of a whole flower or of each verticil). [B, 121 (a, 24).]

DECAPETALOUS, adj. De²k-a²-pe²t/a²l-u²s. Lat., decapetalus (from déka, ten, and πέταλον, a petal). Fr., décapétale. Ger., zehnblumenblättrig. Having ten petals. [a, 24.]

DECAPHYLLOUS, adj. De²k-a²-fi²l/u²s. Lat., decaphyllus (from déka, ten, and φύλλον, a leaf). Fr., décaphylle. Ger., zehnblättrig. Having ten leaves or folioles (said of the perianth). [a, 24.]

DECAPITATIO (Lat.), n. f. De(da)-ka²p(ka²p)-i²t-a(a²)/shi²-ti²-o. Gen., decapitation'is. See DECAPITATION.—D. articularis, D. ossis. The operation of removing the head of a long bone. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DECAPITATION, n. De-ka²p-i²t-a'/shu²n. Lat., decapitatio (from decapitare, to behead). Fr., décapitation, décollation, section du cou. Ger., D., Enthauptung. It., decapitazione. Sp., decapitación. Syn.: detruncation, trachelotomy, decollation, de-rotomy. That variety of embryotomy which consists in separating the head of the foetus from the trunk, to facilitate delivery. It is performed by means of a chain-saw or a cord or wire to which a sawing motion is communicated, or with a special instrument termed a decapitator.

DECAPITATOR (Lat.), n. m. De(da)-ka²p(ka²p)-i²t-a(a²)/to²r; in Eng., de-ka²p-i²t-a-to²r. Gen., decapitator'is. Fr., décapitateur. Ger., Enthauptungshaken. An instrument for decapitating the foetus; usually a long, stout hook with a cutting edge on its concavity, or an angular blunt hook for tearing the head from the trunk by a rotary movement. Braun's d. (key-hook); Fr., crochet de Braun; Ger., Schlüsselhaken) is of the latter variety.

DECAPOD, n. De²k/a²-po²d. Fr., décapode. An individual of the Decapoda. [L.]—Long-tailed d's. See MACRURA.

DECAPODA (Lat.), n. n. pl. De²k-a²p(a²p)/o²d-a². From déka, ten, and πους, the foot. Fr., décapodes. An order of the Mala-costraca, or of the Crustacea, having ten legs. [L, 147.]—D. brachyura. See BRACHYURA.—D. macrura. See MACRURA.

DECAPODAL, adj. De²k-a²p/o²d-a²l. See DECAPODUS.

DECAPODIFORMIS (Lat.), adj. De²k-a²-po²d-i²-fo²rm'i²s. From déka, ten, πους, the foot, and forma, form. Fr., décapodiforme. Appearing to have five pairs of feet (said of the larvæ of certain coleopterous insects). [L, 41.]

DECAPODUS, adj. De²k-a²p/o²d-u²s. Gr., δεκάπους. Lat., decapodus. Fr., décapode. Ger., zehnfüssig. Having ten feet; belonging to the Decapoda. [L, 121.]

DECAPOSPHINXIS (Lat.), n. f. De²k-a²p(a²p)-o(o²)-sfī²n²x'-i²s. See APOSPHINXIS.

DECAPTERYGIUS (Lat.), adj. De²k-a²p(a²p)-te²r-i²g'i²(u²g')/i²-u²s(u⁴s). From déka, ten, and πτερυξ, a fin. Fr., décapterygién. Ger., zehnflössig. Having ten fins. [L, 180.]

DECARBONATED, adj. De-ka²rb'o²n-at-e²d. Lat., decarbonatus. Fr., décarbonaté. Ger., decarbonisirt. Sp., decarbonatado. Freed from carbonic acid. [a, 24.]

DECARBONIZATION, DECARBURATION, DECARBURIZATION, n's. De-ka²rb-o²n-i²z-a'/shu²n, -u²r-a'/shu²n, -i²z-a'/shu²n. Fr., décarbonisation. Ger., Decarbonisation. It., decarbonizzazione. Sp., decarbonización. The action or process of depriving a substance of carbon. [a, 24.]

DECASPERMUS (Lat.), adj. De²k-a²-spu²rm(spe²rm)/u²s-u²s(u⁴s). From déka, ten, and σπέρμα, a seed. Fr., décasperme. Ger., zehnsamig. Having ten seeds. [L, 41.]

DECASTEMONES (Lat.), n. m. pl. De²k-a²-ste²m(stam)/o²n-ez(e²s). From déka, ten, and στήμων, a filament. Of Allioni, a group of plants characterized by having ten stamens. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

DECATORTHOMA (Lat.), n. n. De²k-a²t(a²t)-o²r-tho'/ma². Gen., decatorthom'atos (-is). Fr., décatorthoma (from déka, ten, and ὀρθῶν, to direct, prepare). Ger., Decatorthome. An ancient medicine composed of ten ingredients. [A, 325 (a, 21); L, 41 (a, 14).]

DECATYL, n. De²k/a²-l-i². From déka, ten, and ἄλγ, matter. Fr., décatile. Ger., Dekatyf. A compound containing 10 atoms of carbon in a molecule.—D. alcohol. Ger., Dekatyfalkohol. A monatomic alcohol containing 10 atoms of carbon in a molecule, C₁₀H₂₁OH. Several alcohols of this formula have been described, but the constitution of none is known with certainty. One, derived from petroleum decane, boils at between 210° and 215° C. Another is formed by the action of zinc ethyl on bromoacetic bromide, and is probably of the constitution CH(C₂H₅)₂-C(C₂H₅)₂OH of tetraethylated ethyl alcohol. It boils at between 155° and 157° C. [B, 4, 158, 270 (a, 24).]

DECAY, n. De-ka. Lat., ruina. Fr., décadence. Ger., Verfall, Abnahme. A decline of the normal condition of a substance or of the whole or a part of an organism, especially putrefactive decomposition; also the condition of having undergone such a decline; figuratively, the gradual failure of health and strength incident to old age. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

DECEIVER, n. The Nepeta glechoma. [A, 505 (a, 21).]

DECEMCOSTATE, adj. De-se²m-ko²st/at. Lat., decemcostatus (from decem, ten, and costa, a rib). Fr., décemcoté. Ger., zehngerippt. Having ten ribs. [a, 24.]

DECEMDENTATE, adj. De-se²m-de²nt/at. Lat., decemdentatus (from decem, ten, and dens, a tooth). Fr., décemdenté. Ger., zehnähniig. Having ten teeth or tooth-like processes. [L, 41.]

DECEMFID, adj. De/se²m-fi²d. Lat., decemfidus (from decem, ten, and findere, to split). Fr., décemfide. Ger., zehngespalten. Cleft into ten parts. [A, 385 (a, 21); B, 1, 121 (a, 24).]

DECEMFLOROUS, adj. De-se²m-flō²r-u²s. Ten-flowered. [a, 24.]

DECEMJUGATE, adj. De-se²m-ju²-gat. Having ten pairs of leaflets. [a, 24.]

DECEMLOCULAR, adj. De-se²m-lo²k/u²l-a²r. From decem, ten, and loculus, a compartment. Fr., décemloculaire. Having ten compartments. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DECEMMACULATUS (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-se²m(ke²m)-ma²k-(ma²k)-u²(u⁴)-la(la²)/tu²s(tu⁴s). From decem, ten, and macula, a spot. Fr., décemmaculé. Ger., zehnfleckig. Marked with ten spots. [L, 41.]

DECEMNERVIUS (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-se²m(ke²m)-nu²r(ne²r)/vi²(wi²)-u²s(u⁴s). From decem, ten, and nervus, a nerve. Fr., décemnérvé. Ger., zehnnervig. In botany, ten-nerved. [a, 24.]

DECEMPARTITE, adj. De-se²m-pa²rt/i²t. Lat., decempartitus (from decem, ten, and partire, to divide). Fr., décempartite, décemparti. Ger., zehngetheilt. Divided into ten parts. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DECEMPEDATE, adj. De-se²m/pe²d-at. See DECEMPES.

DECEMPENNATUS (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-se²m(ke²m)-pe²n-na-(na²)/tu²s(tu⁴s). From decem, ten, and penna, a feather. Having ten large feathers. The Decempennata of Sundevall are a phalanx of the Coniostres. [L, 121.]

DECEMPES (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-se²m(ke²m)/pez(pas). From decem, ten, and pes, the foot. Fr., décempède. Ger., zehnfüssig. Having ten feet or claws. The Decempedes are the Decapoda. [L, 41.]

DECEMPPLICATUS (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-se²m(ke²m)-pli²t-a-(a²)/tu²s(tu⁴s). From decem, ten, and plicare, to fold. Fr., décem- plissé. Ger., zehngefaltet. Having ten folds. [a, 24.]

DECEMPYRENATUS (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-se²m(ke²m)-pi²r-(pi²r)-e²n(an)-a(a²)/tu²s(tu⁴s). From decem, ten, and πυρρήνη, a kernel. Fr., décempyréné. Ger., zehnsteinkernig. Having ten pyrenes. [a, 24.]

DECEMSTRIATUS (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-se²m(ke²m)-stri(stri²)-a(a²)/tu²s(tu⁴s). From decem, ten, and striare, to stripe. Fr., décemstrié. Having ten narrow stripes or bands of a color different from that of the rest of the body. [L.]

DECENE, n. De²s/en. A substance, C₁₀H₂₀, obtained by keeping turpentine oil heated for some hours to 200° to 250° C. with 20 parts of hydriodic acid. It boils at 160° C., has a strong odor, and dissolves in fuming sulphuric acid. [B, 2, 77 (a, 24).]

DECENTRED, adj. De-se²nt'rd'. Not having a common focus. [a, 27.]

DECENYLENE, n. De²s-e²n/i²l-en. Fr., décénylène. See DECINE.

DECEPHALIZATION, n. De-se²f-a²l-i²z-a'/shu²n. From de priv., and κεφαλή, the head. Loss of prominence of the head. [L, 196.] Cf. CEPHALIZATION.

DECREBRATION, n. De-se²r-e²-bra'/shu²n. From de priv., and cerebrum, the brain. The removal of the brain in the operation of craniotomy.

DECEREBRIZED, adj. De-se²r'e²-brizd. Having had the brain removed. [B. G. Wilder, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 31, 1886, p. 134.]

DÉCÈS (Fr.), n. Da-sa. Death. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DECESSIO (Lat.), n. f. De(da)-se²s(ke²s)/si²-o. Gen., decession'is. From decedere, to depart. A fracture of the skull. [L, 135.]

DÉCHAPELLEMENT (Fr.), n. Da-sha²-pe²l-ma²n². The operation of cutting away the crown of a decayed tooth, the root of which is to be preserved. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DÉCHARGE (Fr.), n. Da-sha²rzsh. See DISCHARGE.

DÉCHIARNÉ (Fr.), adj. Da-sha²r-na. Excessively emaciated. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DÉCHAUSOIR (Fr.), n. Da-shos-wa²r. Lat., dentis scalpium. Ger., Zahnfleischabläser. A gum-lancet. [E; L, 41, 43.]

DÉCHET (Fr.), n. Da-sha. Refuse tissue. [a, 27.]

DÉCHIQUETÉ (Fr.), adj. Da-shek-ta. Laciniate. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DÉCHIRÉ (Fr.), adj. Da-she-ra. Lacerated. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DÉCHIREMENT (Fr.), DÉCHIRURE (Fr.), n's. Da-she-ma²n², -u²r. See LACERATION.

DECIDENTIA (Lat.), n. f. De²s(de²k)-i²-de²n(dan)/shi²(ti²)-a². From decidere, to fall down. Fr., décidence. 1. See CATAPROXIS. 2. An old term for a turn or change in an acute disease whereby it was prolonged beyond fourteen days. 3. A declining, falling into debility or sickness. [A, 322 (a, 21); L, 94.]

DECIDU (Fr.), adj. Da-se-du². See DECIDUOUS.

DECIDUA (Lat.), n. f. of adj. deciduus (membrana understood). De²-si²d(ki²d)/u²(u⁴)-a². For deriv., see DECIDUOUS. Fr., caduque, membrane caduque, couche anhiste [Velpeau]. Ger., D., hinfällige Haut. It., d. Sp., a., caduca. Syn.: caduca. An adventitious envelope formed around the fertilized ovum on its entrance into the uterine cavity, consisting of the mucous membrane lining the

The subchorionic layer of the maternal placenta.—D. protrusa, D. reflexa. Fr., caduque réfléchie. That portion of the d. which, being continuous with the d. vera, covers the ovum as it projects into the uterine cavity, and finally, coming to lie in contact with the d. vera, constitutes the inner layer of the decidua sac taken as a whole. Toward the close of gestation the d. vera and the d. reflexa become fused into one membrane, forming a thin layer over the chorion.—D. serotina. So called from the old idea of the tardiness of its formation. By most writers this term is applied to the layer or layers of decidua substance which intervene between the developed placenta and the uterine wall; by some, however, it is considered to include also that part of the d. that enters into the formation of the maternal portion of the placenta. Hence a placental and a uterine d. serotina are spoken of. [A., 5.]—D. serotina uterina. See Uterine d. serotina.—D. spongiosa. Of Bojanus, the inner layer of the chorion in the dog. [A., 45.]—D. subchorialis. See D. placentalis subchorialis.—D. tuberosa et polyposa. A variety of decidua endometritis characterized by a roughened condition with polypoid outgrowths. [A. Ward, "Brit. Med. Jour.," May 3, 1884, p. 854.]—D. tunica. See D.—D. tunica reflexa. See D. reflexa.—D. tunica uteri, D. uteri, D. uterina, D. vera. Fr., caduque utérine. That portion of the mucous membrane lining the cavity of the uterus which, when the fecundated ovum comes to be imbedded in the membrane, continues to line the general cavity of the uterus in every part except that occupied by the attachment of the ovum. [A., 5.]—Epichorialis d. See D. reflexa.—Glandular d. serotina. See Uterine d. serotina.—Interuteroplacental d. See D. serotina.—Menstrual d. Lat., d. menstrualis. 1. The superficial layer of the mucous membrane of the body of the uterus which is cast off during menstruation. 2. The membranous structure cast off in membranous dysmenorrhoea. [A., 325 (a, 21).]—Placental d. See D. serotina.—Placental d. serotina. Lat., d. serotina placentalis, d. placentalis sensu strictiori. Fr., partie para-utérine du placenta utérin. Ger., Basalplatte der Placenta [Winkler]. That layer of the d. serotina which covers the cotyledons.—Uterine d. See D. vera.—Uterine d. serotina. Lat., d. serotina uterina. Syn.: glandular d. serotina. The outer portion of the d. serotina.

DECIDUAL, adj. De²s-i²d-u²-a²l. Lat., decidualis. Pertaining to or resembling the decidua.

DECIDUATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. De²-si²d(ki²d)-u²(u⁴)-a(a²)²ta². Of Huxley, those Mammalia that shed a portion of the uterine mucous membrane in parturition. [A., 11.]

DECIDUATE, adj. De²s-i²d-u²-at. Belonging to the Decidua.

DECIDUATE, v. intr. De²s-i²d-u²-at. To be shed. [A., 11.]

DECIDUATION, n. De²s-i²d-u²-a²shu²n. A process of shedding. [A., 11.]

DECIDUOMA (Lat.), n. De²-si²d(ki²d)-u²(u⁴)-o²m-a. Fr., déciduome. Ger., Deciduom. A neoplasm formed in the uterine cavity resembling the decidua serotina, very vascular, dark-brown in color, somewhat lobular upon the surface. It contains decidua and small nucleated cells, dilated glandular cavities, and blood and lymph spaces. It is believed to be caused by a hyperplasia of some portions of the decidua remaining in the uterus after the embryo proper has been expelled in an abortion. [Klotz, "Arch. of Gyn.," xxix; "Deutsche Med.-Zeitung," March, 10, 1887 (a, 18).]

DECIDUOUS, adj. De²s-i²d-u²-u²s. Gr., εὐκατάπτωτος. Lat., deciduus (from decidere, to fall). Fr., décidu. Ger., abfallend. It., Sp., caduco. Falling or destined to fall off or be shed (said of the mucous membrane of the uterus, of the milk-teeth, of horns, etc.; in botany, of leaves that fall off annually, and of the calyx and the corolla when they fall off before the fruit develops). [B., 119, 121, 123 (a, 24).] Cf. CADUCOUS.

DECIGRAMME, n. De²s-i²-gra²m. From δεκάτη, a tenth part, and γράμμα, a small weight. Fr., décigramme. A weight of one tenth of a gramme (= about 154 grain).

DECILITRE, n. De²s-i²-let²r. Fr., décilitre. A measure of the tenth of a litre (= about 6.10 cubic inches).

DECIMANA (Lat.), n., f. of adj. decimanus (febris understood). De²s(de²k)-i²-m-a(a²)²na². Fr., décimane. An old term for a form of intermittent fever returning every tenth day. [L., 41, 84.]

DECIMANUS (Lat.), adj. De²s(de²k)-i²-ma(ma²)²na²(nu⁴s). Pertaining to a tenth; of the old medical writers, occurring every tenth day (see DECIMANA). [A., 301 (a, 21).]

DECIMETRE, n. De²s-i²-met²r. Fr., décimètre. A measure of one tenth of a metre (= about 3.93 inches).

DECINE, n. De²s-en. A substance, C₁₀H₁₈, derived from bromocyclylene by the abstraction of the elements of hydrobromic acid. It has a faint odor, and boils at 165° C. [B., 77, 158 (a, 24).]

DECINORMAL, adj. De²s-i²-no²rm-a²l. From decimus, tenth, and normalis, according to rule. Having one tenth the regular value (said of solutions which are so diluted as to be of one tenth the standard strength). [B.]

DECIPIUM (Lat.), n. n. De(de²)-si²p(ki²p)-i²-u²m(u⁴m). Of Delafontaine, a metal found in North Carolina. Atomic weight, 130; symbol, Dp. [a., 27.]

DECKBLATT (Ger.), n. De²k'bla²t. A bract. [B.]

DECKBLÄTTCHEN (Ger.), n. De²k'blat-ch²en. A small bract, a bracteole. [a., 24.]

DECKBLÄTTFÖRMIG (Ger.), adj. De²k'bla²t-fu²rm-i²g. See BRACTEIFORM.

DECKBLATTLOS (Ger.), adj. De²k'bla²t-los. Ebracteate. [B., 123 (a, 24).]

DECKBLÄTTRIG (Ger.), adj. De²k'blat-tri²g. See BRACTEATE.

DECKE (Ger.), n. De²k'e². A covering. [a., 24.]—D. des Ciliarkörpers. The capsule of the corpus dentatum. [I., 3; K.]

DECKELFÖRMIG (Ger.), adj. De²k'e²l-fu²rm-i²g. See OPERCULIFORM.

DECKELFRUCHT (Ger.), n. De²k'e²l-fruch²t. See PYXIDIUM.

DECKELSCHNECKE (Ger.), n. De²k'e²l-shne²k-e². The edible snail (Helix pomatia). [B., 180 (a, 24).]

DECKENEPITHEL (Ger.), n. De²k-e²n-a-pe-tal. Fr., épithélium de revêtement. The epithelium covering or lining a part as the epithelium of the ependyma or of the peritœum. [a., 18.]

DECKGANGLIENZELLSCHICHT (Ger.), n. De²k-ga²n²glen-tse²l-shi²ch²t. The ganglion-cell layer of the retina. [I., 10; K.]

DECKGLAS (Ger.), DECKGLÄSCHEN (Ger.), n's. De²k'gla²s, -glas-ch²e²n. Fr., couvre-objet. A cover-glass for a microscope slide. [L.]

DECKHAUT (Ger.), n. De²k-ha²-u⁴t. A pellicle. [a., 24.]

DECKKEIMIG (Ger.), adj. De²k'kim-i²g. See CHLAMYDOBlastous.

DECKKLAPPE (Ger.), n. De²k'kla²p-pe². See FORNIX.

DECOCTO-INFUSA [Belg. Ph., Finn. Ph., Russ. Ph.] (Lat.), n. n. pl. De-(da)-ko²k'(to)²/i²n-fu²/sa². See under DECOCTUM.

DECOCTUM (Lat.), n. n. De-(da)-ko²k/tu²m(tu²m). From decoquere, to boil down. Fr., décoction. Ger., Abkochung, Decoct. A decoction; a preparation made by boiling a medicinal substance in water. Where the pharmacopœias do not state the proportions, the general rule is to use 1 part of the drug to make 70 parts of product. The decocto-infusa of the Belg. Ph., Finn. Ph., and Russ. Ph. are decocta to which some substance is added toward the close of the process of decoction, a brief second boiling being sometimes recommended. [B, 81, 95 (a, 21).] For decocta in the titles of which the names of drugs occur, see under the names of those drugs.—D. ad ictericos [Edinb. Ph.]. A decoction for persons with jaundice, containing celandine as the chief ingredient. [B, 5 (a, 21).]—D. album [Fr. Cod.], D. album Sydenhami [Swiss Ph.]. See APOZÈME BLANC.—D. amarum. Fr., décoction amère. See D.

QUASSIAE LIGNI COMPOSITUM.—D. anthelminticum [Brunsw. Ph., 1777]. Fr., décoction anthelmintique. Anthelmintic decoction; made by boiling down to 192 parts 1 part each of aloes, colocynth, and Aristolochia rotunda, and 2 parts each of the tops of Helleborus foetidus, savin, wormwood, Artemisia abrotanum, and tansy, in 288 parts of water. [B, 119 (a, 21).]—D. antifebrile [Port. Ph., 1711]. Syn.: d. cinchona cardiacum, d. china compositum. Decoction of cinchona with serpentaria; made by boiling 1 part each of pulverized cinchona and pulverized serpentaria in 96 parts of water to 24 parts, straining, and adding 4 parts of spirit of cinnamon. [B, 97 (a, 21).]—D. antiscorbuticum [Fr. Cod., 1837]. Antiscorbutic decoction; made by infusing for 10 minutes 96 parts each of lappa and the root of Rumex aquaticus in 392 parts of water, boiling for 20 minutes, and adding 8 parts of raphanus and 6 parts each, respectively, of leaves of Cochlearia officinalis, leaves of Trifolium fibrini, and leaves of Nasturtium officinalis, and straining. [B, 97 (a, 21).]—D. antivenericum laxans [Fr. Cod., 1837]. A preparation made by macerating for 12 hours 1 oz. each of sarsaparilla and guaiac-shavings and 25 grains of potassium subcarbonate in 4 lbs. of water, stirring, boiling down to 3 lbs., infusing for half an hour in the decoction 2 drachms each of senna, sassafras-shavings, and licorice, and 1 drachm each of rhubarb and coriander, straining with slight expression, and decanting when cold. [B, 97 (a, 21).]—D. avenaceum lowerianum [Dutch Ph., 1805, Niemann's Notes; Brunsw. Disp., 1777; Palat. Disp., 1764; Würt. Ph., 1798]. Fr., décoction de gruau nitrée. A decoction made by boiling down to one half 21 parts of oats and 2 of the wood of Santalum rubrum in 576 of spring water, straining, and adding to the colature 2 parts of water and 8 of white sugar. [Dutch Ph., 1805, Niemann's Notes; or by boiling down to one third 12 parts of choice white oats, 2 of the wood of Santalum rubrum, and 3 of the colature 1 part of wild chicory in 288 of spring water, and adding to the colature 1 part of nitre and 4 parts of white sugar, and straining. [Brunsw. Disp., 1777; Palat. Disp., Würt. Ph., 1798]. [B, 119 (a, 21).]—Decocta concentrata [Ger. Ph. (1st ed.), Belg. Ph., Dan. Ph., Russ. Ph.]. Concentrated decoctions; made in the same manner as common decoctions, except that a proportionally larger quantity of drugs is employed. [B, 95 (a, 21).]—Decocta concentratissima [Ger. Ph. (1st ed.), Belg. Ph., Russ. Ph.]. Very concentrated decoctions. The Belg. Ph. orders 1 part of the drug to 2 parts of product. [B, 95 (a, 21).]—D. diaphoreticum. See APOZÈME SUDORIFIQUE.—D. emolliens. Fr., décoction émolliente. A preparation formerly official; made by boiling 1 oz. of marsh-mallow-root and a handful each of marsh-mallow-leaves and violet-leaves in 4 lbs. of water, and straining. [B, 119 (a, 21).]—D. emolliens et carminans. Fr., décoction émolliente et carminative. Emollient and carminative decoction; made by boiling 8 parts of marsh-mallow-root down to one half in 192 parts of pure water, adding 6 parts each of the flowers of Melilotus caruleus and of the Matricaria chamomilla, and, after a quarter of an hour's digestion, straining [Am. Ph., 1830]; or by boiling 1 oz. of marsh-mallow-root and a handful each of mallow-leaves and leaves of parietaria in 4 lbs. of ordinary water, straining, and adding to the boiling liquid ½ oz. of caraway-seeds and half a handful of flowers of the Matricaria chamomilla, and allowing the whole to macerate until cool [Sard. Ph., 1773]. [B, 119 (a, 21).]—D. febrifugum laxans. See D. CHINÆ ANTISEPTICUM PURGANS.—D. Feltz [Belg. Ph.]. Syn.: ptisana Feltz. Feltz's decoction; made by boiling for 1 hour 10 grammes of isinglass, 65 grammes of sarsaparilla-root, and 80 grammes of powdered antimony sulphide in the quantity of water necessary to obtain 1 litre of product. [B, 95 (a, 21).]—D. Incrasans Fulleri. See D. GUMMI ARABICI.—D. Ignorum. See D. GUAIACI COMPOSITUM.—D. Iusitanicum. See D. SARSAPARILLÆ COMPOSITUM.—D. nervinum [Sard. (AFTER YOUMANS.)

DECURTATION, n. De-ku^rt-a'shu³n. Lat., decurtatio (from decurtare, to cut short). Fr., decurtation. A shortening, ablation; the destruction of a tree's axis of growth. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DECURTATUS (Lat.), adj. De(da)-ku^rt(kurt)-(a)³/tu³s(tu⁴s). Gr., μειψος. 1. Curtailed, 2. Flagging, growing weak (said of the pulse). [A, 325 (a, 21).]

DECUSSATE, v. intr. De-ku^s'at. Gr., χαιάειν. Lat., decussari. Fr., déculser. Ger., kreuzen. To form a decussation.

DECUSSATE, DECUSSATED, adj's. De-ku^s'at. -at-e²d. Gr., χαιρός. Lat., decussatus, decussativus. Fr., déculsatif, déculsée. Ger., kreuzweisstehend. Crossed, forming a decussation (in botany), said of pairs of leaves, etc., when each pair stands at right angles to the pair above or below it. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24); L, 343.]

DECUSSATIO (Lat.), n. f. De(de²)-ku^s(ku⁴s)-sa(sa³)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., decussationis. See DECUSSATION.—D. corporum pyramidalium, D. fascienlorum pyramidalium. See DECUSSATION of the pyramids.—D. fontinalis [Spitzka]. See FOUNTAIN-DECUSSATION.—D. nervorum. Decussation of nerves or of nerve-fibres. [a, 18].—D. nervorum optiorum. See CHIASM.—D. piniformis [Spitzka]. See PINIFORM DECUSSATION.—D. pontis Varolii. The crossing of the superficial and deep transverse fibres of the pons Varolii from side to side in the median line. [L, 50 (a, 18).]—D. pyramidum. See DECUSSATION of the pyramids. [L, 50 (a, 18).]—D. tegmenti caudicis cerebri. See WERNEKINCK'S COMMISSURE.—D. tractuum optiorum. See CHIASM.

DECUSSATION, n. De-ku^s'a'shu³n. Gr., χαιρός. Lat., decussatio (from decussare, to place crosswise in the form of an X), decussis (from decem, ten, and as, a coin [a coin stamped with the numeral X]). Fr., déculsation. Ger., Kreuzung, Durchkreuzung. It., decussazione. Sp., decussación. A crossing of structures in the form of the letter X. Cf. CHIASM.—D. of the interolary stratum. See Sensory d. of the pyramids.—D. of the optic nerve. Fr., déculsation des nerfs optiques. Ger., Durchkreuzung der Sehnen. It., decussazione degli nervi ottici. Sp., decussación de los nervios ópticos. See CHIASM.—D. of the pyramids. The d. formed by the anterior pyramids of the medulla oblongata as they separate each into from three to six bundles of fibres which cross obliquely downward to the opposite side of the anterior median fissure, interlacing with similar bundles from the opposite pyramids. Having crossed from one side of the medulla to the other, these bundles become reunited and penetrate more deeply into the spinal cord, where they occupy the posterior part of the lateral columns of the cord. [L, 50 (a, 18).]—Fontain-d. [Spitzka]. A d. such as that of the nerve-fibres in the cortex of the anterior corpora quadrigemina. ["Jour. of Nerv. and Ment. Dis.," July, 1880, p. 408 (K).]—Fontain-like tegmental d. See Tegmental d. of Meynert.—Inferior d. See D. of the pyramids.—Middle sensory d. A d. described by Huguénin as formed by a few fibres from the posterior cornu which cross in the median line between the upper and the lower pyramids. [Hoffman-Schwalbe (a, 18).]—Motor d. See D. of the pyramids.—Pineal d. [Spitzka]. The d. of fibres of the inner division of the reticular formation, because of its resemblance to a pine-cone on cross-section. ["Jour. of Nerv. and Ment. Dis.," April, 1880, p. 208 (K).]—Piniform d. See Sensory d. of the pyramids.—Pyramidal d. See D. of the pyramids.—Sensory d. of the pyramids. The crossing of fibres derived from the funiculi cuneati of the spinal cord which takes place in the upper part of the medulla oblongata, between the anterior pyramids and the gray floor of the fourth ventricle, and is not apparent by external inspection of the medulla. [Gegenbaur (a, 18).]—Sensory d., Superior d. [Meynert]. The d. of the outer fasciculi of the anterior pyramids of the spinal cord, whereby they enter the posterior columns. This he distinguishes from the inferior or motor, which occurs in the region of the first and second cervical nerves. [I, 31 (K).]—Tegmental d. of Meynert. Ger., Haubenkreuzung von Meynert. Of forel, the d. of nerve-fibres in the cortex of the anterior corpora quadrigemina. ["Jour. of Nerv. and Ment. Dis.," July, 1880, p. 407 (K).]—Upper pyramidal d. See Sensory d. of the pyramids.—Ventral d. of the pyramids. Ger., ventraler Kreuzung. See D. of the pyramids.

DECUSSATIVUS (Lat.), adj. De(de²)-ku^s(ku⁴s)-sa²t(sa³t)-i(e)^r-vu³s(wu⁴s). See DECUSSATE (adj.).

DECUSSIO (Lat.), n. f. De(da)-ku^s(ku⁴s)/si²-o. Gen., decussationis. From decutere, to shake aside. Gr., χάρις. The act of using the decussorium (q. v.).

DECUSSORIUM (Lat.), n. n. De(da)-ku^s(ku⁴s)-so^ri²-u³m-(u⁴m). Fr., déculsoire. An instrument for depressing the dura mater after trephining, to facilitate the escape of pus. [E; L, 30, 44.]

DECYL, n. De²s'i²l. From δέκα, ten, and ἄλγ, matter. Fr., décyle. A monatomic radicle, C₁₀H₂₁. [A, 385 (a, 21); B, 158 (a, 24).]—D. alcohol. See DECATYL ALCOHOL.—D. hydride. See DECANE.

DECYLENE, n. De²s'i²l-en. Fr., décylène. Ger., Decylen. See DECINE.

DECYLLIC, adj. De²s'i²l'i²k. Fr., décylitique. Ger., decylisch. Containing the radicle decyl. [a, 24].—D. acid. An acid, C₉H₁₉CO.OH, isomeric with capric acid.

DEFURFURATION, n. De-fu²r-fu²-ra'shu²n. Lat., defurfuratio (from de, from, and furfur, bran). Branny desquamation. [A, 326 (a, 21).]

DEFUSELATION, n. De-fu²-se²l-a'shu²n. The process of freeing spirit from fusel oil; e. g., by filtering the crude spirit through freshly ignited and finely divided wood charcoal. [B, 3 (a, 27).]

DEFUSION, n. De-fu²'zhu²n. Lat., defusio (from defundere, to pour out). See DECANANTION.

DEG (Hind.), n. Steel filings. [Balfour (a, 24).]

DÉGAGEMENT (Fr.), n. Da-ga²zh-ma²n². See DISENGAGEMENT.

DEGEN (Ger.), n. Da'ze²n. A term for several oils. [a, 24.]—D'81, Schwarzer D., Birch-oil. [B, 270 (a, 24).]—Weisser D., Oil of turpentine. [B, 270 (a, 24).]

DEGENERACY, n. De-je²n'u²r-a-si². Degeneration, in the sense of an absence or loss of that degree of development or energy seen in the ancestry of an organism; reversion to a lower type. [a, 17; a, 24.]

DEGENERATION, n. De-je²n-u⁸r-a'shu²n. Gr., νοησία. Lat., degeneratio (from degenerare, to degererate). Fr., dégénération, dégénérescence. Ger., D., Entartung. It., degenerazione. Sp., degeneración. Loss of race characteristics; of tissue, structural impairment; in botany, the transformation of parts so as to render a plant asymmetrical or irregular in form (as when undeveloped stamens become filiform bodies or scales; stamens and pistils, petals; or florets, leaves). [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Acute fatty d. A disease rarely observed in man, but not infrequently seen among animals. In colts it is known as foot-balt. It occurs in puerperal women in the form of acute yellow atrophy of the liver. [a, 25.]—Adipose d. See Fatty d.—Albuminoid d. See Amyloid d.—Albuminous d. Ger., albuminöse Entartung. Albuminous infiltration. [D, 3.]—Amyloid d. Lat., morbus amyloides (seu lardaceus, seu cereus). Fr., dardacée, maladie amyloïde. Ger., speckige (oder amyloïde, oder wachsartige) D., Speckentartung, Amyloidentartung. It., degenerazione lardacea, malattia amiloidea. Sp., degeneración amiloidea (ó lardacea). Lardaceous [Portal and Abercrombie] or waxy d. (or disease). A lesion in which the normal textural elements are transformed into, or infiltrated with, a peculiar substance suggesting, on the one hand, an alliance (in some respects only) with the chemical characters of amyloid compounds, and, on the other, with albuminous substances similar to those which pervade the tissues of foetal life. The Royal College of Physicians of London regards it as a substantive disease. Called also bacon-like or lardaceous (by Hodgkin and Bright, albuminous infiltration; by Budd, scrofulous enlargement (of the liver); by Oppolzer and Schrant, colloid d.; by Meckel, cholesterolin disease; by various British writers, waxy d.; and by others hyaloid d. and vitreous d. [D.] Cf. AMYLOID (4th def.).—Atheromatous d. Replacement of a tissue by a material resembling atheroma (2d def.).—Bacony d. See Amyloid d.—Black d. See ANTHRACOSIS (4th def.) and MELANOSIS.—Calcareous d. Fr., dégénérescence calcaire. Ger., Verkalkung, Versteinigung, Verkreidung. It., degenerazione calcare. Sp., degeneración calcárea. The impregnation of the tissues and the gland secretions with calcium or magnesium salts, especially carbonates and phosphates. [D.] See CRETIFICATION and CALCIFICATION.—Caseous d. See CASEATION.—Cellulose d. Fr., dégénérescence cellulosée. Ger., Celluloseentartung. It., degenerazione cellulosa. Sp., degeneración celulosa. See Amyloid d.—Cheesy d. See CASEATION.—Cholesterin d. Fr., dégénérescence cholesterique. Ger., Cholesterinentartung. It., degenerazione colesterica. Sp., degeneración colestérica. Meckel's term for waxy d., on account of the abundance of cholesterol in the waxy material, and the similarity of the reaction. [D, 3.]—Colloid d. Fr., dégénérescence colloïde. Ger., Colloidentartung, colloïde D. D. into colloid (3d def.). See also Amyloid d.—Cystic d. Fr., dégénérescence kystique. Ger., cystische D. The formation of a number of disseminated cysts in an organ or its enlargement in the form of a cyst (as in the kidney). In the chorion it forms the so-called vesicular mole.—Cystoid d. of the retina [Nettleship]. Fr., dégénération kystoïde de la rétine. Ger., cystoïde Entartung der Netzhaut. It., degenerazione cistoidea della retina. Sp., degeneración cistoidea de la retina. Oedema of the retina as described by Iwanoff. Similar changes are found in the retina at all ages and at all portions of the retina. Cystoid spaces are found in both granule layers, are round or oval, and are surrounded by hypertrophied radial fibres. ("Roy. Lond. Opth. Hosp. Rep.," vii, p. 3 (F).)—Descending secondary d. Fr., dégénération descendente secondaire. Ger., secundäre absteigende D. In neuropathology, the destruction and disintegration of nerve-fibres from above downward, i. e., from the central or cerebral extremity of such fibres toward their peripheral extremity. This process is caused by the presence of some lesion (called primary) which interrupts the continuity of the degenerating fibres and marks the upper limit of the degeneration. The myelin of each fibre first, and the axis cylinder later, become broken up into irregular masses which are subsequently subdivided into small, fatty, granular globules which ultimately become absorbed. The d. is due to the separation of the fibre from its trophic centre (q. v.) and involves the motor fibres of the encephalon and spinal cord. [Bastian, "Paralysis" (a, 18).]—Earthy d. See CRETIFICATION, Calcareous d., and CALCIFICATION.—Fascicular d. Fr., dégénération fasciculaire. Ger., Fascicularentartung. It., degenerazione fascicolare. Sp., degeneración fascicular. An atrophic process in paralyzed muscles due to injury or disease of the motor ganglion-cells of the central tube of gray matter of the spinal cord or of the efferent fibres which connect them with the muscles. [D, 35.]—Fatty d. Lat., degeneratio lipamotodes. Fr., dégénérescence graisseuse. Ger., Fettentartung, Fettd., fettige D., Verfettung. It., degenerazione grassosa. Sp., degeneración grassosa. The replacement of normal histological elements by fat. In the muscular fibres of the heart the albuminoid constituents are split up, and within them microscopic particles of fat are deposited. The transverse striæ at length disappear, and functional activity is lost in the affected fibres. [a, 25.]—Fettd' (Ger.). See Fatty d.—Fibro-fatty d. of the placenta [Robin]. Fr., dégénérescence fibro-graisseuse du placenta, fibrome des villosités et de la séroline [Ercolani]. Ger., Fettig-faserartige D. des Mutterkuchens. It., degenerazione fibro-grassosa del la placenta. Sp., degeneración fibro-grassosa de la placenta. Fatty d. of the placenta associated with fibromatous d. of the chorionic villi and of the decidua serotina. [A, 15.]—Fibroid d. Fr., dégénérescence fibroïde. Ger., fibroïde Entartung. A very gradual transformation of tissue, with scarcely any perceptible exudation of material capable of growth, into a material having a fibre-like appearance. [A, 2.]—Fibrous d. of the heart. A connective-tissue hyperplasia, due to chronic interstitial inflammation. [Hayden (a, 25).]—Gelatiniform d. Fr., dégénération gélatiniforme [Cruveilhier]. See Colloid d.—Granular d. Fr., dégénérescence granulaire. Ger., körnige D. It., degenerazione granulosa. Sp., degeneración granular. Parenchymatous d. or albuminous metamorphosis in which the distinguishing feature is that the granular cloudiness seen under the microscope is due to a deposit of albuminoid molecules, and is removed by the addition of acetic acid in excess. [D, 4.]—Gray d. Fr., dégénérescence grise. Ger., graue D. It., degenerazione grigia. Sp., degeneración gris. D. resulting from chronic inflammation in nervous tissue, its peculiarity being the gray color which is apparent. [D, 35.]—Hyaline d. Fr., dégénérescence hyaline. Ger., hyaline D. A form of d. in which deposits of hyaline material, along with those of calcareous or other pathological substances, occur. [Holschewnikoff, "Arch. f. path. Anat. u. Physiol. u. f. klin. Med.," cxii, p. 552; "Fortschr. d. Med.," Nov. 15, 1888, p. 867.]—Hyaloid d. Fr., dégénérescence hyaloïde. Ger., hyaloïde D. It., degenerazione ialoidea. Sp., degeneración hialoidea. See Amyloid d.—Hydrocarbonaceous d. Fr., dégénérescence hydrocarbonée. Ger., Kohlenhydratentartung. It., degenerazione idrocarbonacea. Sp., degeneración hidrocarbonácea. Of Paschutin, a special d. of the tissues, comparable to fatty d., which he supposes to be peculiar to diabetes. ["Ctbl. f. d. med. Wiss.," No. 40, 1884; "Rev. d. sci. méd.," Jan., 1885, p. 217.]—Käsig d. (Ger.). See CASEATION.—Körnige D. (Ger.). [D.]—Mineral d. See CALCIFICATION.—Mucoid d. Ger., schleimige D. A variety occurring usually in connective tissues, in which the matrix is converted into a jelly-like substance containing mucin. It may be either physiological or pathological. [D, 4; L, 352.]—Myeline d. The breaking down of tissue cells into myelin; a process sometimes occurring coincidentally with fatty d. in the pulmonary alveoli in chronic pneumonia. [D, 4.]—Myxomatous d. See Mucoid d.—Ossific d. See OSSIFICATION.—Parenchymatous d. A form of d. such as may occur in the acute nephritis of pregnancy, diphtheria, or an acute attack of fever. It is not usually associated with dropsy; the urine is of about the normal quantity, and may contain from 10 to 25 per cent. of albumin; it is often recovered from, but, if it is fatal, the kidneys are found to be enlarged, with more or less hypertrophy of the parenchyma. [D, 30.]—Pigmentary d., Pigment d. A pathological condition characterized by the presence of dark pigment granules; often found in the muscles in connection with atrophy due to cachexia, diminished food-supply, or the marasmus of old age. [E, 4.]—Putrid d. See HOSPITAL GANGRENE.—Schleimige D. (Ger.). See Mucoid d.—Secondary d. of the spinal cord. Fr., dégénérescence secondaire de la moelle épinière. Ger., secundäre D. im Rückenmark. It., degenerazione secondaria della midolla spinale. Sp., degeneración secundaria della médula dorsal. A variety of fatty d. described by Türck in 1850. It extends above the affected portions, in the middle segments of the posterior columns (the parts affected in ascending d.), and below them in the posterior segments of the lateral columns (the parts affected in descending d.). [D, 4.]—Speckige D. (Ger.). See Amyloid d.—Theroid d. In psychiatry, the lowering of mental faculties and of instincts in the human being, so that they resemble those of lower animals. [Maudsley (a, 18).]—Trabecular d. Of the bronchial wall, a multiplication and increase in volume of the fine tracts of elastic and inelastic connective tissue found in the fibrous sheath of the bronchus and its cartilages. [L, 20 (a, 18).]—Uritic d. Fr., dégénérescence urique. The invasion of the tissues by deposits of uric acid and urates. [a, 18.]—Virchow's d. See Amyloid d.—Vitreous d. See Waxy d. (2d def.) and Amyloid d.—Wallerian d. The fatty d. occurring after the division of a mixed nerve, in its peripheral portion only; a process which takes place, according to the theory formulated by Waller, that nerve-fibres degenerate when separated from their trophic centre, and that regeneration, if it occurs, is centrifugal, being due to an active growth of the nerve-tribes of the central segment. [D, 35; Müller's "Archiv," 1852, p. 392 (D).]—Waxy d. Fr., dégénérescence cirreuse. Ger., Wachsartung. It., degenerazione cerea. Sp., degeneración cerosa (ó cérea). 1. See Hyaline d. 2. See Amyloid d. 3. A condition frequently seen in the acute febrile affections, in which the muscular elements are converted into a waxy or vitreous mass, and the muscular connective tissue undergoes proliferation. [E, 4.]

DEGENERATIVE, adj. De-je²n-u⁸r-at-i²v. Lat., degenerativus. Fr., dégénératif. Ger., degenerativ, abtend. It., Sp., degenerativo. Pertaining to degeneration. [D.]

DÉGÉNÉRÉ (Fr.), adj. Da-zha-na-ra. Degenerated; as a n., an insane person. [a, 18.]

DEGENERESCENCE, n. De-je²n-u⁸r-e²s'e²ns. See DEGENERATION.

DÉGÉNÉRESCENCE (Fr.), n. Da-zha-na-re²s-a²n²s. See DEGENERATION.—D. accidentelle. The degeneration of tissue due to disease and not to old age. [a, 18.]—D. acéteuse. The production of acetic acid by fermentation, accompanied by lactic acid, butyric acid, alcohol, etc., in the chronic gastric catarrh of beer-drinkers, or of those affected by scirrhus cancer, gastralgia, or stenosis of the biliary ducts. [L, 88 (a, 27).]—D. cartilagineuse. A rare form of degeneration of the stomach. The walls of that organ become cartilaginous and acquire the thickness of an inch. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. cirreuse. See Waxy DEGENERATION.—D. colloïde du derme. See Colloid MILIUM.—D. crouteuse du mamelon [Velpeau]. A chronic incrustated eczema of the nipple and its areola.—D. des eaux. The transition of the sulphides of sulphurous waters to the form of sulphates. [A, 385 (a, 21).]—D. épineuse [De Candolle]. The metamorphosis of branches (as in certain plum-trees, the petioles in the genus Astragalus, the stipules of many Acacia, and the folioles of the involucre of the Carduaceæ) by which they become spines. [B, 1 (a, 24).]—D. filamentueuse [De Candolle]. The transformation of the petioles of pinnate leaves (as in the Leguminosæ, the peduncles of the vine, and the stipules of the genus Smilax) into tendrils. [B, 1 (a, 24).]—D. foliacée. See D. membranueuse.—D. graisseuse. See Fatty DEGENERATION.—D. hydatique. See Cystic DEGENERATION.—D. intellectuelle. A morbid deviation from a primitive type supposed to be endowed with the highest intellectual powers. [Morel (a, 18).]—D. mem- bruceuse [De Candolle]. The transformation of the cylindrical stems of certain plants into leaves. [B, 1 (a, 24)].—D. morale. A morbid deviation from a primitive type supposed to possess the highest moral attributes. [Morel (a, 18)].—D. prématurée. See D. accidentelle.—D. scarieuse et charnue [De Candolle]. The transformation of vegetable organs naturally thin and membranous into a thick, dry, and hygroscopic tissue (as in the radical leaves of certain lilies and the calyx of the Synantheraea). [B, 1 (a, 24)].—D. sénile. The gradual decadence and loss of vitality of the tissue due to advancing age.—D. urique. See Uratie.—DEGENERATION.—D. velvétique. A form of alteration of the structure of articular cartilage in arthritis deformans and in other varieties of arthritis. The surface of the cartilage assumes the appearance of velvet and becomes worn away by use. This disintegration of the cartilage may continue until the bone is denuded. [a, 18.]

DEGENKRAUT (Ger.), n. Da'ge'n-kra'z-ut. The genus Xyris. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

DEGHA, n. The Ricinus communis. [A, 447 (a, 21).]

DEGLIG, n. Fr., déglig. The Balanites aegyptiaca. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DEGLUTINATION, n. De-glu't-ti²n-a(a³)/shu²n. Lat., deglutination (from deglutinare, to unglue). See DÉCOULEMENT and DISOCIATION.

DEGLUTITEUR (Fr.), n. Da-glu²-te-tu²r. A muscle concerned in the function of deglutition. [L, 41.]

DEGLUTITION, n. De-glu't-ti²sh'u²n. Lat., deglutitio. Fr., déglutition. Ger., Verschluckung. It., deglutizione. Sp., deglutición. The act of swallowing; effected by a series of movements, partly automatic, partly under the control of the will, by which a substance is carried from the mouth into the stomach. [K.]—Difficult. See DYSPHAGIA.

DEGLUTITIONAL, DEGLUTITIONOUS, DEGLUTITORY, adj's. De-glu't-ti²sh'u²n-a²-i, -u³s, -glu²ti²-to-ri². Pertaining to deglutition. [L, 14.]

DEGLUTNORE, n. In Africa, the Phoenix dactylifera. [B, 121.]

DEGMOS (Lat.). DĒGMUS (Lat.), n's m. De'g(dag)'mo²s, -mu³s(mu³s). Gr., δῆγμος. Ger., Beissen. Of Hippocrates, a gnawing pain, particularly in the stomach. [A, 325 (a, 21).]

DÉGONFLEMENT (Fr.), n. Da-go²n²f'l-ma²n². The subsidence or reduction of tumidity. [F. Verchère, "Union méd.," Jan. 10, 1888, p. 37.]

DÉGORGEMENT (Fr.), n. Da-gorz'h-ma²n². The subsidence or reduction of engorgement. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DÉGOURDI (Fr.), adj. Da-gur-de. Slightly warmed from 15° to 20° C. or thereabouts. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DÉGOURDISSEMENT (Fr.), n. Da-gur-des-ma²n². The re-establishment of circulation, sensibility, power of movement, warmth, etc., in a part. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DÉGOÛT (Fr.), n. Da-gu. Repugnance to taking food. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DÉGOÛTÉ (Fr.), adj. Da-gu-ta. Having a repugnance to food. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DEGRADATION, n. De'g-ra'd-a'shu²n. From degradare, to degrade. Fr., dégradation. The descent from a higher to a lower type (said of animals, etc.). [L.]

DEGRADATIONAL, adj. De'g-ra'd-a'shu²n-a². Pertaining to degeneration.

DEGREASE [S. H. Gage], v. tr. De-gres'. Fr., dégraisser. Ger., entfetten. To remove fatty matter (e. g., from bones). [J, 55, 100.]

DEGREE, n. De'g-re'. Fr., degré. Ger., Grad. It., Sp., grado. One of the equal parts into which a scale, as of a thermometer, is divided.

DEGUSTATION, n. De-gu's-ta'shu²n. Lat., degustatio (from de gustare, to taste). Fr., dégustation. Ger., Kosten. It., degustazione. Sp., catadura. A tasting. [L, 56.]

DEGUTT, n. Lat., oleum moscoviticum (seu rusci), balsamum lithuanicum. Fr., dégut. Ger., schwarzer Degen. Birch-tar. [B, L, 30; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxx, p. 234 (a, 21).]

DÉHANCHÉ (Fr.), adj. Da-ha²n²sh-a. Having one or both angles of the haunches more or less depressed in consequence of a fracture (said of horses). [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DEHEB, DEHEBEB, n's. Old names for gold. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DEHENE (Ar.), n. An old name for blood. [L, 94.]

DEHENES, n. An old name for ink. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DEHENEZ, n. An old name for vitriol. [L, 94.]

DEHIM (Ar.), n. See DEHENE.

DEHISCE, v. intr. De-hi²s'. Lat., dehiscere. Ger., aufspringen. To split open or gape, like the anther-lobes or the capsules of a mature plant, to emit their contents. [B, 291 (a, 24).]

DEHISCED, adj. De-hi²s'd'. Simply separated (said of ovules). [L, 353.] In botany, having undergone dehiscence.

DEHISCENCE, n. De-hi²s'e²ns. Lat., dehiscencia. Fr., déhiscence, chute de l'œuf (2d def.), délivrance de l'œuf (2d def.), travail résiculaire (2d def.). Ger., Dehiscenz, Aufspringen. It., deiscenza. Sp., dehiscencia. 1. In plants, the act of dehiscing, gaping, or splitting open (said particularly of the anthers when emitting the pollen, and of the fruit when it discharges its seed). 2. The bursting of a Graafian follicle. [B, 291 (a, 24)].—Abuornal d. See Irregular d.—Apical d., Apicilar d. Lat., dehiscencia apicularis. Ger., spitzige Dehiscenz. A partial d. occurring at the top of the capsule only. [B, 77, 291 (a, 24)].—Basilar d. Lat., dehiscencia basilaris. Ger., basiläre Dehiscenz. A partial d. occurring at the base of the capsule only. [B, 291 (a, 24)].—Circumscissile d. See Pyxidiate d.—Complete valvular d. D. extending along the whole length of the capsule, forming 2 valves. [B, 291 (a, 24)].—D. by pores. See Porous d.—Dentate d. Lat., dehiscencia dentata. Ger., gezahnte Dehiscenz. A partial d. where the splitting at the top of the capsule gives it the appearance of teeth. [B, (a, 24)].—Extrorse d. A d. of an anther when the splitting is on the side farthest from the pistil, or the outer surface. [B, 7, 123 (a, 24)].—Introrse d. A d. in which the anther splits on the side next to the pistil or centre of the flower, as in Faconia and Aclæa. [B, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Irregular d. Lat., dehiscencia irregularis. Ger., unregelmässiges Aufspringen. A d. which takes place in an indefinite manner, or by rupture of the walls of the pericarp, as in the snap-dragon. [B, 1, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Lateral d. Lat., dehiscencia lateralis. Ger., seitliches Aufspringen. A d. of an anther by the sides, as in Iris and some grasses. [B, 77 (a, 24)].—Loculicidal d. Lat., dehiscencia loculicida. Ger., fachspaltige Aufspringen. A d. where the carpels open by their dorsal sutures into the loculi or cavities of the cells, as in the lily, iris, tulip, etc. [B, 77, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Loculicidally-septifragal d. A septifragal d. in which the splitting is at first loculicidal, as in the thorn-apple. [B, 77 (a, 24)].—Normal d. See Regular d.—Poricidal d. See Porous d.—Porous d. Lat., dehiscencia porosa. A d. when the splitting only extends in a capsule for a short distance, and when it then takes place by pores or irregular openings, toward the middle or base, as in Campnula, or at both top or base, as in snap-dragon. It also takes place in anthers. [B, 77, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Pyxidiate d. Lat., dehiscencia pyxidiate. Ger., büchsenförmiges Aufspringen. A d. in which the upper portion of the capsule separates from the lower, like a lid, by a transverse d., as in Hioscyamus, some Guttiferae, etc. [B, 1, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Regular d. Lat., dehiscencia regularis. Ger., regelmässiges Aufspringen. A d. produced by the splitting of the upper end of the valves. [B, 1 (a, 24)].—Septicidal d. Lat., dehiscencia septicida. Ger., wandspaltiges Aufspringen. A d. of the pericarp in which the splitting takes place along the septa or partitions, as in Aristolochia, Colchicum autumnale, etc. [B, 1, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Septicidally-septifragal d. A septifragal d. where the splitting takes place first in a septicidal manner, as in the fruit of Linum catharticum. [B, 77 (a, 24)].—Septifragal d. Lat., dehiscencia septifraga. Ger., wandbreitendes Aufspringen. A d. of a pericarp where the valves break away from the septa, as in Erica, Cobaea, Datura stramonium, etc., in which case the septa are left attached to the columella. [B, 1, 77, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Sutural d. Lat., dehiscencia suturalis. Ger., Aufspringen in einer Naht. A d. of the pericarp along the sutures, either along the marginal sutures only, as in hellebore, by the dorsal sutures, as in magnolia, or along both, as in the pea and bean. [B, 291 (a, 24)].—Transverse d. Lat., dehiscencia transversalis. Ger., queres Aufspringen. A d. crosswise of an anther—i. e., at right angles to its length; horizontal, as in Achemilla arvensis, Lemma, etc. [B, 77, 291 (a, 24)].—Valvular d. Lat., dehiscencia valvularis. Fr., déhiscence valvulaire. Ger., klappiges Aufspringen. A d. in which the pericarp opens vertically along the sutures, forming regular parts called valves; it includes 5 varieties, sutural, septicidal, loculicidal, septifragal, and porous. It is said also of an anther when it opens by lids, as in the barberry. [B, 34, 291 (a, 24).]

DEHISCENT, adj. De-hi²s'e²nt. Lat., dehiscens. Fr., dehiscant. Ger., aufspringend, zerspringend. It., deiscante. Sp., dehisciente. Dehiscing. [a, 24.]

DEHISCENTIA (Lat.), n. f. De(de²)-hi²s-se²n(ke²n)/shi²(ti²)-a³. See DEHISCENCE.—D. decussantium. Of Hyrtl, that variety of anastomosis per dehiscendum in which two arteries cross each other and communicate at the point of intersection. [A, 19].—D. juxtapositaram. Of Hyrtl, that variety of anastomosis per dehiscendum in which two arteries running side by side communicate with each other at a certain point. [A, 19.]

DEHNBARKEIT (Ger.), n. Dan'ba'r-kit. Dilatibility; expansibility. [B, 49.]

DEHNEN (Ger.), DEHNUNG (Ger.), n's. Dan'e²n, -un². Stretching, distension. [L, 43.]

DEHOREG (Ar.), n. The Vicia sativa. [B, 88.]

DEHUMANIZATION, n. De-hu²-ma²n-i²z-a'shu²n. From de priv., and humanus, human. The more or less complete loss of human characteristics, mental or physical. Vaccine lymph is said to be humanized when it has been propagated through one or more human beings, and to be dehumanized (i. e., deprived of some supposed modification impressed upon it by the human system) by retrovaccination.

DEHYDRACETIC ACID, n. De-hid-ra²s-et'i²z. Fr., acide déhydracétique. Ger., Dehydracetsäure. A monobasic crystalline acid, C₆H₇O₄, being a quadruple molecule of acetic acid less 4 molecules of water (4C₂H₃O₂ - 4H₂O = C₆H₇O₄). [B, 4 (a, 24).]

DÉLIRE (Fr.), n. Da-ler. See DELIRIUM and MANIA.—D. à deux. Syn.: folie à deux. Delirium with hallucinations, occurring in two persons, usually in the same family, ordinarily communicated to one patient by the other, and presenting the same characteristics in both. [a, 18.]—D. aiguë. Of Georget, see D. fébrile.—D. alcoolique. See DELIRIUM tremens.—D. alcoolique affébrile. Of Magnan, simple delirium tremens without fever. [a, 18.]—D. à quatre. Syn.: folie à quatre. Delirium presenting similar characteristics in four persons of the same family. [Martieneq (a, 18).] Cf. D. à deux.—D. à trois. Syn.: folie à trois. Similar delirium in three patients. [a, 18.] Cf. D. à deux.—D. avec conscience. See Primordial delirium.—D. béin. Of Savigny and Becquet, a mild form of delirium of inanition. The cerebral disturbance appears suddenly, the delirium is calm, without excitement; the patient speaks words without sequence, sometimes unintelligible, provoked by incessant hallucinations which are not terrifying, and no longer recognizes the persons surrounding him. When his attention is aroused, he mumbles a few words, and, after a few moments of silence, renews his vagaries. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—D. crapuleux. See DELIRIUM tremens.—D. de Dupuytren. See DELIRIUM nervosum traumaticum.—D. de la folie. Of Londe, the general delirium of mania, and the partial delirium of the different forms of paranoia. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—D. de la lactation. Delirium manifesting itself habitually toward the second or third month of lactation, having as principal causes anemia and debility. It assumes especially the melancholic type, and the prognosis is less favorable than that of puerperal mania properly so called. [Ball (a, 18).]—D. de la phonation. Loss of complete control of speech, observed in certain choreic patients, who utter at frequent intervals and against their will words without sense or words having a foul meaning. [Ball (a, 18).]—D. démonomaniaque. A variety of religious delirium in which the patient, generally of the feminine sex, believes herself to be possessed by one or by several demons, who vomit insults and obscenities from their mouths, and to whom the patient often replies, speaking to herself in a similar manner. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—D. de négations. That variety of melancholia in which the person affected looks upon the real world about him as having ceased to exist, and as having been replaced by another, of his own imagining, in which he is tormented to find himself. [Cotard, "Arch. de neurol." Sept., 1882, p. 152.]—D. d'énormité. A variety of melancholic delirium in which the patient believes that the crime or the sin of which he is self-accused is too great to be forgiven. He continually reproaches himself in the severest terms, and considers no punishment too great for the enormity of his sin. ["Ann. méd-psych." (a, 18).]—D. des aboyeuses. An hysterical manifestation characterized by repeated vocal sounds more or less like the barking (aboiement) of a dog; observed among women congregated together, as in boarding-schools and convents. [A, 321.]—D. des actes. A form of insanity in which there is continually a tendency to act impulsively. Its subjects may indulge in sexual improprieties or commit theft, incendiarism, etc. [D, 36.]—D. des convalescents. Delirium observed during convalescence from severe acute diseases, such as typhoid fever, pneumonia, intermittent fever, cholera, eruptive fevers, and diphtheria. It is usually of a violent form, resembling maniacal delirium, with hallucinations. It begins in the morning in general, and lasts from a few hours to two or three days. It usually terminates favorably. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. des dégénérés. A form of delirium of long duration occurring in persons presenting intellectual degeneration. The delirium is changeable, taking various forms. [Saury (a, 18).]—D. des femmes en couches. Puerperal insanity. [A, 250 (a, 21).]—D. des grands seigneurs. See DELIRIUM grandiosum.—D. des ivrognes. See DELIRIUM tremens.—D. des opérés. See DELIRIUM nervosum traumaticum.—D. des persécutés. Lat., delirium persecutio. Ger., Verfolgungsmelancholie. A form of partial, systematic delirium in which the patient seeks to explain his extraordinary sensations (which are usually disagreeable) by invoking the hostility of some powerful and occult agency; sometimes he attributes his sufferings to some subtle force, such as electricity, magnetism, chemistry, or physics; sometimes to the police, freemasons, Jesuits, etc. He often creates new names for his supposed persecutors. This form of delirium occasionally leads to homicide, the patient believing that he is taking revenge. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. des sentiments. Ger., Gefühlsdelirium. Delirium in which the affective faculties (the feelings, affections, etc.) are impaired. They may be exalted, diminished, or perverted. The patient may love those whom he formerly hated, or vice versa. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. d'inanition. See DELIRIUM ex inanitione.—Doux. See DELIRIUM mussitans.—D. du toucher. Repugnance to contact, as a feature of insanity. [L, 57.]—D. ébrioux. The delirium of intoxication. [D, 72.]—D. émotif. Syn.: obsession anxiéuse (ou émotive). Of Morel, a symptomatic manifestation of a mental state frequent in different forms of insanity, especially in their period of incubation. It is characterized by the "facility with which the patient receives an impression of a certain order and quickly conforms his thoughts to it, while reason and experience fail to come to his aid to correct these morbid impressions and drive away the baseless terrors which afflict him." [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. essentiel. See Idiopathic delirium.—D. fébrile. Delirium caused by some severe febrile disease, such as typhoid fever, articular rheumatism, pneumonia, etc. It is usually a general incoherent delirium, of a depressive, anxious nature, accompanied by hallucinations or dreams. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—D. furieux. See Maniacal delirium.—D. général. A variety of delirium vesanicum in which the mental disorder invades the entire domain of the psychic faculties, sensibility, understanding, and volition. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—D. grave. Of Savigny and Becquet, a severe form of d. d'inanition appearing at an advanced period of inanition. "The patient, lying upon his back without movement, continually pronounces unintelligible words. The gaze is fixed upon some point in space, though with difficulty, for the eyes are constantly agitated by convulsive movements." The prognosis of this state is unfavorable, for after forty-eight hours the patient almost inevitably dies. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—D. hydrophobique. A variety of acute febrile delirium in which the patient manifests the utmost abhorrence of liquids, and furiously resists every attempt to induce him to drink. This form of delirium may occur in mania, melancholia, puerperal insanity, alcoholism, idiocy, general paresis, etc. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. hypochondriaque. A delirium in which the delirious ideas have exclusive reference to the physical individuality of the patient, and are generally based upon some modification of visceral sensibility. Patients presenting this state imagine that animals are lodged in their bodies, that frogs or serpents are moving about in their bowels; or else they pretend that they have no viscera, that they have no intestines, or stomach, or mouth, or that these organs are no longer performing their functions. They refuse to eat, and resist the impulse to micturate or to defecate, and women often imagine themselves pregnant. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. impulsif. A form of delirium which comprises those maniacal or insane acts that are prompted by a morbid impulse. It is exemplified in kleptomania, pyromania, homicidal monomania, and suicide. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. instinctif. Ger., instinctive Manie. A form of the d. des actes which includes those acts due to a morbid or perverted instinct. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. malicieux. Insanity in which the individual shows malicious impulses of a homicidal, incendiary, or other destructive character. [D.]—D. mélancolique. See DEPRESSIVE DELIRIUM.—D. nerveux. D. nerveux des opérés. See DELIRIUM nervosum traumaticum.—D. non-vesanique. Delirium in persons unaffected with insanity. It includes the febrile delirium of acute or chronic diseases and the nervous delirium of Dupuytren, which is observed after traumatism, surgical operations, or profound emotions. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. organisé. See Partial delirium.—D. panoplioblique (ou des aliénés gémisseurs). A form of delirium found in certain cases of melancholia, characterized by a great anxiety about everything, especially about the immediate interests of life. This anxiety is often so intense that it causes incessant moaning and spasmodic states which may last for years. Questions addressed to the patient are answered by groans or by reproaches. [Morel (a, 18).]—D. professionnel. Symptomatic delirium in which the vagaries pertain to the ordinary occupations of the patient. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—D. raisonnant. See Reasoning mania.—D. réligieux. Delirium in which mystic preoccupations, excessive practices of piety, exaggerated religious scruples, and ecstatic tendencies predominate, accompanied by hallucinations. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. systématique. See Partial delirium.—D. systématique hallucinatoire. Acute or chronic insanity taking the form of maniacal agitation, with delusions of persecution. [P. Maysner, "Allg. ztschr. f. Psych." xlii; "Arch. de neurol." July, 1886, p. 85.]—D. théomaniaque. A variety of religious delirium in which the patient believes himself to be a divine personage. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—D. tranquille. See DELIRIUM placidum.—D. tremblant. See DELIRIUM tremens.—D. véanique. See DELIRIUM vesanicum.

Some of its main characteristics are wealth of conception, rapidity of perception, uncontrollable flow of language, loss of the reflective power, and loss of moral consciousness. [D, 36].—Micromaniacal d. A form of hypochondriacal d. in which the patient believes himself to be a very small child or a dwarf, or that his members are atrophied, etc. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Murmuring d. See D. mussitanus.—Muttering d. A form of d. common in certain fevers, especially in typhoid. In this disease it appears usually between the second and fourth weeks, and manifests itself by incoherent talking, usually in regard to habitual pursuits. [D, 1.]—Operative d. See D. nervosum traumaticum.—Panophobic d. See DELIRIE panophobique des aliénés gémisseurs.—Partial d. Fr., délire partiel. Ger., partielles D. D. affecting only a part of the mental faculties. Certain modes of reasoning, certain acts, are unreasonable, while others are reasonable and sane. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—Post-epileptic d. See D. epilepticum.—Primordial d. Fr., délire primordial. A form of d. characterized by ideas which force themselves upon the mind, and oblige it, in spite of itself, to perform certain intellectual acts. The patient is the first to recognize and deplore this state, but is unable to escape its tyranny. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Reflex d. Fr., délire réflexe. Non-vesanic d. of which the cause is extra-cerebral. [L, 88 (a, 18).]—Rhythmic d. A form of d. in which the patient always speaks in verses, merely made up of similar sounding sentences and words. [Griesinger (a, 18).]—Senile d. D. occurring in senile dementia. [a, 18].—Sensorial d. Fr., délire sensoriel. Ger., Sinnred'. D. of the senses; it comprises hallucinations and illusions. Persons presenting these two kinds of symptoms are not necessarily insane, but the persistence of these symptoms may at last induce insanity. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Sexual d. Fr., délire sexuel. Ger., sexuelles D. A d. in which the patient believes himself to be abnormal or imperfect in his sexual organs, or that they are unfitted to perform their functions. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Sympathetic d. D. produced by action on the brain from a distance, as by the presence of some disease in another part of the body than the brain. It occurs in uterine affections, in genito-urinary diseases, etc. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Symptomatic d. D. occurring in the course of some cerebral disease. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Toxic d. Fr., délire toxique. Ger., Intoxications-d'. D. caused by the presence in the body of some poisonous substance, such as alcohol, belladonna, opium, etc. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Traumatic d. See D. nervosum traumaticum.—Typhoid d. The low, muttering d. of the typhoid state. [D, 1.]—Veränderungsd'. (Ger.) See D. metamorphosis.—Violent d. A form of febrile d. seen in the early stage of fever; accompanied with great excitement, and often with manifestation of great strength. [D, 52.]

DEMULCENT, adj. De-mu²l²-se²nt. Lat., demulcens (from demulcere, to stroke softly). Fr., démulcent. Ger., lindernd. It., Sp., demulcente, demulsiivo. Lubricating, exerting a soothing local action (said of drugs). [B, 5 (a, 21).]

DEMUR (Turk.), n. Iron. [J, 77.]

DEMUSCULATUS (Lat.), adj. De(da)-mu²s(mu²s)-ku²(ku²)-la(-a²)/tu²s(tu²s). From de priv., and musculus, a muscle. See AMYOTUS.

DEMUTHKRAUT (Ger.), n. Da-mut²-kra²-u²t. The Thymus vulgaris. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

DENÆUS (Lat.), adj. De²n(dan)-e²(a²-e²)-u²s(u²s). Gr., δηνάιος. Of long duration; chronic. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DENARCOTIZED, adj. De-na²r²-ko²t-izd. Lat., denarcotisatus (from de priv., and ναρκωτικός, narcotic). Deprived of narcotine. [a, 24.] See OPICUM denarcotisatum.

DENARIUS (Lat.), n. m. De²n(dan)-a(a²)/ri²-u²s(u²s). Gr., δηνάριον. A Roman apothecary's weight equal to the Attic drachma. [A, 325 (a, 21); L, 94 (a, 21).]

DENDRASPIDIÆ (Lat.), n's pl. De²n-dra²s(dra²s)-pi²d²-e(a²-e²)-dra²s(dra²s)-pi²d²-i²d²-e(a²-e²). From déndron, a tree, and σπίς, the asp. A family of the Colubrinae. [L, 357.]

DENDRIFORM, adj. De²n²-dri²-fo²rm. From déndron, a tree, and forma, form. See DENDROID.

DENDRINI (Lat.), n. m. pl. De²n-dri(dre)/ni²(ne). Of Bonorden, a family of the Hyphomycetes, comprising Gliocladium, Monosporium, Verticillium, Diplocladium, Sporotrichum, etc. The type of the family is the genus Dendrina of Fries. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

DENDRITIC, DENDRITICAL, adj's. De²n-dri²t²-i²k, -i²k-a²l. Gr., δένδριτυς. Lat., dendriticus. Fr., dendritique. Ger., bäumähnlich. Tree-like, also resembling foliage.

DENDROBATIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-dro(dro²)-ba²t(ba²)/i²-i²d²-e(a²-e²). A family of the Firmisternia. [L, 288.]

DENDROBIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-dro(dro²)-bi²-e(a²-e²). Of Richard, a division of the Malaxidæ, corresponding to the Dendrobicæ of Lindley. The Dendrobicæ of Lindley are a subtribe of the Malaxææ, consisting of Dendrobium, Macrostomium, Aporum, Diploconchium, Oxytrophium, Diglyphis, Monomeria, Epicranthes, Drymoda, Conchidium, Eria, Bryobium, etc. The Dendrobicæ are: 1. Of Lindley, a section of the Malaxidææ, comprising Cochlia, Lyræa, Megaclinium, Bolbophyllum, Cirrhopetalum, Fritas, Macrostomium, Microcalia, Epicranthes, Monomeria, Stenoglossum, Diglyphis, Mycaranthes, Phreatia, Eria, Aporum, Oxytrophium, Polystachya, Metachilum, and Dendrobium. 2. Of Benham and Hooker, a subtribe of the Epidendrææ, of the order Orchidææ. 3. Of Endlicher and others, a tribe of orchids characterized by a column lying upon the ovary and prolonged far at its base. [B, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

DENDROCALAMEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-dro(dro²)-ka²l²(ka²l²)-a²m(a²m)/e²-e²(a²-e²). From déndron, a tree, and κάλamos, a reed. Of Benham and Hooker, a subtribe of the Bambuseæ, order Gramineæ. [B, 42 (a, 24).]

DENDROCHIROTA (Lat.), n. n. pl. De²n-dro(dro²)-ki²r(ch²e²r)-o²ta². From déndron, a tree, and χειρῶς (from χέρ, a hand). An order of the Eupodiæ, having branching tentacles. [L, 173.]

DENDROCÆLOUS, adj. De²n-dro-sel²-u²s. Lat., dendrocœlus (from déndron, a tree, and κοιλία, the belly). Fr., dendrocœle. Having a branched intestinal canal, belonging to or connected with the Dendrocolata, which are: 1. A section of the Planarida. 2. A suborder of the Turbellaria. The Dendrocœlida are a group of the Turbellaria. [L, 121, 147, 353.]

DENDROCOLAPTUS (Lat.), adj. De²n-dro(dro²)-ko²l²-a²p²(a²p²)/tu²s(tu²s). From déndron, a tree, and κόλαπτειν, to peck at. Characterized by pecking at trees (said of certain climbing birds).

The Dendrocolaptæ, or Dendrocolaptidæ, are a family of the Tracheophonæ. The Dendrocolaptini are a subfamily of the Anabatidæ. [L, 121; "Proc. of the Zool. Soc.," 1886, p. 19 (L).]

DENDRODENTINE, n. De²n-dro-de²n²-ten. From déndron, a tree, and dens, a tooth. The dentine of the teeth of fossil fishes of the genus Dendrodus from the old red sandstone; so named from the general resemblance of a section to a tree, due to the arrangement of the dentine around the branched pulp or medullary cavity. The appearance in section is also as if the tooth were made up of many small teeth fused together. [Owen (J).]

DENDRODES (Lat.), adj. De²n-dro²/dez(das). See DENDROID.

DENDRODONT, adj. De²n²-dro²-do²nt. From déndron, a tree, and δόντις, a tooth. Having the dentin of the variety known as dendrodentine (said of certain fishes). [L, 14.]

DENDROCIOUS, adj. De²n-dre²/shu²s. From déndron, a tree, and οἶκος, a house. Inhabiting trees. [L, 341.]

DENDROGRAPHY, n. De²n-dro²g²/ra²f²-i². Lat., dendrographia (from déndron, a tree, and γράφειν, to write). Fr., dendrographie. Ger., Baumbeschreibung. It., dendrografia. Sp., dendrografia. The botany of trees. [a, 24.]

DENDROID, adj. De²n²/droid. Gr., δένδροειδής (from déndron, a tree, and εἶδος, resemblance). Lat., dendroides, dendroides, dendroideus. Fr., dendroïde. Ger., baumförmig. It., Sp., dendroïdo. Having the form or appearance of a tree (said chiefly of plants of small growth, such as cryptogams and algae, when branched at the top, like a tree). [B, 1, 19, 121, 123 (a, 24).]

DENDROLIBANUS (Lat.), n. m. De²n-dro(dro²)-li²b²-a²n(a²n)-u²s(u²s). Gr., δένδρוליβανος. The Kosmarium officinalis. [L, 94.]

DENDROLITHAIRES (Fr.), n. pl. Da²n²-dro-le-ta²r. From déndron, a tree, and λίθος, a stone. The corals. [L, 231.]

DENDROLOGY, n. De²n-dro²l²-o²-j²i². Lat., dendrologia (from déndron, a tree, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., dendrologie. Ger., Dendrologie, Holzpflanzenlehre. See DENDROGRAPHY.

DENDROMYINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-dro(dro²)-mi²(mu²)-i²(e²)-ne(na²-e²). From déndron, a tree, and μύια, a fly. A subfamily of the Muridæ. [L, 121.]

DENDROPHIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-dro²f²/i²d²-e(a²-e²). From déndron, a tree, and φίδς, a snake. The tree-snakes; a family of the Ophidiæ colubriformes. [L, 121.]

DENDROPHTHOË (Lat.), n. f. De²n-dro²f²/tho²(tho²)-e(a). Gen., dendrophthoes. From déndron, a tree, and φθῆν, decay. Of Martius, a genus of loranthaceous, parasitic shrubs, distinguished from Loranthus by having the petals united into a tube. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—D. bicolor. The Loranthus bicolor. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—D. longiflora. The Loranthus longiflorus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

DENDROSAURA (Lat.), n. n. pl. De²n-dro(dro²)-sa²r²(sa²)/u²r²-a². From déndron, a tree, and σαύρα, a lizard. A tribe of the Lacertilia, consisting of the single genus Chamaeleo. [L, 121.]

DENDROSERIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-dro²-se²r²-i²d²-e²(a²-e²). Fr., dendroséridées. Of Benthams and Hooker and others, a subtribe of the Cichoriaceæ, including Dendroseria and Fitchia. [B, 42, 121 (a, 24).]

DENDROSTYLES, n. n. pl. De²n²/dro-stilz. From déndron, a tree, and στυλος, a column. Four columns which spring from the angles of the syndendrium of the Rhizostomidæ, and are attached to four corresponding points on the lower surface of the umbrella. [L, 147.]

DENDRYPHIACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-dri²(dru²)-fi²-a(a²)-se²(ke²)-e(a²-e²). Fr., dendryphiacées. 1. Of Corda, a family of the Hyphomycetes, consisting of Dendryphium and Dactylium. 2. Of Rabenhorst, a subsection of the Mucedineæ genuini, consisting of the same genera. The Dendryphiæ of Reichenbach are a subsection of the Mucedineæ genuini, consisting of Dactylium, Cladobotryum, and Dendryphium. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

DENECKIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. De²n-e²k²-i²(i²)/e²-e(a²-e²). Of Schultz, a division of the Conyzeæ, consisting of Deneckia and Micropsis. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

DENERVATIO (Lat.), n. f. De²(da)-nu²r(ne²r)-va(wa²)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., denervationis. From de priv. or intens., and nervus, a nerve or a tendon. See APONEUROSIS and ENERVATION.

DENGUE (Sp.), n. Dan²ga; in Eng., de²n²g²u². Lat., denguis. Fr., d. Ger., D'fieber, Polkafieber. It., d. Literally, fastidiousness, prudery, affectation, or the manner of a dandy; dandy-fever (from the patient's constrained attitude, due to dread of motion); knee-aching disorder; epidemic gastro-rheumatic (or break-bone, or broken-wing, or stiff-necked, or bucket, or bouquet, or sun, or solar, or neuralgic, or Colorado, or eruptive articular) fever; epidemic inflammatory fever of Calcutta; eruptive epidemic fever of India; toothutia, giraffe, dunga, dingee. An acute febrile disease occurring as an epidemic in the East and West Indies and in the southern United States, characterized by severe pains, swelling, and stiffness of the joints, gastric disturbance, and a cutaneous exanthem. The eruption begins on about the third day, appearing first upon the palms of the hands, and thence extending over the general cutaneous surface; in appearance it is said sometimes to resemble that of scarlatina, sometimes that of measles, and sometimes that of urticaria. D. is often attended with severe itching, and may or may not be followed by desquamation. [A, 326 (a, 21); Christie, "Indian Med. Gaz.," Mar., 1882; G; L, 41.] Cf. ACRODYNIA.

DENI (Lat.), adj. pl. De²(da)/ni²(ne). Arranged in tens. [a, 24.]

DENIDATION, n. De-ni-da²/shu²n. From de priv., and nidus, a nest. The process by which the superficial portion of the mucous membrane of the body of the uterus, after having become tumid and succulent (fit to form a nest for the fertilized ovum) during menstruation, is said to be disintegrated and cast off.

DENIGRATION, n. De-ni-gra²/shu²n. Gr., μελασμός. Lat., denigratio (from denigrare, to blacken). Ger., Schwärzung. A blackening, also the state of having become black. [A, 322, 325 (a, 21).]

DENIS-SUR-LOIRE (Fr.), n. De²n-e-su^r-lwa³r. A place near Blois, in the department of Loir-et-Cher, France, where there is a mineral spring called Fontaine de Médicis. [L, 105.]

DENITRATION, n. The process of withdrawing nitric acid from a chemical compound. [B.]

DENTRIFY, v. tr. De-nit^ri²-fi. To deprive of nitrogen. ["Drugg. Circ. and Chem. Gaz.," June, 1883, p. 91 (B).]

DENS (Lat.), n. m. De²n²(dans). Gen., dent'is. Gr., δένσος. Fr., dent. Ger., Zahn. A tooth, also a structure in the form of a tooth. [a, 24.]—D. acutus, D. adversus. Fr., dent incisiveur. Ger., Schneidezahn. An incisor tooth. [L.]—D. angularis. A canine tooth. [L.]—Dentes apparentes [Corti]. Dentes habenulæ. The so-called teeth found in that portion of the habenula perforata of Corti's organ which is called the zona denticulata, and which extends from the crista spiralis to the outer end of Corti's organ. [F.]—D. bicuspidatus, D. bicuspis. A bicuspid tooth. [L, 115.]—D. buccalis. A premolar tooth. [L, 115.]—Dentes buccalis externus. The posterior bicuspid tooth. [L, 304.]—D. buccalis internus. The anterior bicuspid tooth. [L, 304.]—D. caballinus. The Hyoxyamus niger. [B, 88, 200.]—D. canalliculatus. A canalliculate tooth. [L, 14.]—D. caninus. A canine tooth. [L, 115.]—D. canis. See ERYTHRIONUM d. canis.—D. columellaris. A canine tooth. [L, 94.]—Dentes complicati. See Complicated TEETH (under TOOTH).—Dentes cranteræ. See Wisdom TEETH.—D. ctenis. An incisor tooth. [L, 50.]—Dentes cuneati. The wedge-shaped dental plates of certain fishes. [L, 14.]—D. cuspidati. See D. caninus.—Dentes decidui. See Deciduous TEETH (under TOOTH).—D. dichaster. An incisor tooth. [A, 325 (a, 21).]—D. elephantis. Ivory; the tusk of Elephas indicus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—D. elephantis petrefactus. An old name for fossil ivory. [L, 105 (a, 21).]—D. epistrophei, D. epistropheos. The odontoid process of the axis. [L, 115, 175.]—Dentes equi hippopotami (seu marini). See Dentes HIPPOPOTAMI.—Dentes fibrillarum lentis. Tooth-like processes found upon the lateral faces of the fibres of the crystalline lens. [L, 7.]—D. gelassinus. An incisor tooth. [L, 50.]—D. gomphius. A molar tooth. [L, 50.]—Dentes graniformes. Small, thickly studded teeth which give a granular appearance to the jaws. [L, 14.]—Dentes hippopotami. See Dentes HIPPOPOTAMI.—D. incisivus (seu incisor). An incisor tooth. [L.]—D. incisivus externus. A lateral incisor tooth. [L, 304.]—D. incisivus internus. A middle incisor tooth. [L, 304.]—Dentes infantiles (seu lactei). See Milk TEETH (under TOOTH).—Dentes lamelliformes. See Dental PLATES.—Dentes lanarii. See Canine TEETH (under TOOTH).—D. leonis. The Taraxacum officinale. [B, 5, 121 (a, 24).]—D. molaris. A molar tooth. [L.]—D. molaris anterior. A premolar tooth. [L, 135.]—D. molaris externus. A wisdom tooth. [L, 304.]—D. molaris internus. The first molar tooth. [L, 304.]—D. molaris major. See D. molaris.—D. molaris medius. The second molar tooth. [L, 304.]—D. molaris minor. See D. molaris anterior.—D. molaris posterior (seu vernus). See D. molaris.—D. merdens. A canine tooth. [L.]—D. multicuspidatus. See D. molaris.—D. ocularis. A canine tooth. [L.]—D. opsigonus. A wisdom tooth. [L, 50.]—Dentes pectinati. See Pectinate TEETH (under TOOTH).—Dentes permanentes. See Permanent TEETH (under TOOTH).—D. præmolaris. A premolar tooth. [L, 115.]—Dentes primores. See Incisor TEETH and Milk TEETH (under TOOTH).—Dentes raduliformes. See Rasp TEETH (under TOOTH).—D. sapientia. A wisdom tooth. [L, 115.]—Dentes scalprarii. Chisel-shaped teeth. ["Proc. of the Zool. Soc.," 1839, p. 15 (L).]—D. sectorius. An incisor tooth. [L.]—D. serotinus. See Wisdom TEETH.—Dentes setiformes. See Setiform TEETH (under TOOTH).—Dentes simplices. See Simple TEETH (under TOOTH).—Dentes solidi. See Simple TEETH (under TOOTH).—D. sophonister, D. sophonistus, D. sophonreticus. A wisdom tooth. [L, 50.]—D. spurius. A premolar tooth. [L.]—Dentes tardivi, D. tardivus. A wisdom tooth. [L, 135.]—Dentes temporarii. See Milk TEETH (under TOOTH).—D. tomicus. An incisor tooth. [L.]—Dentes unicornu. Fragments of the tooth of the Monodon monoceros, or, according to some pharmacopœias, of the Rhinoceros indicus. [B, 88 (a, 21).]—Dentes villiformes. See Villiform TEETH (under TOOTH).

DENSATIO (Lat.), n. f. De²n-sa(sa³)shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., densatio'is. Gr., πύκνωσις. See CONDENSATION.

DENSE, adj. De²ns. Gr., πυκνός. Lat., densus. Fr., d. Ger., dicht. It., Sp., denso. Having the constituent parts or the molecules close together and compact; of roots, branches, leaves, or flowers, numerous and crowded together. [A, 301 (a, 21); B, 121, 123 (a, 24).]

DENSIFLORUS (Lat.), adj. De²ns-i²-flo^r'u^s(ru⁴s). From densus, dense, and flos, a flower. Fr., densiflore. Ger., dichtblüthig. Having numerous flowers crowded together. [a, 24.]

DENSIFOLIUS (Lat.), adj. De²ns-i²-fol(i²)i²-u^s(u⁴s). From densus, dense, and folium, a leaf. Fr., densifolié. Ger., dichtblüthig. Having dense leaves (a botanical species name). [B.]

DENSIMETER, n. De²ns-i²m'e²r-u^r. From densus, dense, and μέτρον, a measure. Fr., densimètre. Ger., Dichtkeitsmesser. A hydrometer or other similar instrument for ascertaining the specific gravity of liquids. [a, 24.]

DENSIMÈTRE (Fr.), n. Da²n³-se-matr. See DENSIMETER.—D. de Rousseau. An instrument employed in physiological research to determine the density of liquids. It consists of a Beaumé areometer provided at the top of the tube with a little capsule intended to receive 1 cubic centimetre of the liquid, the density of which is to be ascertained and so graduated that the degree of submersion into water indicates the degree of density. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DENSIMETRIC, adj. De²ns-i²-me²t'ri²k. Pertaining to the use of the densimeter (see D. ANALYSIS).

DENSIROSTRIS (Lat.), adj. De²ns-i²-ro²st'ri²s. From densus, dense, and rostrum, a beak. Fr., densirostre. Ger., dickschnabellig. Having a thick beak. [L.]

DENSITY, n. De²ns-i²t-i². Gr., πυκνότης. Lat., densitas. Fr., densité. Ger., Dichtigkeit. It., densità. Sp., densidad. 1. In physics and chemistry, the relative weight of a substance as compared with that of some other substance of equal bulk. 2. The quality of being dense. [a, 24.]—Electrical d. See Electrical INTENSITY.—Vapor d. Ger., Dampfdichte. The specific gravity of a vapor. [B, 8 (a, 24).]

DENT (Fr.), n. Da²n². See TOOTH.—D's agrégées. Compound teeth; those made up apparently of a number of smaller teeth. [L, 158.]—D. angulaire. A canine tooth. [L.]—D's à venin. See Poison FANGS.—D. barréc. A molar tooth, especially one having the roots curved and converging. [A, 385 (a, 21).]—D's bicortiquées. Teeth which have a more or less complete investment of both cement and enamel. [L, 158.]—D's bruyeuxes. Teeth having a large grinding surface. [L, 158.]—D's caduques. See Milk TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's cardinales. The principal teeth of the hinge of a bivalve shell. [A, 385 (a, 21).]—D. carnassière. A canine tooth. [L.]—D's composées. Compound teeth; those of which the dentin and enamel form interior folds, as it were, so that a cross-section of the tooth cuts them several times. [A, 385 (a, 21).]—D. conoïde. A canine tooth. [L.]—D's cortiquées. Teeth having an external covering of cement only. [L, 158.]—D. crantere. A wisdom tooth. [L.]—D. cunéiforme. An incisor tooth. [L.]—D. cuspidé, D. cuspidée. A canine tooth. [L, 158.]—D's cystogénètes. Teeth which are developed within a vesicle. [L, 158.]—D. de brebis. The Lathyrus sativus. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—D's de cheval marin. See Dentes HIPPOPOTAMI.—D. de chien. The Dentalium dentalis and the Erythronium dens canis. [B, 173 (a, 24); L, 105.]—D's de lait. See Milk TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's de licorne. See Dentes unicornu.—D. de lion. The Taraxacum officinale. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—D's demi-composées. Semi-compound teeth; those of which the alternate folds of dentin and enamel penetrate only to a certain depth, as in ruminants. [A, 385 (a, 21).]—D's de remplacement. See Second TEETH (under TOOTH).—D. de sagesse. A wisdom tooth. [L.]—D's de septans. The permanent teeth. [L, 7.]—D's d'hippopotame. See Dentes HIPPOPOTAMI.—D's emailées. Teeth covered with enamel only. [L, 158.]—D's en cardes. See Rasp TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's en crochets. Conical and recurved hook-like teeth. [L, 158.]—D's en râpe. See Rasp TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's en velours. See Villiform TEETH.—D's fausses molaires. The premolar teeth. [L, 158.]—D's fossiculées. Teeth in which the dentin and enamel are so arranged that when the crown is worn the enamel is in separate masses, divided from each other by dentin. [L, 158.]—D's gynnosome. Teeth the principal portion of which are not invested with a covering of cement or enamel. [L, 158.]—D's lacérantes. Strong and large teeth adapted to tearing, e. g., the canines of the dog. [L, 158.]—D. machelière. A molar tooth. [L, 158.]—D. multicuspidée. See DENS multicuspidatus.—D's oculaires, D's œil lières. See Canine TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's palatines. See Palatine TEETH.—D's pectinées. See Pectinate TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's phanérogénètes. Teeth which are not developed within a vesicle, but upon or near the surface of a mucous membrane. [L, 158.]—D's pharyngiennes. See Pharyngeal TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's prehensibles. See Prehensile TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's premaxillaires. See Incisor TEETH.—D's primitives. See Milk TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's principales. See Principal TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's râpées. See Rasp TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's rubanées. Teeth in which the alternate layers of cement and dentin are placed vertically. [L, 158.]—D's scéatrices. Teeth terminating in a cutting edge. [L, 158.]—D's simples. See Simple TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's stéganomes. Teeth which have an outer investment of enamel or cement, or both. [L, 158.]—D's temporaires. See Milk TEETH (under TOOTH).—D's vomériennes. See Vomerine TEETH (under TOOTH).

DENTAGOGUM (Lat.), n. n. De²nt-a²g(a³g)-og-u³m(u⁴m). From dens, a tooth, and ἀγαν, to bring. A forceps or other instrument for extracting teeth. [E.]

DENTAGRA (Lat.), n. f. De²nt'a²g(a³g)-ra³. From dens, a tooth, and ἀγρα, a seizure. 1. Toothache. 2. See DENTAGOGUM. [E.]

DENTAIRE (Fr.), adj. Da²n²-ta²r. See DENTAL; as a n., see DENTARIA.—D. à cinq feuilles. See DENTARIA digitata.—D. pennée. See DENTARIA heptaphyllos.—Petite d. See DENTARIA digitata.

DENTAL, adj. De²nt'a²l. Lat., dentalis, dentarius. Fr., dentaire. Ger., zu den Zähnen gehörig. It., dentale. Sp., d. Pertaining to the teeth; as a n. in the pl., letters which are pronounced chiefly with the teeth, such as d, t, and n. [L.]

DEPLORATUS (Lat.), adj. De(da)-plor-a(a³)/tu²s(tu⁴s). Overcome by disease. [Hippocrates (A, 325 [a, 21]).]

DEPLUMATE, adj. De-plu²m/at. Lat., deplumis, deplumatus (from de priv., and pluma, a feather). Fr., déplumé. Ger., ungefedert. Bare of feathers. [L, 343.]

DEPLUMATION, n. De-plu²m-a³/shu²n. Fr., déplumation. Ger., Entfederung. 1. The stripping or falling off of plumes or feathers. 2. Shedding of the eyelashes. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DEPOLARIZATION, n. De-pol-a²r-i²z-a²/shu²n. Fr., dépolari-sation. Ger., Entpolarisierung. It., depolari-zazione. Sp., despolarización. The act of destroying or preventing polarization; especially the act of annulling the effects of optical polarization by interposing a depolarizer (q. v.) between the polarizer and analyzer; also the act of preventing or annulling the polarization in a galvanic battery, as by the amalgamation of the zinc plates, or, in the two-fluid batteries, by the interposition of a porous diaphragm. [B.]

DEPOLARIZER, n. De-pol'a³r-iz-u⁶r. Fr., depolarisateur. An apparatus consisting of a plate formed from the section of the principal plane of a double refracting prism which, when interposed at any angle between the polarizing surface and the analyzer, refracts and resolves the polarized ray into ordinary and extraordinary rays which attain the analyzer in planes that are neither parallel nor perpendicular to its principal plane, and are therefore again refracted, the sum of the images of like name forming separate images which are individually transmitted. [A, 27.]

DEPOSIT, n. De-po²z-i²t. Lat., depositum (from deponere, to throw aside). Fr., dépôt. Ger., Ablagerung, Niederschlag. It., deposito. Sp., deposito. 1. Matter which is cast down from a liquid; a sediment. 2. Matter collected in any part of an organism, either normal or abnormal. [D.]

DEPOSITION, n. De²p-o-zi²sh'u³n. Gr., κατάθεσις. Lat., depositio. Fr., déposition. Ger., Neiderlegen. The formation of a deposit. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DEPOSITIVE (Sir E. Wilson), adj. De-po²z-i²t-i²v. Exudative (said of inflammation of the skin when plastic lymph is exuded into its tissue). [L, 73.]

DÉPÔT (Fr.), n. Da-po. See DEPOSIT.—D. laitoux. Syn.: engorgement laitoux. A term applied by the older French writers to a supposed accumulation of milk in various parts of the body; probably inflammatory exudate.

DEPRAVATION, n. De²p-ra-va³shu³n. Lat., depravatio (from depravare, to impair). Fr., dépravation. Ger., Verderben, Verderbniss. Deterioration, especially of the secretions. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DÉPRÉDATEURS (Fr.), n. pl. Da-pra-da³-tu⁶r. See PRÆDONES.

DEPRENSIO (Lat.), n. f. De(da)-pre²-he²n(han)²/si²-o. Gen., deprehensionis (from deprehendere, to seize unawares). An old term for: 1. Catalepsy. 2. Diagnosis. [A, 325 (a, 21).]

DEPRESSANT, adj. De-pre²s'a²nt. Causing depression.

DEPRESSED, adj. De-pre²sd'. Lat., depressus. Fr., déprimé. Ger., niedergedrückt. It., depresso. Sp., deprimido. Affected with depression; in botany, pressed down (said of an organ flattened from above downward, such as a leaf the border of which is higher than the disc). [B, 1, 34, 121, 123 (a, 24).]

DÉPRESSEUR (Fr.), adj. and n. Da-pre²s-u⁶r. See DEPRESSANT and DEPRESSOR.

DÉPRESSICAUDE (Fr.), adj. Da-pre²s-e-kod. From deprimere, to depress, and cauda, the tail. Having the tail flattened. [L, 41.]

DEPRESSICOLLIS (Lat.), adj. De(da)-pre²s-si²-ko²/li²s. From deprimere, to depress, and collum, the neck. Fr., dépressicollé. Having the neck or corselet flattened. [L, 41, 180.]

DEPRESSIO (Lat.), n. f. De(da)-pre²s'shi²(si²)-o. Gen., depressionis. See DEPRESSION.—D. cataractæ. Fr., dépression (ou abaissement) de la cataracte. Ger., Niederdrücken des Staars. It., abbassamento della cataratta. Sp., deposición (ó abatimiento) de la catarata. The old operation of couching, sinking, or depressing the lens with its capsule into the vitreous by pressing with a needle from above directly downward. The oldest operation of getting rid of an opaque lens, employed in the most remote times. [F.]—D. cataractæ per scleroticam. Depression or reinclination of the lens by a needle introduced through the sclera. [F.]—D. uteri. Inversion of the uterus. [A, 396 (a, 21).]

DEPRESSION, n. De-pre²s'yu³n. Lat., depressio (from deprimere, to depress). Fr., dépression. Ger., D. Niederdrückung. It., depressione. Sp., depression. 1. The act of depressing a part. 2. The state of being depressed, either physically (as of a fragment of the skull) or in the sense of a reduction of strength or of hopefulness. 3. In anatomy, a pit on a surface. [D; L, 41, 44.]—Antero-lateral d. The antero-lateral fissure of the spinal cord. [L, 38; K.]—Auditory d. Lat., fossula velaris. Ger., Gehörgrube. 1. An open d. in the velum of certain Medusæ, containing auditory cells. [L, 358.] 2. A d. of a thickened part of the epiblast marking the early stage of formation of the ear. [A. Thomson (H).]—Crotaphyte d. A d. in the squamosal bone of birds, lodging the muscles which close the jaws, and corresponding to the temporal fossa of man. [L, 221.]—D. of a cataract. See Depressio cataractæ.—D. of the uterus. Lat., depressio uteri. Ger., Einstülpung der Gebärmutter. The first stage of inversion of the organ.—Digital d. The descending cornu of the lateral ventricle of the brain. [L, 62; K.]—Infrasternal d. A d. at the lower end of the sternum, at the bottom of which lies the ensiform process. It is due to the prominence of the mesosternum and the seventh costal cartilages beyond the surface of the ensiform process. [G.]—Interpeduncular d. [Spitzka]. See Interpeduncular space.—Mental d. A state of melancholy. [D.]—Nervous d. Nervous debility.—Vital d. A lowered state of the powers of life.

DEPRESSOR (Lat.), n. m. De(da)-pre²s'so²r. Gen., depressoris. Fr., dépresseur, abaisseur. Ger., Niederdrücker. It., depressore. Sp., depressor. Syn.: depressorium (2d def.). 1. A muscle the action of which is to depress a part. 2. An instrument for depressing a part.—D. alæ nasi. Fr., pinnaled radié, l'incisif mitoyen, myrtiforme, nasillard, maxillo-alvéoli-nasal, maxillo-alvéo-nasal, abaisseur de l'aile du nez (ou de l'angle du nez). Ger., Niederzieher der Nase. A small muscle arising from the incisive fossa of the superior maxilla and inserted into the ala and septum of the nose. It has been described as a dilator and as a constrictor of the nose. [L, 31.]—D. anguli oris. Fr., maxillo (ou sousmaxillo) labial, abaisseur de l'angle des lèvres, triangulaire du menton. A muscle arising from the external oblique line of the inferior maxilla and inserted into the angle of the mouth. [L, 31, 332.]—D. apicis maris. See D. septi mobilis narium.—D. auriculæ. See STYLO-

AURICULARIS.—D. auris. See PAROTIDO-AURICULARIS.—D. brachio-stegorum. In fishes, a muscle which arises from the lower end of the ceratohyal bone and is inserted into the inferior brachio-stegal ray. [L, 14.]—D. cartilaginis arytænoideæ. A bundle of muscular fibres which connects the crico-arytænoideus lateralis of one side with the arytænoideus obliquus of the other side. [L, 332.]—D. cartilaginis arytænoideæ. See ARYTÆNOIDEUS rectus.—D. caudæ. A muscle in certain birds which arises from the lower part of the middle line of the pelvis and is inserted into the inferior spines of the caudal vertebrae. [Proc. of the Zool. Soc., 1842, p. 30 (L).]—D. caudæ longus. See SACRO-COCYGEUS.—D. clitoridis. See ERECTOR clitoridis.—D. coccygis. See D. caudæ.—D. epiglottidis [Merkel]. A band of muscular fibres which separates from the thyreo-arytæno-epiglotticus muscle, to be attached to the lateral margin of the epiglottic cartilage. [L, 31, 332.]—D. glandulæ thyroideæ. An anomalous muscle which arises from the thyreoid cartilage and is inserted into the posterior surface of the middle lobe of the thyreoid gland. [L, 332.]—D. labii inferioris (proprius). Fr., carre du menton, mento-ou mentonnier labial, abaisseur de la lèvre inférieure. A muscle which arises from the inferior maxilla near the symphysis, and is blended with its fellow of the opposite side in the orbicularis oris muscle. [L, 31.]—D. labii superioris. 1. See D. alæ nasi. 2. The analogue of the myrtiformis muscle in man, found in many of the lower mammals. [L, 13.]—D. labii superioris alæque nasi (seu proprius). See D. alæ nasi.—D. labiorum (communis). See D. anguli oris.—D. mandibulæ (seu mandibull). In certain fishes, a muscle which arises from the coracoid bone and is inserted into the middle part of the mandible. [L, 14.]—D. myrtiformis, D. nasi. See D. alæ nasi.—D. oculi. See Rectus inferior oculi.—D. operculi. In fishes, a muscle which arises from the alisphenoid and petrosal bone, and is inserted into the opercular bone. [L, 14.]—D. palpebræ inferioris. An anomalous bundle of fibres of the platysma myoides, which are inserted into the lower eyelid; originally supposed by Heister to be a distinct muscle, which he described as a fleshy bundle forming part of the orbicularis palpebrarum. [F; L, 332.]—D. septi mobilis narium. Ger., Niederzieher der Nasenscheidewand. A small triangular bundle of muscular fibres which extends between the orbicularis oris (with which its fibres blend) and the lower margin of the nasal septum. [L, 175.]—D. superciliæ. A bundle of muscular fibres which occasionally extends from the ligamentum palpebrale medium to the skin of the upper eyelid. [L, 332.]—D. tendinis subscapularis. 1. See Tensor capsulæ humeratis. 2. Of Gruber, see CORACOCAPSULARIS.—D. tympani. In fishes, a muscle which arises from the basisphenoid and alisphenoid bones and is inserted into the hyomandibular, metapterygoid, and entopterygoid bones. By its contraction it depresses the tympanic pedicle. In reptiles it arises from the basi-occipito-sphenoid bone, and is inserted into the lower end of the tympanic bone. [L, 14.]—D. urethrae. See SPHINCTER vaginae.—D. vesicæ (seu vesicalis). See LEVATOR prostatae.—Sims's d. An instrument consisting of a copper rod terminating in a blunt ring, for pressing the anterior wall of the vagina forward.—Tongue-d. Fr., abaisse-langue, abaisseur de la langue. A spatula for pressing the tongue down, in order to give a view of the throat.

DEPRESSORISCH (Ger.), adj. - Da-pre's-sor'i'sh. Depressing (said of nerve-fibres which are supposed to transmit impulses that depress or inhibit the vaso-motor centres). [K, 16.]

DEPRESSORIUM (Lat.), n. n. De(da)-pre's-so-ri'2-u'm(u'm). See DEPRESSOR (2d def.).

DEPRESSOR (Lat.), adj. De(da)-pre's-su's(su's). See DEPRESSOR.

DEPRIMENS (Lat.), adj. De'p(dap)/ri'm-e'nz(ans). Pressing down, holding down; as a n., a muscle having such a function. [A, 322 (a, 21).]—D. auriculæ. See RETRAHENS auris.—D. maxillæ biverter. See DIOASTRICUS.—D. oculi. See RECTUS inferior oculi.

DEPUCELATION, n. De-pu'2-se'1-a'shu'n. See DEFLORATION.

DEPURANT, adj. De'p'u'2-ra'nt. See DEPURATORY.

DEPURATION, n. De'p'u'2-ra'shu'n. Lat., depuratio. Fr., dépuration. Ger., Abschäumung, Reinigung, Klärung. It., depurazione. Sp., depuración. The act or process of freeing from impure matter. [L, 41, 56.]

DEPURATIVE, DEPURATORY, adj's. De'p'u'2-r-at-i'v, -o-ri'2. Lat., depuratorius, depurans. Fr., dépuratoire, dépuratif. Ger., reinigend. It., Sp., depuratorio. Cleansing.

DEPURGATIVE, adj. De-pu'rg'a'2-i'v. From depurgare, to purge. See PURGATIVE.

DERADELPHUS [G. St.-Hilaire] (Lat.), n. m. De'2-r-a'd(a'd)-e'1'f'u's(u's). From δέφρ, the neck, and ἀδελφός, a brother. Fr., déradèphe. A monstrosity with two bodies, united at the neck, and with a single head. [L, 41, 44 (a, 14).]

DERADEN (Lat.), n. m. and f. De'2-r'a'd(a'd)-e'2'n(an). From δέφρ, the neck, and ἀδρ, a gland. Fr., glande du cou. Ger., Halsdrüse. A cervical gland. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DERADENITIS (Lat.), n. f. De'2-r-a'd(a'd)-e'2'n-i(e)'ti'2s. Gen., deradenit'idos (-is). Fr., déradénite. Ger., Halsdrüsenentzündung. Inflammation of the cervical glands. [L, 50.]

DERADENONCUS (Lat.), n. m. De'2-r-a'd(a'd)-e'2'n-o'2'n'ku's(-ku's). From δέφρ, the neck, ἀδρ, a gland, and ὄγκος, a mass. Fr., déradénoncus. Ger., Halsdrüseneschwulst. A glandular tumor of the neck. [L, 50.]

DERÆUM (Lat.), n. n. De'2-r-e'(a'e)-u'm(u'm). Gr., δέρμαον. Fr., déréon. Ger., Unterhals, Halsband. The lower part of the neck of birds, that between the nucha and the body. [L, 50, 180, 343.]

DÉRAISONNEMENT (Fr.), n. Da-ra-zo'n-ma'n'2. Insanity. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DERANENCEPHALIA (Lat.), n. f. De'2-r-a'n(a'n)-e'n(e'n'2)-se'2'(ke'2f)-a(a'3)'li'2-a'3. From δέφρ, the neck, and ἐγκέφαλος, the brain. Fr., déranencéphalie. Ger., Halshalbkopf. A monstrosity characterized by absence of a greater or lesser part of the brain and neck. [L, 50.]

DERANGED, adj. De-ran'j'd. Fr., dérangé. Ger., gestört. In a state of derangement.

DERANGEMENT, n. De-ran'j'me'nt. Fr., dérangement. Ger., Störung. It., disordinanza. Sp., desarreglo. Disorder; in common parlance, insanity.—Internal d. of the knee joint. Of Hey, an affection of the knee consequent upon some trifling injury, the explanation of which has never been satisfactorily given. Knott ("Dubl. Jour. of Med. Sci.," June, 1882, p. 479) says: "By the combined twisting and lateral movement conveyed to the knee, at a moment when the ligaments are as lax as possible, the margin of the condyle is jerked over the edge of the internal semilunar fibrocartilage. The immediate result is pressure of this structure, which is increased when the resulting pain brings about spasmodic contraction of the surrounding muscles. The leg undergoes in these injuries a rotatory movement which carries the tibia forward and outward."

DERAOSPHINXIS (Lat.), n. f. De'2-r-a'p(a'p)-o(o'3)-sf'i'2n'x'2's. See ATCHENOSPHINXIS.

DÉRATÉ (Fr.), adj. Da-ra'3-ta. Deprived of the spleen. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DERMATAGRA (Lat.), n. f. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)'a'2g(a'2g)-ra'3. From δέρμα, the skin, and ἀγρα, a seizure. Pellagra. [G.]

DERMATALGIA (Lat.), n. f. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)'a'2l(a'3)'ji'2(gi'2)-a'3. From δέρμα, the skin, and ἄλγος, pain. Fr., dermatalgie. Ger., Dermatologie, Hautschmerz, Hautnervenschmerz. Pain in the skin; cutaneous neuralgia or hyperæsthesia. In the pl., dermatologie, in Auspitz's classification of skin diseases, a family of the order of "sensory neuroses of the skin," including neuralgia cutis, pruritus cutaneus, and prurigo (of Hebra). [G, 4.]

DERMATANEURIA (Lat.), n. f. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)'a'2n-(a'3n)-u'2'ri'2-a'3. From δέρμα, the skin, a priv., and νεῦρον, a nerve. Fr., dermataneurie. Paralysis or anæsthesia of the skin. [L, 41.]

DERMATAPOSTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)'a'2p(a'2p)-o'st'-a'2(a'3)-si'2s. A more correct form of dermapostasis (q. v.).

DERMATAUXE (Lat.), n. f. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)'a'2x(a'3)'u'2'x(-e)a. From δέρμα, the skin, and αὐξή, enlargement. Fr., d. Ger., Hautver dickung. Tumefaction, thickening, or hypertrophy of the skin. [G.]

DERMATEI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)'e'2-i'e). Of Fries, an order of the Discomycetes, consisting of Spadonia, Vibrisea, Pilacre, Tubercularia, Sarea, Midotis, Dermatea, Ditiola, Volutella, and Schmitzomyia. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

DERMATEMPODISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)'e'm-po'd-i'2z(i'2s)'mu's(mu's). From δέρμα, the skin, and ἐμποδισμός, an impediment. Fr., dermatempodisme. Ger., Hautverstopfung. An obstruction of the function of the skin. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DERMATHÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Du'rm(de'2rm)-a'2t(a'2t)-hem-(ha'3'e'm)-i'2-a'3. From δέρμα, the skin, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., dermathémie, dermoémie. Ger., Blutanbrang zur Haut. A determination of blood to the skin. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DERMATHÆMORRHOIS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-he²m(ha²-e²m)-o²r(ro²)-i²s. From δέρμα, the skin, and αιμορροΐς, a hemorrhoid. Hæmatidrosis associated with hæmorrhoids. In the single case described by Fuchs, the bloody sweat disappeared after a hæmorrhage from the rectum. [G, 5.]

DERMATHYPERTROPHIA (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-hi(hu²)-pu⁵r(pe²r)-trof(tro²f)²-a². From δέρμα, the skin, ὑπέρ, over, and τροφή, nutrition. Hypertrophy of the skin. [A, 322(a, 21).]

DERMATIATRIA (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-i(i²)-a²t-(a²t)-ri(re)²-a². From δέρμα, the skin, and ἰατρεία, healing. Fr., dermatiatrie. Ger., Dermatiatrie. The therapeutics of skin diseases. [G.]

DERMATIC, DERMATINE, adj's. Du⁵rm-a²t(i²k, du⁵rm/a²t)-i²n. Lat., dermaticus. Fr., dermatique. Ger., häutig. Pertaining to the skin; as a n., a medicine for the skin. [A, 319(a, 21); L, 56(a, 21).]

DERMATITIS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-i(i²e)²i²s. Gen., dermatitidos (-is). From δέρμα, the skin (see also -itis²). Fr., dermatite, dermatite. Ger., Hautentzündung. It., dermatite. Sp., d. 1. Inflammation of the skin. 2. Of Hebra, a cutaneous inflammation of a simple or common type (e. g., ambustio, congelatio, d. venenata, erysipelas, furunculosis, and anthrax). [G, 5.]—Circumfollicular d. Any inflammatory affection of the skin in which the morbid process is localized around the follicles. [Leloir, "Ann. de dermat. et de syph.," 1889, x, p. 672; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Mar. 8, 1890, p. 277.]—D. a frigore. See D. congelationis.—D. ambustionis. D. due to exposure of the skin to extreme heat. [G, 3.]—D. ambustionis bullosa. Fr., brûlure vésiculeuse et bulleuse [Rayer]. Vesication from a burn. [G, 3.]—D. ambustionis erythematosa. Erythema due to exposure of the skin to heat. [G, 3.]—D. ambustionis escharotica. Fr., brûlure gangréneuse [Rayer]. Gangrene of the skin from a burn. [G, 3.]—D. a venenatis et causticis. See D. venenata.—D. blennoidis [Swediaur]. Erysipelas. [G.]—D. calorica. D. due to exposure to extreme temperatures. [G, 3.] Cf. D. ambustionis and D. congelationis.—D. capillitii papillomatosa [Kaposi]. Sycosis of the scalp. [G. Behrend (A, 319).]—Dermatitides catarrhales. Ger., Hautkatarrhe, oberflächliche Hautentzündungen. In Auspitz's classification of skin diseases, the first order of the first class (the dermatitides simplices), embracing superficial inflammations of the skin, catarrhal in character. They include "diffuse," "erosive," "follicular," and "engorgement" catarrhs of the skin. [G, 4.]—D. circumscripta herpeticiformis [Neumann]. See LICHEN planus.—D. congelationis. D. due to exposure of the skin to extreme cold. [G, 3.]—D. congelationis bullosa. Vesication from exposure to extreme cold. [G, 3.]—D. congelationis erythematosa. Erythema due to exposure of the skin to cold. [G, 3.]—D. congelationis escharotica. Necrosis of the skin from congelation. [G, 3.]—D. contusiformis. 1. D. due to a contusion. [A, 326(a, 21).] 2. See ERYTHEMA nodosum.—D. cribrificans. Ger., eiterige durchlöchern d. Hautentzündung. A form of d., somewhat resembling herpes tonsurans and parasitic sycosis, characterized by the formation of small reddish spots surmounted by dirty-yellow scabs, each of which covers a small perforation of the skin. It affects mostly the face and the scalp. [F. Petersen, "Ctrlibl. f. Chir.," June 16, 1888 (Beilage), p. 22.]—D. decubitus. See D. per decubitus.—D. dinamica et calorica. D. due to the excessive action of dynamic or caloric influences, including inflammations from electricity, heat, and cold. [G, 47.]—D. e decubitus. See D. per decubitus.—D. erysipelas. Erysipelas. [G.]—D. erythematosa. See ERYTHEMA.—D. exfoliativa, D. exfoliativa. See Exfoliative d.—D. exfoliativa generalis. See PITYRIASIS rubra.—D. exfoliativa infantum (see neonatorum). A disease of infants, occurring within a few days after birth, characterized by diffused redness of the skin, together with abundant furfuraceous or foliaceous desquamation, occasionally associated with serous exudation beneath the cuticle. [Ritter von Rittersheim, "Ctrlibl. f. Kinderheilk.," 1879, p. 3; "Arch. f. Kinderheilk.," i, p. 53.]—D. exfoliativa partialis. Exfoliative d. affecting only limited portions of the body. [G.]—D. ferox. A grave form of erythema occurring at first in patches on the face, the hands, or the upper part of the chest. They become of a vivid carmine or lake color, and are followed by severe constitutional symptoms. [J. L. Milton, "Edinb. Med. Jour.," Mar., 1886, p. 816.]—D. gangrænosa. Gangrenous inflammation of the skin, especially certain forms of spontaneous gangrene of the skin, such as erythema gangræniforme and gangræna symmetrica (g. v.). [G, 63.]—D. herpeticiformis [Duhring]. A form of cutaneous disease consisting of superficial inflammatory efflorescences, multiform in character, most commonly vesicular, which tend to occur in groups, resembling the arrangement of the vesicles of herpes. It is attended with severe itching, and is especially characterized by a disposition to successive relapses at varying intervals of weeks or months. It is regarded as identical in its nature with the impetigo herpeticiformis of Hebra, which is considered one of its varieties. [G.]—D. herpeticiformis bullosa [Duhring]. A variety resembling d. herpeticiformis vesiculosa, with which it is often associated, but in which the efflorescences form bullæ. The latter may be tense or flaccid, rounded or flat, with a base but slightly inflamed, and after rupture form yellowish, greenish, or brownish crusts. [G.]—D. herpeticiformis erythematosa [Duhring]. A variety characterized by erythematous spots, resembling the efflorescences of urticaria, but more diffuse, or the lesions of erythema multiforme. The spots at first are of a bright-red color, afterward becoming darker and violaceous, or mottled, yellowish, and pigmented. Discrete in the beginning, they afterward unite to form confluent patches bounded by gyrate borders. [G.]—D. herpeticiformis pustulosa [Duhring]. A variety differing from the vesicular and bullous forms in that the lesions are pustular and are attended with more markedly inflammatory areolæ. It may occur in annular forms, sometimes with concentric rings resembling those of herpes iris. [G.]—D. herpeticiformis vesiculosa [Duhring]. The most common form of d. herpeticiformis, characterized by vesicles varying in size from that of a pin-head to that of a pea, usually distended and unaccompanied by areolæ, often widely distributed over the body or a certain region, but with a tendency to form groups consisting of two, three, or more vesicles, which usually remain discrete, though they sometimes coalesce. Till they rupture they are attended with a severe itching, burning, or pricking sensation. [G.]—D. medicamentosa. D. due to the toxic action of a drug. [G.]—D. papillaris. Of Kaposi, a disease characterized by recurrent fibromata of the skin. [C. Heitzman, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Nov. 16, 1889, p. 549.]—D. papillaris capillitii. An inflammatory disease of the scalp characterized by an eruption of small papules, or by incrustated, secreting papillomatous growths, followed by scaly patches upon which the hair is either absent or appears atrophic, growing in scattered tufts. [G.]—D. perdecubitus. Ger., Durchliegen. Syn.: decubitus. Inflammation of the skin or of the deeper tissues due to prolonged pressure upon certain parts in patients long confined to bed; associated usually with a low state of vitality or with nervous disease. [G.]—Dermatitides phlegmonosæ. Ger., Hauptphlegmonen, tiefgreifende Hautentzündungen. In Auspitz's classification of skin diseases, the second order of the first class, embracing phlegmonous inflammations of the skin, viz.: "diffuse," "localized," and "engorgement" phlegmons. [G.]—D. polymorpha pruriginosa chronica. A pruriginous variety of the d. herpeticiformis of Duhring. [Brocq, "Mntsh. f. prakt. Dermat.," viii, 5, p. 224.]—D. repens [H. R. Crocker]. A creeping eczematous affection of the hand. [Mntsh. f. prakt. Dermat., 1888, No. 23, p. 1204.]—Dermatitides simplices. Ger., einfache Entzündungsprozesse der Haut. In Auspitz's classification, the first class, that of simple or uncomplicated inflammations of the skin, including dermatitides catarrhales and phlegmonosæ. [G.]—D. symptomatica. Erysipelas. [G.]—D. traumatica. D. due to mechanical injury. [G, 3.]—D. tuberosa. A d. characterized by the formation of tuberosus outgrowths. [R. W. Taylor, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Nov. 3, 1888, p. 477.]—D. variolosa. See Variolous RASH.—D. venenata. D. produced by ariol or poisonous agents. [G, 5.]—D. zoonotica. Inflammation of the skin due to infection with an animal poison. [G, 27.]—Exfoliative d. Lat., d. exfoliativa. Fr., dermatite exfoliatrice (2d def.). 1. Wilson's term for pityriasis rubra. [G, 1.] 2. Certain other affections characterized by exfoliation of the skin, but the precise nature of which, as well as their relation to each other, is undetermined. [G.] Cf. D. exfoliativa neonatorum, Recurring exfoliative d., Recurrent exfoliative ERYTHEMA, and Desquamative scarlatiniform ERYTHEMA.—Malignant papillary d. of the nipple. See Paget's DISEASE of the nipple.—Recurring exfoliative d. A disease described by L. D. Bulkley ["Arch. of Dermat.," iv, 1878, p. 227], in which recurring attacks of exfoliative d. affected the hands and feet.

DERMATOBIA (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-ob(o²b)-i²a-a². From δέρμα, the skin, and βίωiv, to live. Fr., dermatobie. A genus of the Estridae. [A, 321.]—D. noxialis. Fr., ver cacaque (ou moyoquil). Syn.: Estrus hominis. A species the eggs of which are deposited beneath the skin of man and other mammals, where the larvæ cause considerable local irritation. [L, 321.]

DERMATOBLASTÆE (Lat.), n. f. pl. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-bla²st(bla²st)-e²-e(a²e²). Of Kützing, a suborder of the Eremospermeæ, comprising the Ulvaceæ, Phycoserideæ, and Euteromorpheæ; subsequently comprising the Protodermaceæ, Ulvaceæ, Euteromorpheæ, Diplostomaceæ, and Dictyosporaceæ. [B, 170(a, 24).]

DERMATOCARPEUS (Lat.), adj. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-ka²rp(e²-u²s(u²s)). From δέρμα, the skin, and καρπός, a fruit. Fr., dermatocarpe. Ger., hauf Fruchtig. Having the gongyli disposed on a fructiferous membrane. The Dermatocarpa are an order of the Engastriocarpi, comprising the divisions Trichosperma, Gymnosperma, and Sarcosperma. The Dermatocarpeæ are: 1. Of Eschweiller, a cohort of Lichenes, consisting of Solarina, Dermatocarpon, Gyrophora, Endocarpon, Capitularia, and Peltidea. 2. Of Arnold, a tribe of the Endocarpaceæ, consisting of Dermatocarpon, Placidium, Catoprynum, and Lithoclea. The Dermatocarpi are: 1. Of Persoon, an order of the Angeiocarpi, comprising the divisions Trichospermi, Gymnospermi, and Sarcospermi. 2. Of Leman, a section of the Angeiocarpi, comprising Gymnosporangium, Puccinia, and Uredo. [B, 170(a, 24).]

DERMATOCELLULITIS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-se²l(ke²l)-lu²l(lu²l)-i(i²e)²i²s. Gen., dermatocellulitidos (-is). From δέρμα, the skin, and cellula, a cell (see also -itis²). Inflammation of the subcutaneous connective tissue. [G.]

DERMATOCHOLEOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-ka²l(ch²o²l)-o²i²s. Gen., dermatocholos²eos(-is). From δέρμα, the skin, and χολος, bile. See ICTERUS.

DERMATOCHYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o²ch²(o²ch²)²i²s(u²s)-i²s. Gen., dermatochys²eos(-och²yssis). From δέρμα, the skin, and χύσις, a pouring. Ger., Hautwassersucht. Dropsy of the skin. [G.]

DERMATOCRATIA (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-kra²t(kra²t)-i(i²e)²a². From δέρμα, the skin, and κρατειν, to control. See DERMATIATRIA.

DERMATODECTES (Lat.), n. m. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-de²kt(dak²y²tez(tas)). From δέρμα, the skin, and δέκτης, a biter. Fr., dermatodecte. Ger., D. A genus of the Acariæ, several species of which are found on the domesticated animals. [L, 196.]

DERMATODES (Lat.), adj. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-od²(ez(as)). See DERMATOID.

DERMATODYNIA (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-di²n(du²n)²i²a². From δέρμα, the skin, and ὀδύνη, pain. Fr., dermatodynie. See DERMATALGIA.

DERMATODYSCHROIA (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t-(a²t)-o(o²)-di²sch²(du²s)-kroi(ch²ro²i)²a². From δέρμα, the skin, dys, (see Dys-), and χροιά, coloration. Abnormal coloration of the skin. [G.]

DERMATOGEN, n. Du⁵rm/a²t-o-je²n. From δέρμα, the skin, and γεννᾶν, to produce. Fr., dermatogène. The layer of nascent epidermis (primary meristem) at the growing point of a stem, leaf, etc. [B, 231 (a, 24).]

DERMATOGRAPHY, n. Du⁵rm-a²t-o²g/ra²f-i². Lat., dermatographia (from δέρμα, the skin, and γράφειν, to write). Fr., dermatographie. See DERMATOLOGY.

DERMATOID, adj. Du⁵rm/a²t-oid. Gr., δερματοΐδης (from δέρμα, the skin, and εΐδος, resemblance). Lat., dermatoides. Fr., dermatoïde. Ger., hautartig. It., dermatoide. Sp., dermatoides. Resembling skin; in botany, having the consistence or thickness of leather or skin (said of some Fungi having a d. cap). [B, 121 (a, 21).]

DERMATOKERAS (Lat.), n. n. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²k'-e²r-a²s(a²s). Gen., dermatokeratos (-is). From δέρμα, the skin, and κέρασ, a horn. See CORNU cutaneum.

DERMATOLOGY, n. Du⁵rm-a²t-o²l'o-jī². Lat., dermatologia (from δέρμα, the skin, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., dermatologie. Ger., Dermatologie, Hautlehre. It., dermatologia. Sp., dermatología. The anatomy, physiology, pathology, etc., of the skin, the hair, and the nails.

DERMATOLYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²l'i²(u⁵-si²s). Gen., dermatolysos (-ol'ysis). From δέρμα, the skin, and λύσις, a loosening. Fr., dermatolyse. Ger., Ablösung der Haut. It., Sp., dermatolisis. Syn.: chalastodermia, cutis pendula, pachydermatocle. A form of abnormal growth of the skin usually affecting circumscribed areas, attended with the production of soft, loose, or pendulous folds of the integument, due to excessive development of the subcutaneous areolar tissue, and sometimes associated with hypertrophy of the entire skin, together with its appendages. The term has also been applied to a condition of extensibility and elasticity of the skin whereby the integument can be drawn out from the body in broad folds, which afterward subside on being released. [G.] Cf. FIBROMA cutis and ELEPHANTIASIS Arabum.

DERMATOMA (Lat.), n. n. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²ma². Gen., dermatomatos (-is). A tumor of the skin. [G.]

DERMATOMALACIA (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-ma²l'(ma²l')-a(a²)-si²(ki²)-a². From δέρμα, the skin, and μαλακία, softness. Fr., dermatomalacie. Ger., Hauterweichung. A softening of the skin. [L, 50.]

DERMATOMELASMA (Lat.), n. n. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-me²l'-a²z(a²s)'ma². See MELASMA.

DERMATOMYCETES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-mi(mu⁶)-se(ka)'tez(te²s). Of Reichenbach (1828), an order of Fungi, comprising the Gasteromyces and Hymenomyces; afterward (1837) the Sphaeriacei, Lyco-perdacei, and Hymenini, which families were adopted by Rabenhorst. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

DERMATOMYCOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-mi(mu⁶)-ko'si²s. Gen., dermatomycosos (-is). From δέρμα, the skin, and μύκησ, a fungus. Fr., dermatomycose. Ger., Dermatomykose. A disease of the skin dependent upon the growth of a vegetable parasite. In the pl., dermatomycoses, the 40th class in Auspitz's classification of skin diseases.—D. achorina. See FAVUS.—D. barbae nodosa. Ger., knötige Trichomykosis. See SYCOSIS parasitica.—D. circinata. See D. trichophytina.—D. diffusa. See FIMA imbricata.—D. favosa. Favus of the skin (not including favus of the hair or nails). [G.]—D. furfuracea. Fr., pitiriasis parasitaria, crusse parasitaire. Ger., Kleinflechte. It., pitiriasi versicolorata. Tinea versicolor; a parasitic disease of the epidermis due to the presence of the Microsporon furfur. It occurs in the form of round or irregularly shaped patches of a yellowish-brown, buff, or tawny color, sometimes slightly reddened by hyperæmia, and often attended with a slight furfuraceous desquamation. It is found most commonly upon the chest, abdomen, neck, axilla, arm, back, groin, or inner side of the thigh. The separate patches tend to coalesce, and may thus form discolored areas of large extent. [G, 4.]—D. maculo-vesiculosa. Ringworm of the body; ringworm affecting the general cutaneous surface, either in the form of dry, round, scaly spreading patches, or of gradually enlarging vesicular rings (herpes circinatus). [G, 4.] Cf. MYCOSIS trichophytina, HERPES tonsurans maculosus, and HERPES tonsurans vesiculosus.—D. marginata [Auspitz]. See ECZEMA marginatum.—D. palmellina [Pick]. A parasitic disease affecting the hairs of the axillæ, the chest, the backs of the hands, the inner surfaces of the thighs, and the pubes. According to Pick, it is characterized by the presence either of small oblong or rounded spores, occurring singly or in groups, or of zooglee which are adherent to the hairs. [Tagbl. d. deutsch. Naturforscherversammlung in Graz, '1875; (G).]—D. pustulosa. See IMPETIGO contagiosa.—D. tonsurans. See TINEA tonsurans.—D. trichophytina. Ringworm of the skin proper (not affecting the hair or nails), including d. maculo-vesiculosa, d. marginata, and d. diffusa. [G.] Cf. MYCOSIS trichophytina.

DERMATOMYOME (Fr.), n. De²rm-a²-to-me-om. From δέρμα, the skin, and μῦς, a muscle. A myoma of the skin. [A, 385 (a, 21).]

DERMATONEMATATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-ne²ma²'a²t(a²t)-a². Of Wallroth, a division of the Dermatophycei, comprising the subdivisions Arthonemata, Gryphonemata, and Trichonemata. [B, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

DERMATONEURIA (Lat.), DERMATONEUROSIS (Lat.), n's f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-nu²ri²-a², -nu²-ro'si²s. From δέρμα, the skin, and νεῦρον, a nerve. Fr., dermatoneurose. Ger., Hautnervenleiden. A neurosis of the skin. [A, 322 (a, 21).]—DERMATONEUROSIS indicatrix [Leloir]. A skin eruption due to a nervous disease, appearing as a forerunner of its graver manifestations and indicating disorder in some part of the nervous system, central or peripheral. ["Ann. de dermat. et de syphil.", x, 1889, No. 5; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Oct. 12, 1889, p. 418.]

DERMATONOSUS (Lat.), n. f. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²n'o²s-u²s(u²s). From δέρμα, the skin, and νόσος, disease. Ger., Dermatose, Hautkrankheit. Any disease of the skin; in the pl., dermatonosi (not dermatonoses), of Fuchs, idiopathic skin diseases. [G, 5.]—Neuropathic dermatonosi. Ger., neuropathisches Dermatosen. Cutaneous diseases of nervous origin, comprising Angeineuroses, Trophoneuroses, and Idioneuroses. [G.]

DERMATO-PATHOLOGY, n. Du⁵rm/a²t-o-pa²th-o²l'o-jī². Lat., dermatopathologia (from δέρμα, the skin, πάθος, disease, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., dermatopathologie. Ger., Dermatopathologie, Lehre von den Hautkrankheiten. The pathology of the skin. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DERMATOPATHY, n. Du⁵rm-a²t-o²p/a²th-i². Lat., dermatopathia (from δέρμα, the skin, and πάθος, disease). Fr., dermatopathie. Ger., Hautleiden. It., dermatopatia. Sp., dermatopatia. Any disease of the skin. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DERMATOPERISCLEROSIS (Lat.), DERMATOPERISCLERYSMUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-pe²r-i²-skle²r(sklar)-o'si²s, -i²z(u²s)'mu²s(mu²s). From δέρμα, the skin, and περισκληρύνειν, to harden throughout. Dryness and induration of the skin. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DERMATOPHAGUS (Lat.), n. m. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²f'-a²g(a²g)-u²s(u²s). From δέρμα, the skin, and φαγειν, to eat. A genus of the Acarina. [L, 183.]—D. bovis [Fürstenberg]. Syn.: Choriopsis spathiferus [Meguin], Symbiotes spathiferus, Symbiotes bovis (seu equi) [Gerlach]. A species parasitic upon horses and cows and occasionally upon man. [L, 183.]

DERMATOPHIL (Lat.), n. m. pl. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²f'-i²-i(e). From δέρμα, the skin, and φιλεῖν, to love. Ger., Haarbalgmilben. A family of the Acarina. [L, 340, 353.]

DERMATOPHON, n. Du⁵rm/a²t-o-fon. Ger., Dermatophon. A flexible stethoscope with a diaphragm of thin soft rubber stretched over the objective end; used in dermatophony (q. v.). [P. Guttman (A, 319).]

DERMATOPHONY, n. Du⁵rm-a²t-o²f'on-i². From δέρμα, the skin, and φωνή, a sound. Ger., Dermatophonie. Of Hüter and Voltolini, auscultation of the skin by means of the dermatophone, by which, it has been said, a murmur produced by the flow of blood in the cutaneous capillaries may be heard. [P. Guttman (A, 319).]

DERMATOPHTHALMUS (Lat.), n. m. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²f'-tha²'(tha²)'mu²s(mu²s). From δέρμα, the skin, and ὀφθαλμός, the eye. See LAGOPHTHALMUS.

DERMATOPHYMA (Lat.), n. n. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-fi(fu)²ma². Gen., dermatophymatos (-is). From δέρμα, the skin, and φύμα, a growth. Fr., dermatophyme. Ger., Hautgeschwulst. A cutaneous tumor. [G.]—D. venereum. See CONDYLOMA.

DERMATOPHYTA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Du⁵rm(de²rm)-a²t(a²t)-o²f'i²z(i²t)-a². From δέρμα, the skin, and φυτόν, a plant. 1. Vegetable cutaneous parasites. 2. Of Nitzsch, the appendages of the skin (feathers, horns, etc.). [L, 194.]

It is highly dextrorotary. [B, 3, 270 (a, 24).]

DEXTRE (Fr.), adj. De²x'tr. See DEXTRAL.

DEXTREN, adj. De²x'tre²n. Belonging to or connected with the right side. [L, 141.]

DEXTRIN, n. De²x'tri²n. Lat., dextrinum (from dexter, right, on account of its power of rotating the plane of polarization to the right). Fr., dextrine [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., D. Stärkegummi. It., dextrina. Sp., dextrina [Sp. Ph., Mex. Ph.]. Syn.: British gum, leicome. A carbohydrate, C₆H₁₀O₆, obtained from starch by the action of dilute acids, of diastase, and of animal ferments, and also by a dry heat of 200° C., according to some authors. It is an uncrystallizable, insipid, odorless, yellowish-white, brittle substance, soluble in water and in dilute alcohol, and precipitated as a hydrate from its solutions by strong alcohol. It is not colored blue by iodine, nor does it ferment by contact with yeast, nor yield any sugar to Frommer's test, if pure. By diastase it is converted into maltose, and by boiling with dilute acids it is converted into dextrose (or ordinary glucose) or, according to some, into maltose. There are several varieties of d. (erythrod', achrod', etc.), into which starch is converted by the action of animal ferments. A form of d. has been obtained by Musculus and von Meyer from glycogen which has a specific dextrorotary power of 131° to 134°. D. much resembles gum arabic, for which it is often used. [B, 2, 12, 77; B, 270 (a, 24).] See ERYTHROD' and ACHROD'.—Animal d. See GLYCOGEN.—Danmf' (Ger.). A sort of d. prepared by heating solution of starch to 150°. [B, 244 (a, 27).]—D. alcoholate. A pulverulent substance, C₆H₁₂O₁₄ + C₆H₁₀O₆. [Musculus and von Meyer, "Ztschr. f. phys. Chem.," v. p. 123 (B).]—D'verband (Ger.). A bandage stiffened with d. [L, 57].—Glycogen d. A form of d. produced by the action of ferments on glycogen. Two varieties have been described. It occurs in muscular tissue after death, from the conversion of the glycogen existing there during life. [B, 12, 13.]—Hepatic d. See GLYCOGEN.—Insoluble d. Of Musculus, a d. obtained by heating starch with acetic acid, soluble when digested with water at 100° C., and appearing, when evaporated, in the form of a yellowish powder resembling ordinary d. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xix (a, 21).]—Triacetyl d. Ger., Triacetyl'd. A compound, n(C₆H₇-

(C₂H₅O)₃O₆], of d. with acetic anhydride. It is an amorphous substance insoluble in glass and in alcohol, but soluble in acetic acid. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

DEXTRINA (Lat.), n. f. De²x-tri(tre)'na³. See DEXTRIN.—Mucilage dextrinæ [Gr. Ph.]. A solution of 100 parts of dextrin in 50 of boiling water, mixed afterward with 40 of cold water and 10 of tincture of camphor. [B, 95 (a, 14).]

DEXTRINÉ (Fr.), adj. De²x-tre-na. Containing dextrin. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DEXTRINIC, adj. De²x-tri²n'i²k. Fr., dextrinique. Of or pertaining to dextrin. [L, 41.]

DEXTRINUM (Lat.), n. n. De²x-tri(tre)'nu³m(nu³m). See DEXTRIN.

DEXTROCAMPHORIN, n. De²x-tro-ka³m'fo²r-i²n. Fr., dextro-camphorine. A dextrorotary glyceride formed by the action of camphoric acid on glycerin (by Bertholet's method) at 200° C. It is a neutral, viscous substance, soluble in ether, and decomposed by alkalis or metallic oxides, with the formation of an alkaline or metallic salt and glycerin. [B, 244 (a, 27).]

DEXTRCARDIE (Fr., Ger.), n. De²x-tro-ka³r-de, -de'. See DEXIACARDIA.

DEXTROCARVOL, n. De²x-tro-ca³r'vo²l. An oil, C₁₀H₁₄O, obtained by the fractional distillation of oil of caraway, of fennel, or of dill. [B, 3, 244 (a, 27).]

DEXTROGLUCOSE, n. De²x-tro-glu²'kos. See DEXTROSE.

DEXTROGYR, n. De²x'tro-jir. A dextrorotary substance. [a, 24.]

DEXTROGRATE, DEXTROGYRE, DEXTROGYROUS, adj's. De²x-tro-jir'rat, de²x'tro-jir, de²x-tro-jir'u³s. From dexter, on the right, and γῆρος, a twin. Fr., dextrogyre. See DEXTROROTARY.

DEXTRONIC ACID, n. De²x-tro²n'i²k. Fr., acide dextronique. A dibasic acid, C₆H₁₂O₇, isomeric with gluconic acid, derived from dextrin. [B, 2 (a, 24).]

DEXTRONIPIMARIC ACID, n. De²x-tro-pi²m-a²r'i²k. See under PIMARIC ACID.

DEXTRORSAL, DEXTRORSE, adj's. De²x-tro²rs'a²l, de²x'tro²rs. Lat., dextrorsus. Turning toward the right. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

DEXTROSE, n. De²x'tros. From dexter, right, on account of its dextrorotary power. Ger., D. Glucose. [B.]—D.-sulphuric. Sulphuric and containing glucose. [B.]—D.-sulphuric acid. Ger., Dextrose-Schwefelsäure. See SULPHOGLUCIC ACID.

DEXTROTARTARIC ACID, n. De²x-tro-ta³r-ta³r'i²k. Fr., acide dextrotartrique. Ger., Rechtswenigsäure. Dextrorotary (ordinary) tartaric acid. [B.]

DEXTROVERSION, n. De²x-tro-²vu⁶r'zhu³n. From dexter, to the right, and vertere, to turn. The state of being inclined to the right side (said of the uterus when its fundus is so directed).

DEXTRVOLUBILIS (Lat.), adj. De²x-tro(tro²)-vo²l(wo²)-u²l'u²bi²l'i²s. From dexter, to the right, and volvere, to turn. Fr., dextrovolubile. See DEXTROSE.

DEYAMITTIN, n. Di-a²m-i²tu²n. A neutral crystalline substance, C₁₃H₂NO₃, obtained by Flückiger, along with buxine, from Cissampelos pareira. [B, 2, 5 (a, 24).]

DEYNGAN, n. The Cordia Macleodii. [B, 172 (a, 24).]

DFÖRMIG (Ger.), adj. Da'fu⁶rm-i²g. See DELTOID.

DIABETES (Lat.), n. m. Di(di²)-a²b(a²b)-et(at)'ez(as). Gr., διαβήτης (from διαβαίνω, to pass through). Fr., diabète. Ger., D. Harnrühr. It., diabete. Sp., d. A morbid condition characterized by the habitual secretion of an excessive amount of urine. When the term is used without qualification, it is usually understood to mean d. mellitus (q. v.).—Acute d. Fr., diabète aigu. A form of d. mellitus in which a large quantity of sugar suddenly appears in the urine, and as suddenly disappears. The phenomenon has usually a nervous or morbid cause. [K].—Alternating d. Fr., diabète alternant. A form of d. mellitus which alternates with some other disease, especially with gout or rheumatism. Rayer mentions cases in which the urine at one time contained sugar and at another was loaded with uric acid. [K].—Arthritic d. See Gouty d.—Artificial d. Fr., diabète artificiel. D. mellitus produced in animals by puncture of the floor of the fourth ventricle of the brain or by poisoning with woorara. [K].—Cerebral d. D. mellitus occurring in individuals suffering from some cerebral lesion, such as cerebral hæmorrhages, causing paralysis of various kinds. [Durand-Fardel (a, 18)].—Cerebro-spinal d. D. caused by disease of the brain and spinal cord. [a, 18].—Chylous d. Fr., diabète chyleux. D. associated with chyluria. [D, 74].—Climacteric d. A term that has been applied to d. showing itself in apparent connection with the menopause. [L. Tait, "Practitioner," June, 1886, p. 401].—Conjugal d. D. occurring simultaneously in a husband and wife; a condition observed by Debove in 10 per cent. of a series of 50 patients. By Lecorché this coincidence was thought due to the fact that these couples had had the same defective alimentation, or else had shared a common anxiety; by Debove it was ascribed to either chance, contagion, or unknown causes. ["Lancet," Aug. 24, 1889, p. 408 (a, 17)].—Consecutive d. D. developed during the course of a chronic disease having a tendency to cachexia. [Durand-Fardel (a, 18)].—Curable d. Temporary or transient d. [a, 18].—Curare d. Glycosuria due to the toxic action of curare. [L, 57 (a, 18)].—D. anglicus. See D. mellitus.—D. decipiens. D. characterized by saccharine urine without increase in the quantity of urine. [L, 57 (a, 18)].—D. gastroenterogenes. D. mellitus dependent on gastro-intestinal disease. [A, 326].—D. hepatogenes. Fr., diabète du foie. D. mellitus dependent on disease of the liver. [D, 326].—D. inositus. A form of d. in which inosite takes the place of grape-sugar. [D, 3].—D. insipidus. See POLYURIA.—D. mellitus. Fr., diabète sucré. Ger., Zuckerharühr. It., diabete mellito (o zucarino). Sp., d. sacarina. Syn.: glycosuria mellitica. A disease characterized by the secretion of an excessive amount of urine containing sugar, causing emaciation, thirst, and dryness of the skin, and usually ending in death, either by exhaustion or in an attack of coma. In many cases there is a tendency to ulcerative and gangrenous affections of the skin. The pathology is various, the primary diseased action taking place in the brain, the liver, or some other organ.—D. neurogenes. An affection of the brain or certain nerves, sometimes resulting in d. mellitus. [A, 326 (a, 21)].—D. spurius. See POLYURIA.—D. traumaticus. Glycosuria from traumatism of the nervous system, as in concussion of the brain. ["Arch. f. path. Anat. u. Phys. u. f. klin. Med.," xiii, p. 93 (a, 18)].—D. verus. See D. mellitus.—D.-weed. The Actinomeris helianthoides. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxix (a, 21)].—Diathetic d. D. of indefinite duration depending upon some deep-seated vitiation of nutrition, and distinguished from that due to pregnancy, lactation, or traumatism of the nervous system. [Durand-Fardel (a, 18)].—Emaciating d. Fr., diabète maigre. Of Lancereaux, d. in patients who were spare at the beginning of the disease, and who have some alteration of the pancreas leading to the suppression of the functions of that gland. It is usually of rapid course. [L, 87 (a, 18)].—English d. Lat., d. anglicus. See D. mellitus.—Fatty d. Fr., diabète gras. Of Lancereaux, a disease of which the first phase is obesity without polyuria or glycosuria, these symptoms appearing later and being accompanied by polydipsia and polyphagia, which begin insidiously. The course of the disease is slow, often irregular. The cause is unknown. [a, 18].—Gastro-enterogenes d. D. originating by reflex action, from disease of some portion of the gastro-intestinal tract. [L, 57 (a, 18)].—Gouty d. Fr., diabète goutteux. A form of d. occurring in robust subjects living luxuriously. Such patients are usually obese, and show other signs of having an arthritic diathesis, such as rheumatism, gout, gravel, asthma, etc. [a, 18].—Hepatic d. Fr., diabète hépatique. D. mellitus occurring coincidentally with some affection of the liver. [a, 18].—Hydruric d. A d. in which the elimination of water alone (in the urine) is in excess, without augmentation of the solid principles of the urine. [a, 18].—Hysterical d. The polyuria of hysteria.—Intermittent d. Fr., diabète intermittent. That form of d. which disappears at times, and then recurs again. The urine during digestion is saccharine, while that of other periods is not. [Med.-Chir. Trans., xxxvi, p. 401 (D, 1).]—Irritating d. Fr. diabète irritatif. Of Schiff, artificial d. produced by a lesion of the medulla oblongata or the spinal cord. [L, 41 (a, 18).]—Latent d. Fr. diabète latent. D. which exhibits a longer or shorter period before sugar is discovered in the urine. [D, 74.]—Lipogenic d. A disease of fat persons characterized by transient glycosuria resulting from the diminished power of the fat-infiltrated muscle cells to convert sugar into glycogen; it is not infrequently followed by true d. [Am. Jour. of the Med. Sci., June, 1888, p. 625 (a, 21).]—Morphine d. A form of d. sometimes observed after the administration of large doses of morphine, which are supposed to act directly upon the diabetetic centre in the medulla oblongata. [K.]—Mosler's d. Of Mosler, polyuria supposed to be caused by the presence of an excess of inosine in the blood. [a, 18.]—Muscular d. D. due to deficient glyco-genic function of the muscles. [Zimmer (a, 18).]—Natural d. See Primitive d.—Non-saccharine d. See POLYURIA.—Pancreatic d. Of Lancereaux, d. with rapid progress, characterized by loss of strength, great thirst, polyphagia, violent epigastric pain, wasting, and loss of sexual desire, with at first diurnal, and afterward, also, nocturnal polyuria, atrophy of the pancreas, and partial atrophy of the pancreatic duct, phthisis developing at the apices of both lungs, and death occurring with a low axillary temperature. [Lancet, May 19, 1888, p. 995 (a, 21).]—Paralytic d. Fr. diabète paralytique. Of Schiff, permanent glycosuria produced by section of the anterior columns of the spinal cord at or above the level of the fourth cervical vertebra, which causes, among other phenomena, paralysis of the vaso-motor nerves of the liver. [L, 41 (a, 18).]—Periodic d. Fr. diabète périodique. See Intermittent d.—Phosphatic d. [Teissier]. A morbid condition characterized by the continuous excretion of excessive amounts of phosphates in the urine, with symptoms somewhat like those of d. mellitus. [C. H. Ralfe, "Lancet," Feb. 26, 1887, p. 411.]—Primitive d. Fr. diabète primitif. Of Lécocché, d. mellitus which is not dependent on any local alteration, but develops from general causes. It is the common form of d. [L, 87 (a, 18).]—Puncture-d. Ger. Stichdiabetes. Artificial d. produced by puncture of the floor of the fourth ventricle. [K.]—Saccharine d. See D. mellitus.—Symptomatic d. Of Lécocché, d. due to a lesion of the nervous system or the liver or to gout or syphilis. [a, 18.]—Syphilitic d. D. mellitus due to syphilis, either to a syphilitic cerebral neoplasm or to the general influence of syphilis on the organism.—True d. See D. mellitus.—Ureal d. Fr. diabète par excès d'urée. D. attributed to an excessive formation of urea. [D, 74.]

DIABETIC, adj. Di-a²-be²t'i²k. Lat., diabeticus. Fr., diabétique. Ger., diabetisch. Pertaining to or of the nature of diabetes; as a n., a person affected with diabetes.

DIABÉTIDE (Fr.), n. De-a²-ba-ted. A local lesion occurring as a manifestation of diabetes mellitus. [Quéhery, Thèse de Paris, Dec. 24, 1884.]

DIABÉTIQUE (Fr.), adj. De-a²-bat-ek. Pertaining to diabetes; as a n., a person suffering from diabetes. [A, 385 (a, 21).]—Alcoolo-d. A person suffering from alcoholism and diabetes. [Verneuil (a, 18).]

DIABETOMETER, n. Di-a² be²-o²m'e²t-u²r. From διαβήτης, diabetes, and μέτρον, a measure. Fr., diabétomètre. An instrument for estimating the quantity of sugar in a given specimen of diabetetic urine. Polariscopes especially constructed for the purpose have been used upon the principle that a saccharine fluid always rotates polarized light, and that the amount of rotation is in exact proportion to the density of the solution. The instrument shown in the cut belongs to the class of "half-shade" polariscopes. The mechanism for sensitiveness is arranged to produce a circular field of vision divided into halves, which in certain positions of an analyzing Nicol prism are unequally illuminated, but exhibit in one position a uniformly faint shade; this latter position is taken as the point of reference. To prevent confusion, a monochromatic light is employed, obtained by burning a piece of salt in a Bunsen jet. To use the d., the operator first adjusts the point of reference by allowing the polarized light to pass through the tube (C), previously filled with distilled water, rotating the Nicol prism by means of the independent regulator (O) until the field of vision is evenly lighted (Fig. 2); he then substitutes for the tube of water one containing the saccharine urine. This darkens the field of vision, as in Fig. 4. The inequality is then rectified by manipulating the graduated disc (G) previously adjusted at zero. Any inaccuracy will cause the other half of the field to become darkened (Fig. 2). After rectification, the new position of the disc indicates the amount of sugar in the urine, each division of the scale representing 1 gramme to a litre. [F. R. Cruise, "Dub. Jour. of Med. Sci.," vol. lxxxii, p. 497 (a, 25).]

DIABETOPHTHISIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a²(a²)-be²t(bat)-o²t-(o²f)²i²s(thi²s)-i²s. Gen., diabetophthis'eos (-oph'thisis). For deriv., see DIABETES and PHTHISIS. Fr., diabétophthisié. Ger., Harnruhrschwinducht. Syn.: tabes diabetica. Diabetic phthisis. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DIABLE (Fr.), n. De-a²b'l. The devil.—Bruit de d. See under BRUIT.—D.-au-corps. A form of hysteria accompanied by continual hiccough. [L, 49, 87.]—D.-de-mer. The Laminaria saccharina. [B, 121, 173 (a, 24).]—D. en haie. The Clematis vitalba and Aristolochia clematitis. [L, 41 (a, 21).]

DIABLOS, n. The Clavaria coralloides. [B, 121, 173 (a, 24).]

DIABLOTIN (Fr.), n. De-a²-blo-ta²n². A certain pastille said to be aphrodisiac. [A, 301 (a, 21).]—D's d'Italie. Pastilles having for their chief ingredient powdered cantharides. [A, 301 (a, 21).]—D's stimulants. Pastilles said to be aphrodisiac; made of 500 parts of sugar, 12 of mastic, 8 of saffron, 4 each of musk and cloves, 2 each of ginger and ambergris, and a sufficient quantity of infusion of Chamaedrys maritima. [L, 87 (a, 21).]

DIABOLOTARACHE (Lat.), DIABOLOTHORYBOS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Di(di²)-a²b(a²b)²/o²l-o²(o²)-ta²r(ta²r)/a²k(a²ch²e)-e²(a), -tho²r'i²b(u²b)-o²s. From διάβολος, the devil, and ταραχή or θόρυβος, confusion, uproar. See Bruit de diable.

DIABOLUS (Lat.), n. m. Di(di²)-a²b(a²b)²/o²l-n²s(u²s). Gr., διάβολος. Fr., diable. Ger., Teufel. The devil.—Diaboli intestina. See DEVIL'S-GUTS.—D. metallorum. An alchemical term for tin. [A, 518; L, 94.]

DIABOTANON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-bo²t/a²n(a²n)-o²n(on). Gr., (ἐμπλαστρον) διά βοτανών, a plaster made from plants. Ger., Kräuterpfaster. Of Galen, a certain resolvent plaster made of many herbs. [A, 518; L, 41, 50, 87, 94, 98 (a, 21).]

DIABROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a²-bro²/s'i²s. Gen., diabros'eos (-is). Gr., διάρρσις. Fr., diabrose. See ANABROSIS.

DIABROTIC, adj. Di-a²-bro²t'i²k. Lat., diabroticus. Fr., diabrotique. Ger., ätzend. See ANABROTIC.

DIACADMIAS (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka²d(ka²d)-mi-(me)²/a²s(a²s). Gr., (ἐμπλαστρον) διά καδμείας. Fr., diacadmie. Of Scribonius Largus, a certain plaster the base of which was cadmia. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACALAMINTHES (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka²l(ka²l)-a²-mi²nth(ez)(as). Gr., (ἀντιδοτον) διά καλαμίνθης. Of Myrepsus, an antidote the base of which was calament. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACANTHOS, adj. Di-a²k-a²nth/u²s. Lat., diacanthus (from διά, twice, and ἀκανθα, a spine). Fr., diacanthé. Ger., zweidörnig. Having two spines under each leaf. [A, 301 (a, 21).]

DIACARCINON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka²r'(si²n)(ki²n)-o²n(on). Gr., (ἀντιδοτον) διά καρκινών. Fr., diacarcinon. Of Galen, an antidote against rabies, made from the crab. [L, 41, 50, 94, 109 (a, 21).]

DIACARTHAMU (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka²rth/a²m-(a²m)-u²(u). Gr., (φάρμακον) διά κάρθαμον. Fr., diacarthame. An old purgative tablet or electuary containing carthamum-seeds. [L, 32, 41, 87 (a, 21).]

DIACARYON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka(ka²)²/ri²(ru²)-o²n(on). Gr., (φάρμακον) διά καρών. An old extract made from green nuts and honey. [A, 518.]—Rob d. See Rob nucum (under NUX).

DIACASSIAS (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka²s(ka²s)/si²-a²s-(a²s). Gr., (φάρμακον) διά κασσίας. Fr., diacasse. An old purgative electuary having cassia as the basis. [L, 41 (a, 21).]—D. cum manna. See Confectio CASSIÆ.

DIACASTORIUM (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka²s(ka²s)-to-(to²)²/ri²-u²(u). Gr., (ἀντιδοτον) διά καστόριον. An old antidote of which castoreum was the principal ingredient. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACATHOLICON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-ka²th(ka²th)-o²l'i²k-o²n(on). Gr., (φάρμακον) διά καθολικόν. An old purgative electuary containing rhubarb and various aromatics. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACAUSIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a²-ka²/(ka²u²)-si²s. Gen., diacaus'eos (-is). From διά, thoroughly, and καύσις, a burning. Fr., diacausie. Ger., starkes Brennen. 1. A severe burn, deep cauterization. 2. A great heat of the body. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DIACAUSTIC, adj. Di-a²-ka²st'i²k. Lat., diacausticus. Fr., diacaustique. Ger., diacaustisch. Very caustic. [L, 41, 50, 56 (a, 21).]

DIACENOS (Lat.), adj. Di(di²)-a²s(a²k)/e²n-o²s. From διακενής, vain, empty. Empty (said of porous bodies, such as sponge or pumice-stone). [L, 94.]

DIACERATON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a²-se²r'(ke²r)/a²t-(a²t)-o²n(on). Gr., (κολλύριον) διά κεράτων. Of Celsus, a collyrium consisting chiefly of hartshorn. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACETALDANE, n. Di-a²s-e²-a²l'dan. Of Riban, crotonic aldehyde, which may be considered as formed by the condensation of 2 molecules of acetic aldehyde with the elimination of 1 molecule of water. [a, 24.] See ALDANE.

DIACETAMIDE, n. Di-a²s-e²t/a²m-i²d(i²d). Fr., diacétamide. An acetyl substitution compound, (C₂H₃O)₂NH, of ammonia.

DIACETATABRENCATECHIN (Ger.), n. De-a³ts-e²t-a³t-bre²ntz-ka³t-e²-ch²en'. Diacetylpyrocatechin. [B.]

DIACETATE, n. Di-a³s'e²t-at. Fr., diacétate. Ger., Diacetat. The second of a series of similar acetates. [A, 24.]

DIACETATRESORCIN (Ger.), n. De-a³ts-e²t-a³t-re²z-o²r-tsen'. Diacetylresorcin. [B.]

DIACETIC ACID, n. Di-a³s-et'i²k. Ger., Diacetsäure. A dense, colorless liquid, of very acid reaction, sometimes found in diabetic urine, where its presence is of grave import. Urine containing it is reddened by the addition of ferric chloride. It may be obtained by the prolonged treatment of acetic ether with a weak solution of potash, acidulating with sulphuric acid, agitating with ether, etc. [H. C. Coe, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 28, 1888, p. 88; a, 27.]

DIACETIN, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²n. Glyceryl diacetate; a liquid, C₉H₁₇(OH)(C₂H₅O)₂, derived from glycerin by the substitution of 2 molecules of the acetic acid radicle for 2 molecules of hydroxyl. [B, 4 (a, 24).]

DIACETOTARTARIC ACID, n. Di-a³s'e²t-o-ta³r-ta³r'i²k. Normal ethyl tartrate. [B, 3 (a, 27).]

DIACETOXYL, n. Di-a³s-e²t-o²x'i²l. A bivalent radicle consisting of a double molecule of acetoxy, (C₂H₃O)₂. [B, 4.]—D'harnstoff (Ger.). Diacetylurea. [B.]

DIACETSÄURE (Ger.), n. De-a³ts-at'zoi²e². See DIACETIC ACID.

DIACETURIA (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³s(a³k)-e²t-u²(u²ri²-a³. Fr., diacéturie. Ger., Diaceturie. The condition in which the urine contains diacetic acid. [A, 27.]

DIACETYL, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l. A double molecule of acetyl, (C₂H₃O)₂. [B, 4.]

DIACETYLAPOSEUDACONINE, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l-a³p-o-su³d-a³k'o²n-en. A 2-molecule acetyl substitution compound of aposeudaconine, C₂₇H₃₉(C₂H₃O)₂N₂O₈; prepared by heating pseudaconine with acetic anhydride. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxvii, p. 510 (a, 27).]

DIACETYLCODEINE, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l-kod-e'en. A crystalline base, C₂₈H₄₆N₂O₈ = C₂₈H₄₀(C₂H₃O)₂N₂O₈, formed by the action of glacial acetic acid on codeine. [B, 2.]

DIACETYLENE, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l-en. Fr., diacétylène. Ger., Diacetylen. A polymeric modification of acetylene, C₄H₄; a very volatile, alliaceous liquid, formed by heating acetylene to 50° C. [B, 2; B, 244 (a, 27).]

DIACETYLMORPHINE, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l-mo²r'f'en. A substance, C₃₂H₅₈(C₂H₃O)₂N₂O₈, of which there are two isomeric modifications formed by the action of glacial acetic acid or of acetic anhydride on morphine. [B, 2.]

DIACETYLPYROCATECHIN, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l-pl-ro-ka³t'e²-i²n. Ger., Diacetatabrencatechin. An acetyl substitution product of pyrocatechin, C₈H₆(O.C₂H₃O)₂. [B, 4.]

DIACETYLRESORCIN, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l-re²z-o²r'si²n. Ger., Diacetatesresorcin. Resorcin diacetate, C₈H₄(O.C₂H₃O)₂ = C₁₀H₁₀O₄, isomeric with diacetylpyrocatechin and forming a colorless oily liquid. [B, 4.]

DIACETYLUREA, n. Di-a³s'e²t-i²l-u²-re'a³. Ger., Diacetoxylharnstoff. An acetyl substitution product of urea, CO₂H₂(C₂H₃O)₂ = C₆H₈N₂O₃. [B, 4.]

DIACHENIUM (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³k(a³ch²)-en'(a³e²n)-i²-u²m(u²m). From dis, twice as ACHENIUM. Fr., diachène. Ger., Doppelachäne, Zwillingsachäne. A fruit formed of two achænia. [B, 77, 121, 123 (a, 24).]

DIACHALASIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³-ka²l(ch²a³l)-a³-si²s. Gen., diachalasis (-chalasis). From διαχάλαω, to slacken. Fr., diachalasié. Ger., Auseinandergehen. Separation; the formation of a fissure. [E, 24.]

DIACHALASMA (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-ka³l(ch²a³l)-a³z(a³s)-ma³. Gen., diachalasmatos (-is). Gr., διαχάλασμα. Ger., Trennung, Spalte. A hiatus, separation, cleft. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

DIACHALASTICUS (Lat.), adj. Di(di²)-a³-ka²l(ch²a³l)-a³s-(a³s)'ti²k-u²s(u²s). Arising from or dependent on a diachalasma. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DIACHALCITU (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-ka²l(ch²a³l)-si²(ket)'u²(u). Gr., (ἐμπλαστρον) διὰ χαλκίτου. A modification of the emplastrum diapalma containing colcothar instead of zinc sulphate. [L, 41 (a, 21).]

DIACHEIRISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Di(di²)-a³-kir(ch²e²-i²r)-i²z-(i²s)'mu²s(mu²s). Gr., διαχειρισμός. Fr., diacheirisme. Any manual operation, especially the art of preparing medicines. [A, 325 (a, 21).]

DIACHELIDONON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-ke²l(ch²e²l)-i²z'o²n'o²n(on). Gr., (φάρμακον) διὰ χελιδόνων. An ancient medicinal preparation made of swallows. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACHELPFLASTER (Ger.), n. De-a³ch²e²l'pfla³st-e²r. See Emplastrum PLUMBI.—Zusammengesetztes D. See Emplastrum GALBANI.

DIACHENIUM (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-ken(ch²a³n)'i²-u²m(u²m). See DIACHENIUM.

DIACHOREMA (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-kor(ch²or)-e(a)'ma³. Gen., diachorem'atos (-is). Gr., διαχόρημα. Fr., diachorème. Excrement. [A, 387.]

DIACHORESIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³-kor(ch²or)-e(a)'si²s. Gen., diachores'eos (-is). Gr., διαχόρησις. Fr., diachorèse. Ger., Kothgang. The excretion of excrementitious matter. [A, 325 (a, 21); L, 50.]

DIACHORETIC, adj. Di-a³-kor-e²t'i²k. Gr., διαχωρητικός. Lat., diachoreticus. Fr., diachorétique. Ger., abführend. Laxative. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DIACHOROPSORIASIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³-kor(ch²or)'o²-(o²)-sor(chor)-i²-a(a³)'si²s. Gen., diachoropso²riasis'eos (-is). From διαχόρησις, to pass through, and ψωρίασις (see PSORIASIS). Ger., ausbreitende Schuppenflechte. Diffuse psoriasis. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DIACHRISIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³-kri(ch²r)'si²s. Gen., diachris'eos (-is). From διά, thoroughly, and χρῖσις, inunction. Thorough inunction. [A, 387.]

DIACHRISMA (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-kri²z(ch²r'i²s)'ma³. Gen., diachris'matos (-is). Gr., διάχρισμα. An ointment. [A, 387.]

DIACHRISTA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Di(di²)-a³-kri²st(ch²r'i²st)'a³. Gr., διαχρίσται. Certain ancient detensive preparations to be applied to the uvula, tongue, palate, fauces, etc. [A, 325 (a, 21); L, 94.]

DIACHYLON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-k(a³ch²)'i²(u²l)-o²n(on). Gr., (φάρμακον) διὰ χυλίων. Fr., d. Ger. D. Il., diachilonne. Sp., diacuilon. 1. Acently, a mucilaginous mixture used in the preparation of salves and plasters. [A, 319 (a, 21).] 2. See Emplastrum PLUMBI.—Compound d., D. compositum, D. cum gummi. Fr., d. composé, d. gommé. Ger., Zusammengesetztes Diachelpflaster. See Emplastrum GALBANI.—D. magnum. See Greater d.—D. magnum cum gummi. See Emplastrum GALBANI.—D. ointment. See Unguentum d.—D. plaster. See Emplastrum PLUMBI.—D'salbe (Ger.). See Unguentum d.—D. simplex. Fr., d. simple. See Emplastrum PLUMBI.—D. sur toile. See Sparadrap d. gommé.—Emplastrum d. compositum, Emplâtre d. gommé [Fr. Cod.] (Fr.), Great d. with gums. See Emplastrum GALBANI.—Greater d. Lat., d. magnum. An old preparation of various mucilages and vegetable juices with rosin and yellow wax. [L, 94 (a, 21).]—Onguent d. (Fr.), Pommade de d. (Fr.). See Unguentum d.—Simple d. See Emplastrum PLUMBI.—Sparadrap cum diachylo gummato, Sparadrap gommé [Fr. Cod.] (Fr.). A preparation consisting of the emplâtre d. gommé of the Fr. Cod. melted and spread on linen. [B, 113 (a, 21).]—Unguentum d. [U. S. Ph. G. Ph.]. Fr., onguent d., pommade de d. Ger., Diachylonsalbe. It., unguento di diachilon. Sp., ungüento de diacuilon. D. ointment; made by melting together 60 parts of lead-plaster, 39 parts of olive-oil, and 1 part of oil of lavender [U. S. Ph.]; or by mixing equal parts of lead-plaster and olive-oil [Ger. Ph.], or equal parts of lead-plaster and linseed-oil [Ger. Ph., 1872]. [B, 81 (a, 21).]

DIACHYMA (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³k(a³ch²)'i²(u²l)-ma³. Gen., diachym'atos (-is). From διά, through, and χύμα, juice. Fr., diachyme. Ger., Blattmark. The parenchyma of leaves. [B, 19, 77, 121 (a, 24).]

DIACHYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³k(a³ch²)-i²(u²l)-si²s. Gen., diachys'eos (-achysis). Gr., διάχυσις. Fr., diachyse. Ger., flüssige Verbreitung. Effusion, diffusion, liquefaction, fusion, resolution. [L, 41, 50, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACHYTIC, adj. Di-a³-ki²t'i²k. Gr., διαχυτικός. Lat., diachyticus. Fr., diachylique. Discutient, resolvent. [L, 41, 84, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACHYTIS, n. The Delphinium Ajacis. [B, 88.]

DIACHYTON (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³k(a³ch²)'i²(u²l)-o²n. Gr., διαχύντον. Of Pliny, a kind of must or sweet wine. [A, 318.]

DIACHYTOPHLOGOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³k(a³ch²)'i²(u²l)-o²(o²)-flo(flo²)-go'si²s. Gen., diachytophlogos'eos (-is). From διαχύνω, to expand, and φλόγωσις, inflammation. Fr., diachytophlogose. Ger., zerstreute Entzündung. Diffuse inflammation. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DIACHYTOS (Lat.), n. m. Di(di²)-a³k(a³ch²)'i²(u²l)-o²s. See DIACHYTON.

DIACID, adj. Di-a³s'i²d. From dis, twice, and acidus, acid. Having an acidity of two; of an acid or acid salt, containing 2 atoms of replaceable hydrogen, of a base capable of replacing 2 atoms of hydrogen in an acid. [a, 24.]

DIACINNAMOMU (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-si²n(ki²n)-a³-mo'mu²(mu). Gr., (αντίδοτον) διὰ κιννάμωμον. Of Myrsene, a certain antidote consisting chiefly of cinnamon. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACINEMA (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-si²n(ki²n)-e(a)'ma³. Gen., diacinem'atos (-is). Gr., διακίνημα. A dislocation. [E.]

DIACLASIA (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³-kla(kla³)'zi²(si²)-a³. From διακλάω, to break in two. Fr., diaclasses. An abandoned method of amputation devised by Maisonneuve, consisting in first breaking the bone and then dividing the soft parts with an écraseur. [A, 518; L, 49.]

DIACLASIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³k(a³k)'la²s(la³)-i²s. Gen., diacلاس'eos (-ac'lasis). Gr., διακλασις. Fr., diaclasses, diaclasses. Ger., Lichtbrechung. See REFRACTION.

DIACLAST, n. Di-a³-kla³st. From διακλάω, to break in pieces.

Of L. D. Harlow, a screw-perforator for craniotomy. ["Am. Jour. of the Med. Sci.," 1862, 1, p. 281 (a, 25).]

DIACLASTIC, adj. Di-a³-kla³st'i²k. Lat., diaclasticus. Fr., diaclastique. Ger., diaclastisch. Pertaining to or dependent on refraction. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

DIACLYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³k(a³k)'li²s(lu²s)-i²s. Gen., diaclys'eos (-ac'lysis). Gr., διάκλυσις. See DIACLYSMUS.

DIACLYSMA (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-k²i²z(klu⁶s)/ma³. Gen., diaclysmatos (-is). Gr., διακλύσμα. Ger., Mundspülwasser. A mouth-wash or gargle. [Dioscorides (A, 387).]

DIACLYSMUS (Lat.), n. m. Di(di²)-a³-k²i²z(klu⁶s)/mu³s(mu⁴s). Gr., διακλύσμος (from διακλύζειν, to rinse). The act of washing out the mouth or throat. [A, 387.]

DIACOCYMELON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-ko²k-si²-2(ku⁶)-me(ma)lo²n(lon). Gr., (φάρμακον) διά κοκκυμηλῶν. See DIAPAUNON.

DIACOCYLACON (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-ko²k(ko²ch²)-la³-ko²n(kon). Gr., (φάρμακον) διά κοχλαχῶν. An old sudorific consisting of milk in which red-hot flints had been quenched. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACODIE (Ger.), n. De-a³-kod-e'. See DIACODION.—D'n-syrup. See Syrupus PAPAVERIS.

DIACODION (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-kod-i(e)'o²n(on), -kod'i²-o²n(on). Gr., (φάρμακον) διά κωδείων. Fr., diacode. Ger., Diacodie, Diakodium, Mohnkopfsyrup. It., diacodio. Sp., diacodion. An old form of syrup of poppy-heads. The modern French preparation consists of 1 part of extract of opium, 9 parts of distilled water, and 1,990 parts of syrup. [A, 518; L, 50, 94 (a, 21).]—Confectio d. See Syrupus PAPAVERIS.—D. liquidum, Syrupus d. See Syrupus PAPAVERIS.—Syrupus d. crotacum, Syrupus d. sirop diacode safranē. Of theWürt. Ph., 1798, syrup of d. with saffron; made with equal parts of syrup of d. and powdered saffron. [B, 119 (a, 21).]—Syrupus d. liquidum Montani. See Syrupus PAPAVERIS.

DIACODIUM (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-kod-i(e)'u³m(u⁴m), -kod'i²-u³m(u⁴m). See DIACODION.

DIACOLE, n. Di-a³-sel. Lat., diacolia (from διά, through, and κολία, a cavity). 1. Of F. G. Wilder, the third ventricle of the brain. [I, 80.] 2. The cavity of the diencephalon. [“Proc. of the Zool. Soc.” 1887, p. 31 (L).]

DIACCELOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Di(di²)-a³-sel(ko²-el)-os'i²s. Gen., diacellosis (-is). From διά, through, and κελος, hollow. 1. See CANALIZATION (1st def.). 2. The filling up of the original coelome, or body cavity, of the Hirudinea by connective tissue. [Bourne (J).]

DIACOLOCYNTHIDOS (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Di(di²)-a³-ko²-o-2(o²)-si²nth(ku⁶nth)'i²d-o²s. Gr., (φάρμακον) διά κολοκυνθίδος. Fr., diacolocynthide. It., diacolocintido. Sp., diacolocintido. An old drastic electuary of which colocynth was the chief ingredient. [A, 301 (a, 21); L, 94 (a, 21).]—Pilulae d. Pills containing 2 drachms each of aloes, colocynth, scammony, bdellium, black hellebore, and gum arabic, and 1 drachm each of euphorbium and nitre. [L, 94 (a, 21).]

DIACOMMA (Lat.), n. n. Di(di²)-a³-ko²m'ma³. Gen., diacommatos (-is). Gr., διάκομμα. Of Hippocrates, something cut away or cut off. [A, 325 (a, 21).]

DIACONIC ACID, n. Di-a³-k-o²n'i²zk. Fr., acide diaconique. An acid, C₁₂H₁₀O₁₂, derived from citric acid. [A, 385 (a, 21).]
